

DELHI UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

DELHI UNIVERSITY LIBRARY SYSTEM

CI NO. 605503 - bate of chiefe of the

This book should be returned on or before the date last stamped below. An overdue charge of 10 np. will be charged for each day the book is kept overtime.

Lawlaka lama khalaqtul aflak,... Wa lawlaka lama azhartu ilayahi rububiyati

"If it were not for thee. I would not have created the heavens and manifested the sovereignty"

-A Hadith-i-Qudsi.

Ashabi kan nujumi. Błayythim Iqtadaytum ihtadaytum.
My companions are stars;

Whomsoever any one of them you follow, you will be rightly guided."—A Hadith.

(Frontispiece, pp. 71-72 and 74-75)

STUDIES IN TASAWWUF

BY KHAN SAHIB KHAJA KHAN, B.A.,

WITH FOREWORD BY
NAWAB.A. HYDARI HYDAR NAWAZ JUNG BAHADUR

IAD RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHY SERIES NO. 15

FIRST EDITION 1923

REPRINT 1978

PRICE Rs. 60

PRINTED IN INDIA

PUBLISHED BY MOHAMMAD AHMAD FOR IDARAH-I ADABIYAT-I DELLI, 200°, QASIMJAN ST., DELHI-110006 AND PRINTED AT JAYYED PRESS, BALLIMARAN, DELHI-110006

CONTENTS

Forewor	·d "	•••	•••	'vi
Pr efa ce	•••	•••	•••	vii
I.	Esoteric Narratives	•••	•••	1
II.	Philosophic Schools of Thought	Islamic	•••	- 8
III	Dhat and Sifat	•••	•••	21
IV.	The One in the Many	•••	•••	30
v.	The Theory of Emana	tion	•••	39
VI.	Insān-ul-Kāmil	•••	•••	73
VII.	Fanā and Baqā	•••		8 8
VIII.	The Future State of M	an	•••	103
IX.	The Five Pillars of Isl	am	•••	121
X.	The Ṣūíī's Ascent	•••	•••	133
XI.	Predestination	•••	•••	141
XII.	Taşawwuf in the Maki	ng	•••	148
XIII.	Taşawwuf and Theoso	phy	•••	169
Append	lix I. Şüfī Orders in t	he Deccan	•••	187
	II. Ghazzālī "on th	e Soul"	•••	196
	III. Technical Term	s in Taşaww	uf	210
Index				251

FOREWORD

Whilst the esoteric side of the other great religions is made more and more accessible to English readers, it is a matter of great misfortune that similar service is not being rendered to Islam, with the result that the majority of non-Muslims and even many Muslims, who have been brought up entirely under a European cultural environment, remain ignorant of that particular side in Islam which is its core and centre, which really gives life and vitality to its outward forms and activities, and which most can appeal to followers of other faiths owing to the universal character of its content. Mussalmans will therefore, be grateful to a competent scholar like Mr. Khwaja Khan, who has in these pages thrown a great deal of illuminating light on various points in esoteric Islam, popularly known under the name of Taşawwuf (Theosophy). I hope Mr. Khwaja Khan will continue to dig in the fertile and consecrated field he has chosen for his labours and make available from time to time the treasures he finds.

A. HYDARI

PREFACE

In the preface to my book on "The Philosophy of Islam", I expressed the hope to bring out an enlarged edition of that book; but this was given up, for the present, in favour of this book, which also is a collection of metaphysical Essays-written in the same way as my above mentioned book. It mav be observed that a thread of connection is running throughout the essays, although outwardly they appear to be disconnected. The very first essay "Esoteric Narratives" may appear to have bearing on the subject; but really, it underlies the subject-matter of all the essays; for here, we are dealing with the Esoteric side of Islam; and this essay proves how far an Esoteric meaning underlies the formalism of Islam, and how such a meaning is justifiable in the eyes of the "Elders of the Church" of Islam, and of the great Islamic thinkers. If Islam is denuded of Esotericism, it becomes a mere skeleton of formalities which people of a rationalistic turn of mind would accept only as formalities. Unless this skeleton is clothed with flesh and vivified, the real beauty of Islam cannot be appreciated. Chapter II to V deal with the descent of man-Tanazzulät-i-Sitta (the six devolutions); and Chapter VI to XI relate to his ascent: Chapter XII treats of the history of the subject, and Chapter XIII is a comparative study of the same. A life of the makers of Taşawwuf, or at least of those eminent men mentioned in the book was also a desideratum. As a few books already exist in English, e.g., Claud Field's The Mystics and Saints of Islam," Dr. R.A. Nicholson's Mystics in Islam" (on the lines more or less of Fariduddin 'Attār's Tadhktratul-Auliyā and Mullā Jāmi's Nafhatul-Uns), this has been postponed. Lives of these thinkers with a comparative study of their thoughts—philosophical, ethical and illuminational—and of their particular ashghāl (practices) and adhkar (repetition of Divine names and formulas) and mulfuzāt (sayings) is, however, still a desideratum.

The Elders of the Church of Islam who have dealt with Taṣawwuf have so far done it in detached essays; whether they be those who have treated it as philosophy, or whether they be those who have treated it as Kashf (illumination), like Shaykh Muḥīyyuddīn ibn-ul-'Arabī and 'Abdul Karīm Jīlī.

The works of writers on Taṣawwuf are generally in poetry; because it was not thought advisable in those days to deal with the subject in a plain matter-of-fact way, and lay bare the truths before ordinary people, whose minds were not prepared to receive them, and who mismanipulated the same, and made use of them as a dangerous weapon; secondly, propaganda work was best done in those days, by means of poetical effusions. Poetry could not put a philosophical subject in a precise and mathematical style. Subjects were often repeated with a view to drive home the truths and to make them clearer and more understandable. As they thought with Talleyrand that speech was meant to conceal thought, they did not, like Carlyle and Hegel, hesitate to speak in paradoxes. Of course there have been differences of opinion, but these differences of honest opinion are considered to be a real blessing in Islam: Ikhtiläf-ul-'Ulamā raḥmatun.

Again poetry is the best medium of expression for Ahl-i-Kashf (people of illumination). Their Kashf finds a ready and enthusiastic, and forcible expression in poetry; while the best of prose is too dull for the purpose. That which one sees with his inner eye finds expression in conscious measured language. Some people who are not under this occult influence also use Poetry as a matter of mimicry; but their effusion appears hollow. It may be that they are trying to advance from the unreal to the real. The poetry of Rūmi, Sa'di, Ibn-ul-'Arabi clearly shows that the forcibleness of their poetry had its fons et origo in the realization of the realism of their ideas. and in the genuineness of their feelings. The effusive languages of David, St. Paul and Sri Krishna bear a clear testimony to the fact that they had realized what they expressed. The living pictures in the 'Alam-i-Mithal and Barzakh could only be expressed in poetry. The Qur'an, too, is in the effusive language of the Arabs, but it is not considered to be poetry. as the elements of pre-determination and determined effort are wanting in it (as held by Imam Fakhruddin Rāzi). In poetry, these elements must be present: the words of God merely passed out of the lips of the Prophet.

Gur chi Quran az labi-Payghambar ast Her kı gouyad Ḥaqq na gufta kafır ast.

(Mathnawi)

Although the Qur'an is from the lips of the Prophet,

Whoever says it is not God's word, hides the truth

And God has said, "We have not taught him poetry." (Sura xxxvi: 69)

The writings of ancient writers are of a synthetical character; they are long discourses which one has to wade through to get at the kernel of the matter. This they appear to have purposely done, to make themselves difficult for the ordinary work-a-day intellect to understand. To understand a complicated and long discourse, the reader has to analyse the subject-matter. Herbert Spencer's Synthetical Philosophy is based on an analytical basis. You cannot take away a single sentence or a single paragraph, without obscuring the meaning of a whole chapter. Here our great thinkers have made themselves purposely obscure; perhaps by not dealing with each subject separately. Shaykh Sadruddin of Qoniah was a disciple of Ibn-ul-'Arabi, as Schelling was of Hegel; and he was one of the few persons who lectured on Fūṣūṣ-ul-Ḥikam, and yet he confessed not to have understood his master properly as Schelling had confessed in the case of his own master: the difference. however, was that the Shaykh's writings were in a vein of kashf (illumination), and Hegel was a purely speculative philosopher.

I have tried to put the thoughts of these elders in such a way that the different parts of the system harmonized with one another, at least to the best of my understanding. At the end of the book, I have Preface xi given explanations of technical terms. The significance of some of these terms is not yet definitely settled, just as is the case in respect of technical philosophic terms used by different English writers. Writers sometimes use these terms in different senses; sometimes the definitions are not clear cut.

Some terms found in the book like Ahadiyvat, Wahdat, Wāhidīyyat do not find a place in the glossary; since they have been explained at some length in the body of the book itself. I have tried to fix these explanations on to well-established and accredited usages.

Some thoughts in the realm of philosophy are to be ordinarily realised by revolving them in one's mind; (specially if they are to accord with particular schools of thought;) I have made a study of this subject for some years, and leave it to the reader to judge how far I have been able to make my exposition of it understood on these lines. The object of the treatise is not controversial; a few quotations have been made from the scriptures of Christianity and Hinduism, to show the identity of aim of all religions, and how far these have common b asis

Kufr Käfir ra wa din dindar ra,

Dharra-i-dardi dıl-i-'Aţţār ra.

Infidelity (welcome) to an infidel and piety to the pious man,

An atom of ache to the heart of 'Attar.

The transliteration system generally used by Orientalists has been adopted It is desirable, no doubt, to have a definite system of spelling; but intonation, and even pronunciation differ in different places—say in India and Persia, India and Arabia; and it is difficult to fix on any one intonation as the standard. An Englishman's intonation sometimes differs from that of a Scotchman or Welshman. The question in transliteration is not the spelling of written words; but of the spelling of words as pronounced.

Chapters III, XIII and Appendix II originally appeared in the Theosophist; and the rest in the 'Muhammadan' of Madras. I have to thank the Editors of these journals for their courtesy in allowing me to make use of these publications. I am also indebted to Maulvi Muhammad Na'im-ur-Raḥmān Ṣāḥib, M.A., H.P, Professor of Arabic in the Government Muhammadan College, Madras, for revising, in proof, the transliteration of Classical and Vernacular words according to the system of the Royal Asiatic Society; and to Nawab A. Hydari Hydar Nawāz Jung Bahādur, Finance Minister to H.E. Highness the Nizām, for his encouraging Foreword.

Royapetiah, Madras.

KHAJA KHAN

Chapter I

ESOTERIC NARRATIVES

Gar zi sirri murifat agah shawi, Lufz bu guzari sua maana shawi.

(Mathnawi)

If thou wouldst be acquainted with inner meaning, Drop the letter and adopt the spirit.

Direct exposition of a spiritual theme is avoided in the holy scriptures of most religions. The glare of the sun is too strong and blinding to the watery eye. If one wishes to have a view even of its penumbra, one must use coloured glasses. Direct facts are misleading and confusing to the ordinary man; esoteric writers and speakers have all along clothed realities' in many-hued garbs, so that those who have eyes to see may see. Sri Krishna has not laid his truths in their simple nakedness. Jesus Christ has spoken in parables; he, even said, that pearls should not be thrown before swines. Common people, not realizing the drift of argument, go astray; it requires a certain amount of leavening in one's temperament to grasp facts; culture is not a correct word here to use, as that implies only intellectual ploughing and sowing; leavening implies fermentation of feelings to the proper degree, in addition to training of the intellect. Not possessing this leavening, they either go astray or are led to make the confusion of the world worse confounded.

Great teachers have therefore hit upon ceremonials as the basis on which training is fixed. These ceremonials are their shari'at or exoteric laws Shari'at is from shar, the beaten-out path in the desert, which leads to a watering ghat. If you take this way, it leads you straight to the ghat, where the water of life is found—the hagigat (Truth) lies enveloped in this shari'at To cut through the shell to get at the kernel of the truth is a laborious task. In the Qur'an itself, the verses are of two kinds—Ayāt-i-Bayyināt. plain verses; they are writ large, so that one that runs may read, e.g the stories of the former prophets. laws about the division of property ('ilm-i-farā'yid), commandments—positive and negative, etc. Then there are Ayat-i-Mutashabihat (verses involving doubt); which can be interpreted in as many as seven different ways.

These latter kind of verses have given rise to as many as 72 sects. They relate to the essence and attributes of God, the mysteries of prophetship—in fact to the Greater Mysteries of Islam ('llm-i-Ḥaqā'yaq) and the Lesser Mysteries ('llm-i-Daqā'yaq).

Not only in the Qur'an are there such narratives, but Sufi writers have exposed their facts in the form of stories.

The Mathnawi of Jalaluddin Rūmi is full of stories; and moral is drawn only for those who have eyes to see; the lesser writers of mysteries—Shaykh Sa'di, for example, also sometimes draw out their truths in the form of stories. While this form of exposition obscures the mental horizon of those who have no taste for the deeper truths of life, it becomes most palatable to those who are in for it.

Dhauq een bada na dani ba khuda ta ni ciashi.

The intoxication of this wine you do not relish, until you have tasted of it.

"Verily we have cast veils over their hearts, lest they should understand the Our'an, and into their ears caused thickness of hearing." Moses asked God whether there was any one man more knowing than himself; and he was directed to go to Khizr. Khizr is supposed to be one Balva ibn Malacan, who having drunk of the water of life had become immortal. Moses with his servant, Joshua, proceeded to the place where the two seas met. When they arrived at the meeting of the two seas, they forgot the fish (the roasted one) which they had brought for their dinner: and the fish took its way freely to the sea. When Moses called for dinner. Joshua told him what had actually happened. They then returned to the place from which the fish had jumped into the sea. Here Moses met Khizr and requested him to be allowed to follow him "that thou mayest teach me part of that which thou hast been taught." Khizr answered: "Verily thou couldst not bear with me: for how couldst thou patiently suffer those things, the knowledge whereof thou dost not comprehend." Moses replied: "Thou shalt find me patient if God please." (The Our'an continues).1

"So they both went on by the seashore, until they got aboard a ship; and Khizr made a hole therein. And Moses said unto him; "Hast thou made a hole therein, so that thou mayst drown those who are aboard? thou hast done a strange thing." He answered. "Did I not tell thee that thou couldst not bear with me?" Moses said: "Rebuke me not, because I did forget, and impose not on me a difficulty which I had not anticipated "Wherefore they left the ship and proceeded until they met with a youth; and Khizr slew him. Moses said: "Hast thou slain an innocent person, without his having killed another? Now hast thou committed an unjust action." He answered. "Did I not tell thee that thou couldst not bear with me." Moses said, "If I ask thee concerning anything hereafter, suffer me not to accompany thee; now hast thou received an excuse from me." They went forward, therefore, until they came to the inhabitants of a certain city; and they asked food of the inhabitants thereof; but they refused to receive them. And they found therein a wall, which was ready to fall down, and Khizr set himself to put it upright. Whereupon Moses said unto him, "If thou wouldst, thou mightest doubtless have received a reward for it." He answered, this shall be a separation between me and thee; but I will first declare unto thee the significance of that which thou couldst not bear with patience. The vessel belonged to certain poor men, who did their business in the sea: and I was minded to render it unserviceable, because there was a King behind them, who took away every sound ship by force. As to the youth, his parents were true believers; and we feared, lest he being an unbeliever should oblige them to suffer his perverseness and ingratitude; wherefore we desired that their Lord might give them a more righteous child in exchange, and one more affectionate towards them. And the wall belonged to two orphan youths in the city; and under it was a treasure hidden, which belonged to them, and their father was a righteous man; and thy Lord was pleased that they should attain their full age and take forth their treasure, through the mercy of thy Lord; and I did not what thou hast seen, or mine own will, but by God's direction. This is the interpretation of that which thou couldst not bear with patience."

^{1.} Süra Kahf, XVII.

Khizr met Moses at the junction of the livers; Love and Humanity—the unmanifest and manifest of Nirguna and Sarguna or exotericism and esotericism. The Qur'ān says: "We have issued two seas that never mingle with one another; there is a partition between them that is irremoveable."

Marajal-baḥrayni yattaqiyan bayna-humā barzakhun lō yabghiyan.¹

David too refers to this partition: "Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of thy water spouts; all thy waves and billows are gone over me."²

When one is on this cataract, one requires a boat and a boatman to tide over it. Moses met the boatman in the person of Khizr and the boat was the boat of spiritual training. When the boat reaches the other side of the river, there lives a King who confiscates all sound boats. To save his ship, Khizr, the spiritual gaide springs a leak in it. This is the hole of ^{1.} Sūra Raḥmān, LV: 19, 20.

^{2.} Psalm, 42:7, (1),

Love in the bottom of Humanity. Satan is unable to confiscate it, a leaky boat is of no good to him. In such a boat Humanity passes over to Spirituality.

Khizr and Moses, the guru and disciple, it may be, landed on the other side of river, in the country over which the tyrant ruled. Khizr took hold of a vouth, i.e., desire and slew him outright. This youth was Nafs (desire-body). In the second stage of the journey one has to kill his desire body; unless desires are killed, there can be no progress, this demon in the shape of a vouth will be shadowing our steps. The two then leave this country and enter another country—a country inhabited by plunderers no doubt -and in a state of ruin. Here Khizr and Moses have to satisfy their creature comforts, but no body would give them a crumb of bread. Khizr, however, sets about repairing a wall in imminent danger of falling. Under the shadow of this wall, two precious treasures lie buried-Treasure of Prophetship and Saintship, the two orphans referred to In this country of plunderers, the wall of shari'at is protecting these two treasures. Under the protection of ceremonial institutions, the peace of the country was maintained. If the wall of shari'at had collapsed, the two treasures would have fallen into unworthy hands. Hence shari'at (ceremonial institution) protects spiritual treasures.

Here is another story from Shaykh Sa'dī's 'Gulistan' (Chap. I). A King was travelling in a boat with his 'Ajamī slave; the slave who had not seen the troubles of the sea, began to tremble and wail and gnash his teeth. A physician was sitting in the same boat. He said: "If your Majesty order me, I shall make him quiet by a device." The King agreed. The physician ordered that the slave should be thrown into the sea, and after he had had two or three dippings to be pulled up by the hair of his head. The slave was accordingly pulled up after this trial. He then went and sat quiet in a corner. The King asked the physician what was the wisdom of this experiment He replied that the slave had not realised the danger of drowning, and was excited. When he actually went through the danger, he realized the safety of being on board a ship. Similarly a man does not understand and realize the doctrine of Hama ust or Divine Immanence, until he is involved in a variety of dangers and comes out safe. The 'Ajami slave (other than Arabs are 'Ajamis) is a term for an uninitiated man; such a man is subject to "affections of the heart," Khatarāt); and he gets confused and his mental balance is upset. Even when he is told that all saints had realized this doctrine, he does not resume a mental equilibrium. The Perfect Pir throws him overboard into the sea of doubts and infidelity. and then pulls him up towards the shore of safety and a correct appreciation of the underlying reality. It may be objected to, that this story has no perceptible application to the doctrine of Hama ust. The intention of Shaykh Sa'di is plain from his concluding verses: "There is difference between a man whose beloved is in his bosom and one whose eves are expectant at the door." The believer in Hama ust has observed the Truth with the eyes of certainty and the non-believer is looking forward to the prospect of a beatific vision in a future life.

Chapter 11

PHILOSOPHIC SCHOOLS OF ISLAMIC THOUGHT

There are three main schools of thought-Ijadiyyah, Wujūdiyyah and Shuhūdiyyah. The Ijādiyvah are the Creationists or Transcendentalists, who believe in a God separate from His Creation, an extra-cosmic God who created the heaven and the earth in six days, and took rest on the seventh. "Praised be God Who created the heavens and the earth and brought into being the Darkness and Light" (Sūra xvii: 1) When "the hand of God" is mentioned "as being on the hand of the Prophet" Sura xxvi: 13), there is no metaphorical sense. When God descends to the Fourth Heaven in the latter part of the night, that too is to be taken literally; only that we do not wish to examine it. He is the maker, the engraver, and painter. Everything is "from Him". (Hama-azust). This is the belief of the ordinary people. "The simple belief of Musalmans," says Sir Savvid Ahmad,1 "is that God is one, He exists by his own holy essence. He brought all things from nothingness into thingness. All things are dependent on him for their existence. He is not dependent on anything. He is unique in His essence and in His attributes and in His works Nobody takes part in his actions: His essence and His knowledge are not like our essence and knowledge, His hearing is not like our hearing, nor are his intention, His power, and His speech like our intention, our power, and our speech There is no resemblance between these except in name. Creating is his special attribute, for nobody can create a thing out of nothing. Even the action of a man is created by Him, only that in the nature of a man He has created independent intention, and will, to do good and evil works. He is not contained in any thing; nor does anything contain Him. He surrounds everything by His Essence and is near and with everything; but His proximity and propinquity are not understood by us." This is the philosophical aspect of the Asharia school. Since the essence of created is according to them, a "nothingness" and since they go according to the exoteric teaching of the Qur'an, and since also they practice certain Adhkār, they are counted as a sect of Sūfis.

The second great school, which exerted a great influence on the philosophy of Islam was that of Wujudiyyah. The great thinker, Shaykh Muhiyyuddin ibn al-'Arabi (ob 1241) was a native of Späin. Although he died in Syria, he is counted amongst the philosophers and Sufis of the West. His doctrine was that man (or the world) comes out of the knowledge of God, and gains the experience of the world and then returns to his own 'ayn (or reality). Here duality is struck at its very root. There is only one essence, which has manifested the "many" out of its own knowledge; which knowledge in the 2nd stage of Emanation is itself. Having gained experience, it travels back to its own reality in the knowledge of God. "Everything is him" (Hama ust). Some people confound this with Pantheism. The difference is obvious. Although the One exists, the essence of things are in his knowledge, much as there are forms or plans in the knowledge of the builder. When a plan exists as a plan in knowledge, it is no longer the builder itself. Identity no longer exists, and in reverting, the plan reverts to its type. Pantheism even in the case of the Hindu philosophy is a much abused word. Every stock and stone is not God-it simply means that everything is instinct with consciousness, which the researches of Babu Chandra Bose and others have amply testified to a wondering world. Pantheism may be a doctrine of Divine Immanence which the Mussalman sect of Mu'tazilites believe in (i.e., God pervades His universe). But the original philosophy of Ibn 'Arabi is of a loftier kind. The world was not created causally but existed in the knowledge of God, and His knowledge is as eternal as His Dhat itself.

Shaykh 'Abdul Karīm al-Jīlī (ob. 811 A H) the renowned author of Insān-ul-Kāmil and several other books, was the founder of the next important sect of Shuhūdiyyah. Unlike Ghazzālī, who believed that attributes alone are in evidence and essence is an unknown quantity (a zero), he believes that essence itself is in evidence, and attributes are always hidden; you have no cognizance of benevolence, which is always hidden in the benevolent one, who alone is in evidence.

Al-ḥaqqu maḥsūsun, wal khalquq ma'qūlun.

The essence is sensed, the world is only inferred. He believed that God created the world out of nothingness. Ex-nihilo nihil fit?—of the Greek philosophy did not find favour with him. For don't you see forms coming out of nothingness, and receding into nothingness? Wax is moulded into forms, which therefore come out of nothingness. Forms come out of the knowledge of God; but before they come out they existed in God Hafiz, the Persian poet, was in his poetry, an exponent of Jili. When attributes become manifest, they receive names (asmī). Names are therefore mirrors. For without names, attributes would not have manifested themselves. The names (asmā) are therefore mirrors, which reveal all the secrets of Divine being; this is the theory of Divine Immanence. The names are mirrors for yet another reason. God created the world out of nothingness. The Divine attributes became manifest by contrast with the attributes of "nothingness." "Nothingness" has nospeech, no-sight, no-hearing, no providence, no-good, etc. The power of speech, sight, hearing and the goodness of God become manifest, by contrast with lack of the same in this "nothingness" or form ('ayn).

The essence possesses the attributes of completion and permanency and the 'adam (nothingness) has the attributes of "imperfection" and degeneracy and decay. The Wujūdiyyahs have only one Essence, that of God; and the Dhāt of God like the juggler's rupee becomes the Dhāt of the created in manifestation. The Dhāt of created is 'abd (banda) or bounded (i.e.) by attributes and names. The Tauhīd (Unity) consists in merely "dropping off limitations or indications" (At-tauhīdu isqāt-ul-ishārāt). The first binding or circumscription was in God descending in His own knowledge; this is the stage of the reality of Muhammad—as the Sūfis call it or Christos, as the Gnostic Christians call it. The Shuhūdiyyahs, however believe in two Dhats, the one of the Reality and the other of the non-reality, the one of God and the other of the banda; that of the banda, however, is zero ('adam), this 'adam is, however, idafi (relational); it is not Hagigi (real). If there is an essence called 'adam, then there will be two Dhats which will be dualism. The 'adam-i-idafi is only relatively an 'adam. It is a mere zero. If any number of zeros are added to a number by plus sign, the value of that number does not change. This 'adam is, therefore, an emblem in the knowledge of God. Since perfection appertains to Dhat, God is goodness itself. Imperfection relates to 'adam; and hence Evil is the manifestation of 'adam. "The judgment that we give, when we judge an action to be foolish or wicked a statement false, a work of art ugly, are all metaphorical. We do not mean to sav that there is an existence called error, ugliness, or foolishness; but only that there is a given existence and that another is wanting." There are several verses of the Qur'an to support the Wujudiyyah. "For God is in the East and the West, so wherever thou turneth thy face, there is the face of God (Sūra ii: 115). "God is with you wherever you are," (Sūra xx: 46). "We are nearer to man than you, but you do not observe" (Sūra xxvii: 18). "He is the first and the last—the apparent and the real and He knows everything." (Sūra lv: 26). The Shuhudiyyah have the following further support: 'God is the light of the heavens, and the earth. He is like a lamp in a glass, and the glass in a niche, etc.

(Sūra xxiv: 35). "Have you not seen how the Lord has lengthened his shadow." "Have you not seen how mountains look solid, though they are moving like clouds."

The idea of co-existence of God and matter was debated by Aristotle, who held that both are co-existent, only that Gol is unchangeable and matter changeable.

Abu 'Alī ibn Sīnā of Spain (ob. 1037) readily fell in with the doctrine of Aristotle. Plato with his doctrine of Archetypes, held that there is one world-soul, of which souls of men are transient parts. For him, the Universal existed before the individual. This was Plato's doctrine of Realism. The doctrine of Archetypes has its vague counter-part in Sūra iii: 6, where mention is made of Ummul-Kitāb (Mother of books) and Kitābu'l-Mubīn (the clear prototype). What there is in the Ummul-Kitāb (the essence) becomes manifest in the Kitābu'l-Mubīn or Lawh-i-Manfūz (the Preserved Table).

"All are parts of one stupendous whole, Whose body nature is and God the soul."

A Persian poet has said:

Ḥuq jāni jahān-ast wa juhān jumla badan.

God is the soul of the world! and the world is His body.

The Neo Platonists of Alexandria led by Philo and his pupil Plotinus appear to have been the founders of the doctrine of emanation. But their emanation consisted in Nous (the Cosmic soul, the Intelligentsia primus of Aristotle) coming out of the Divine. They accounted for the ten Intelligences ('Uqūl-i-'Ashara). Nous or the First Intelligence first came out, then it created the first Angel. This Angel created the second Intelligence, and so on up to the tenth. These angels work on the four elements, and have produced the whole world. The Angels are called Abai-'Ulawi (the superior fathers) and the elements on which they work are the Ummahāti Siflī (the inferior mothers). Beneditto Croce criticises this doctrine in the following terms: "On the one hand is postulated a Logos, a thought inse (one does not underst nd how this can ever think and be thought); and it is made to adopt a resolution (which does not understand how it can ever adopt) of coming forth from itself and creating a nature in order to be able to return finally to itself, by means of this alienation. and to be henceforth per se that is to say, able to think and will." It was, however, reserved for Abū Nașr Fărābi (ob. 950) to throw a more consistent light on the point. It was the gradation of the reflection of God, that comprised the internal and the external worlds-the reflection is transient, and the essence is eternal. The last great Muslim philosopher, Shaykh Muhiyyuddia ibn 'Arabi, put on the topmost stone to this superstructure by saying that the Divine one descended into his own knowledge. Just as by switching a gas light in a dark Museum, the contents of the Museum are illuminated all at once, so when knowledge illuminated the being, the world evolved (to outward appearances), gradation by gradation, and became manifest. This want of knowledge is not.

^{1.} Philosophy of the Practical, translated by Douglas Ainlie, p. 295.

however, a deficiency in the essence. In one aspect, it is absorbed in itself and there is no manifestation; and in another it frees itself from itself, and then the attributes become manifest.

As off-shoots of the Wujūdiyyah school, there are the schools of Anawallahs and Fanawallahs. They are not schools of thought properly so-called, but are considered the aim and object of contemplation (Muraqaba) of certain schools of Saliks ("pilgrims on the path of spirituality") Abū Sa'di Ahrār appears to have given currency to the word "Fana" and "Baga". The Anawallahs are really subjective idealists, resembling the school of Fitche of the modern German Philosophy, who maintain the identity of being and knowing. "I alone exist," said Fitche, "the tree and the image of it are one thing and this one is the modification of my own mind." The thing of itself (Ding an Sich of the Germans) is a mere fiction. The Anawallahs assert that in the unlimited expanse of consciousness, a point (nuqta) appears: this is my Ego. When other similar points appear (and they are legion), they are the same as this my Ego, and so they are my own manifestations. This point is Euclid's point which has no outward existence in loco, but exists in its internal aspect in the mind of the thinker. When it expands, it becomes existence itself. The Fanawallahs assert that it is the Truth that exists, and I am "nothingness." These are the objective idealists, akin to the school of Schelling. "The contemplation of Anawallahs of which, the sect of Shuttaris are prominent exponents, leads through a thorny path. Imagination and judgment are upset, and a man is liable to become an Egotist (Selfexpressionist). This path is therefore abjured. The path of Fanā (self-annihilation) adopted by most schools is readily pursued, as there are not so many pit-falls in it. But where are the authorities for these latter in the Qur'an? When the Prophet threw a handful of dust at the army of the enemy at the battle of Uhud, "it was not thou that didst throw it. it was God himself" (Sūra viii: 18). "The hand of God is on thine hand" (Sūra xxvi: 31). In this stage God is actor and 'abd His instrumentality. This is called Qurbi-Fara'yid corresponding to subjective Idealism. When, however, God is the instrument and 'abd, His actor, God is the internal of the 'abd, and 'abd is manifest, it is Qurhi-Nawāfil, corresponding to objective idealism. The 'abd sees, hears, and touches by the sight, hearing and touch of God. It must, however, be remembered that this annihilation is only "in sight." The school of Hegel appears to be between and betwixt Subjective and Objective idealism—it is subject -o-objective self-consciousness; the Absolute is manifest in both mind and matter. Knowing and being are the same Hegel said:1 "God has no independent existence; He exists only in us. God does not know Himself; it is only we that know him: while man thinks of and knows God: God knows and thinks of Himself and exists. God is the truth of man, and man is the reality of God." "The course of human history is frankly identified with the course of self-Revelation." This appears to be an interpretation of the Hadith-i-Oudsi: Al-insanou-sirriwa na sirruhu: "Man is my secret; and I am man's secret", i.e., Man is a manifestation of God's names (asmā). He sees man in the mirror of His own names and attributes. 1 Man sees himself, in the mirror of God's names and attributes." Names are mirrors either ways. Shaykh 'Abdul Karim al-Jili, the author of Insān-ul-Kāmil, has, however, gone a step further than Hegel. The latter would circumscribe the knowledge of God of the outer world to the same extent as the knowledge of man himself. This would be a shortcoming in the knowledge of God which is unthinkable and incompatible with His Omniscience.2 "Let it be known," says the Shaykh, "that God has many and innumerable worlds, upon which soever of these. He looks through man, it is called Shahādat-i-Wujūdiyyah (existence in evidence); and upon which soever He looks without the instrumentality of Man, it is called Ghayb (the unseen). Of this Ghayb, there are two kinds, and Ghayb is detailed in the knowledge of man, and the other is abstract. The detailed Ghayb is the unseen in evidence in the knowledge of man like his cognizance of angels, etc., which go to form 'Alam-i-Malaküt (the angelic world) and the abstract Ghayb is the unseen in 'adam (or nothingness) which man has no cognizance of: God alone has knowledge of this."

^{1.} Hegel quoted in Luthards' Fundamental Truths, p. 66.

Since the unseen world governs and controls the seen world, more and unlimited knowledge is implied as possessed by God than what he possesses through the instrumentality of man, although so far as the seen world is concerned, God's knowledge of it may be only co-extensive with the knowledge of man himself. It may however be stated that the author of the Mathnawī appears to be of the same mind as Hegel, when he wrote:

^{1.} Al-Insan-ul-Kamil, Part II, p. 106.

^{2.} Ibid., p. 108.

'Ilm i-huq-dar ilm-i-sūfi gum shawad

Kin sakun khi bawar-i-mardum shawad

God's knowledge becomes hidden in the knowledge of the suff;

How can this statement find credence with the common people.

Man's knowledge is God's knowledge in limitation. When man's knowledge is apparent, God's knowledge is hidden. When ice (water in limitation) is apparent, water itself is hidden.

Besides the schools enumerated above, there are the schools which hold God to be (1) Thought (2) Will (3) Beauty or Love (4) Light.

Those who take it to be Thought are similar to Shuhūdiyyah. An-huwa al-anā kama kāna." (He is now just as he was before.) Thought makes no change in individuality. The worlds may come, and the worlds may go, but He goes on for ever, unchanged and unchangeable.

Shaqiq Balkhi, Ibrahim Adham, Rabi'a Başri and some others were the exponents of the Will system. The whole is the manifestation of Will. Shaykh Muhiyyuddin ibn al-'Arabi held that it is God that is manifest through forms in His knowedge; the former held that if there were no Will, the forms could not be manifest.

The "Love" School held that the Universe is a mirror in which God sees Himself; and hence the Universe is the manifestation of Beauty and Love. Ma'rūf Karkhī, Ḥāfiz, the renowed poet of Shīrāz, etc., were the exponents of this doctrine.

Shaykh Shihābuddīn known as Shaykh-ul-Ishrāq al-Maqtūl ("the Slain"), the great commentator of Aristotle held that God is Light, "God is the Light of the heavens and the earth. He is like a lamp in a glass case and the glass case in a niche" (Qur'ān, viii: 18).

It may be observed that all these latter schools arose from the fact that the I'tibārāt (suppositions or hypostasis) were exalted to the rank of Dhāt. They take their origin at a lower source (Aḥadīyyat). The followers of Zoroaster exalted the two aspects of Jalāl and Jamāl (glory and beauty) to the rank of Essence itself; and believed in a God of good and in a God of evil (Ormuzd and Ahriman). So these systems of Ṣūfi thought appear to have exalted the I'tibārāt of the Dhāt (or suppositions) to the rank of the Dhāt itself.

They say, in the words of Ḥadīth-i-Qudsī, "God was a hidden treasure, and He loved to be known and created the world to be known." In this awakening, four aspects are found; Wajūd (Essence), 'Ilm (knowledge of self), Nūr (Light, i.e., dawning of Essence in the knowledge or Ego) and Shuhūd (Observation of self). In the next stage, these become existence or life; and knowledge (of attributes) or Love, Desire, and Power. The schools of will (Shuhūd), of Love (knowledge) and of Nūr (Light) have thus had their origin in I'tibārāt.

The great Sussi like Ibn 'Arabi, Jili, Ghazzāli, have mostly written in prose, but others specially the Persian poets have expounded their philosophy in poetry. Philosophy must be compressed into compartments, to be rightly and clearly understood. Poetical effusions, however elevating to the seelings, do not readily lend themselves to such expression. Mathnawi, the magnum opus, of Jalaluddin Rumi is a conglomeration of all schools. His idea was to teach a central Truth, and all paths leading to his hill-top were mentioned and expatiated upon. On a close examination, it will be found that the theories contradicting each other exist in the excellent epitome of the Maulana.

Chapter III

DHAT AND SIFAT

These two terms signify respectively the Essence or Reality, and the attributes, or predicables, of the Divine Being. Dhāt is the feminine form of the Arabic word, $Dh\bar{u}$ (possessor). Hence $Dh\bar{a}t$ is that which possesses $sif\bar{a}t$, and is feminine in significance; it is that about which something can be predicated; and a predicate is what can be affirmed about $Dh\bar{a}t$. This is reasoning in a vicious circle. Indeed, the definition in the Dictionary Al-Mughrab, viz., that $Dh\bar{a}t$ is "that by being which a thing is what it is," is as vague and nebulous as it could possibly be.

Shaykh-111-Ishraq (Shaykh Shihabuddin Maqtul). the critical commentator of Aristotle, objected to Aristotle's definition of a definition, viz., "that is the naming of genus and differentia, on the ground that the hearer may be unacquainted with the differentsa: and hence, without a knowledge of differentia, the definition of a thing in the terms of genus and differentia becomes unintelligible. He substituted for it "the summation of all the known attributes of a thing." If the attributes alone are given, and nothing asserted about Dhat, the Dhat entirely vanishes. "A substance is a collection of qualities—taste, odour, colour, which in themselves are nothing more than material potentialities." It is the same as the Buddhist idea, which reduces Dhāt to a zero. On this ground Imām Ghazzāli ignored Dhat altogether, and concerned himself entirely with sifat. Though a theologian of high standing and a moralist who has exerted immense influence on the morality of Islam, so much so that he has been given the title of Ḥujjat-ul-Is'am (the proof of Islam)—he has yet been called a "sceptical philosopher."

It is as if the reality is Dhāt from an internal point of view, and sifāt from an external point; as if the Dhāt, circumscribed within circle after circle, shows itself as sifāt. It is also a point of contention whether God can be called a shay (a thing). A shay is that "about which something could be known and of which something could be asserted;" shay becomes Dhāt in this sense. In the Qur'ān it is written: "Kullu shayin halikun illa wajhullah"—"Everything is liable to annihilation except the face of God" Then the inference is that the Dhāt of God is a thing, for no exception could be made from a group, except of a thing of its own nature.

But thinkers have, however, given three Bāṭinī (internal) gradations or emanations of God: (1) Lā bi-sharṭi-shay—"without condition of anything," (2) Bi-sharṭi lā shay, i.e., "with condition of nothing," and (3) Bi-sharṭi shay, i.e., "with condition of a thing." Shaykh Muhiyyuddīn ibn al-'Arabī asserts that God is not shay, and depends for his authority on the Qurānic verse: Laysa-kamislihili shayun—"He is not like the example or model of a thing." A shay is that which comes under wish, Shā Sha'in (the wisher wished). God is the wisher and not what is wished. This may mean that He is the thing itself. The Shaykh has, however, distinctly said: "He is in manifestation" and yet not the Dhāt of things, "He is He, and shay is shay," Anā anā, wa anta anta (I am I, and thou art thou), i.e, shay has a separate Dhāt in manifestation.

In the first case, the Dhāt is above all conditions; imagination cannot soar up to it. In the second, its existence is implied without further assertion. In the third, something could be asserted about it. The second assertion gave rise to the sect of Mu'tazilites, founded by Wāsil ibn al-'Atā, who asserted that Dhāt is predicateless and rejected separate attributes. The assertion of predicates militates against the Oneness of God.1 The predicates are His essence itself. The first four suppositions in the Dhat, namely, 'ilm (knowledge), nūr (Light), wujūd (existence), and shuhūa (self-consciousness), are essence itself and not superimposition on essence. In manifestation, the attribute of existence was superimposed by God on the pre-existing atoms, i.e., on centres in the unlimited expanse of Consciousness. Nazzām, the disciple of Abu Huzal-Allaf, who flourished in the middle of the ninth century, called these by the name of wujūb (modes) of the Divine being. These are the believers in the Doctrine of Immanence, i.e., that Dhat pervades and permeates the whole creation.

In the above summations of the predicables of an attribute, nothing has been said about the eternity of an attribute. Only so much is said, that it is either hidden or manifest. It is considered sufficient to say that in the above gradation of Emanations, no reference is to be made to an attribute. It is the stage of La bi shart: shay—"without condition of anything" It is called by different names—Munqatul-ishārāt (the stage at which all indications are dropped), Ayn-ul-kāfūr (fountain of camphor), ie., whatever enters into camphor becomes camphor itself, Dhāt-i-sadhaj (colourless Reality). In that stage attributes themselves are unheard of, and so nothing can be asserted about them. It is only in the fourth stage of manifestation that attributes are in evidence, and anything can be asserted about them.

^{1. &#}x27;Abdul Karīm Jīlī in his [nsān-ul-Kāmil (p. 61) says that sifāt are always hidden in Dhāt. For if sifāt appear by themselves, they become separate entities. They are that which convey knowledge to the understanding. Benevolence is never seen as an entity, but it is only the Dhāt that is benevolent.

It is said that a companion of the Prophet, named Zarrāra, asserted that the attributes are not eternal. His sect goes by the name of Zarrārins Imām Ḥanbal and the Mu'tazilites were persecuted by the Caliph of their times for having asserted that the Qur'ān (the speech of God) was created, i.e., non-eternal. The other Imāms asserted that it was not created. The assertion of Eternal attributes implied a multiplicity of Gods. The knower, the known and knowledge are one in the stage of Dhāt, like the painter, the picture and his knowledge are one in the Dhāt of the person who paint.

However, the sects of Ash'aris (founded by Abul-Hasan-al-Ash'ari, 873-935) assert that attributes are not identical with Dhāt; nor are they separate from it. It is as if the attributes cannot be compared to anything. There can be no via media; God is the ultimate necessary existence, Who carries His attributes in His own being, and whose existence and essence are identical. Their tenets are as follows: (1) The essence ranks first the attributes come next; (2) the essence is self-existing and the attributes depend on the essence (like wax and its softness); (3) the essence is unity and the attributes display diversity; (4) the essence has self-consciousness, the attributes have none; (5) the essence is always hidden, the attributes are sometimes hidden and sometimes manifest; (6) the attributes must be in their proper locality; (7) the manifestation of one attribute conflicts with or suppresses the manifestation of another.

The question is often asked whether the Dhāt of God is the same as the Dhāt of the created. In the 85th Sūra (Al-Burūj) God swears by the dhā s of the Constellation of the Zodiacs, so the Phāt of God is different from that of the 'abd (created).

In manifestation, the two are different, and the Qur'an used the words most easily understood by the people. But there can be no two Dhāts, any more than there can be two swords in a scabbard. The Dhāt of the creature is the rupee of the juggler, who takes up a disc of broken pottery, throws it up in the air, and brings down for the bystander the real rupee of silver.

In manifesting Himself through His own ideas (A'yān), the Dhāt of the Creator becomes known as the Dhāt of the created. In the non-manifest state, there is one Dhāt; but in manifestation, it is known as the incalculably immense number of Dhāts of the created.

Hamīd-uddīn Nāgori (Nāgore of Rajputāna) has said:

Zi darya mouji gun gun bar āmad Zi bay chuni bi rangāi chun bar āmad Gāhi dar kiswat-i-Layla furou shud Gāhi dar ṣūrat-i-Majnu bar āmad.

In the ocean, innumerable waves of different colours arise

And from namelessness assume a name, Sometimes in the garb of Majnūn And sometimes in the shape of Layla.

The identity of the Ocean and waves is real identity, and the dissimilarity is only phenomenal.

A controversy as to the creation or eternity of the Our'an (Kulām-i-Lafzī or Kalām-i-Nafsī) raged round the throne of Al-Māmūn: and many were the tortures inflicted by the Mihna, (Inquisition) on those who denied the eternity of the Qur'an. It was said that the attributes were, in the first instance, either Jalālī (majestic) or Jamālī (beautiful); that when the Jalālī attributes appear, all manifestations recede into "nothingness," and when Jamāti attributes are in evidence, the beautiful world comes into being. The first is tanzih (getting rid of phenomena) and the second is tasbih (assuming of the same). Somthing like this is found in the philosophy of Zoroaster (Zardusht), who asserted that good and evil are the primary manifestations of the Deity (Yezdan). They were called Ormuzd and Ahriman. The Persian Monists, i.e., the Magi who, guided by a rising star. were led out in search of the birth-place of Christ, were true Muwahhids (i.e., Unitarians). Some of the followers of Zoroaster construed those to be two gods, and they were called the Zindiqs, i.e., those who did not pay regard to rank. The Zarwanians alone remained true to the colours.

However, the Jalālī and Jamālī attributes are in evidence in the cult of Islam. Again, the attributes may be "personal," "relational," or "verbal": the first are like Pure, Sacred, Living; the second are those that involve the manifestation of an attribute, like creator, destroyer; and the third are those that show action, like Providence, etc. So far the philosophical aspect of dhāt and sifāt has been based on the teaching of the Qur'ān; the philosophers speculated and theorised on the doubtful verses of the Qur'ān (Āyāt-i-Mutashābihāt). Some of the verses has been mentioned above; others are the following:

For God is in the East and West, so wherever thou turnest thy face, there is the face of God—(Sūra Baqara, ii: 128).

Really God surrounds everything—(Sūra Nisā v: 116).

God is with you, wherever you are—(Sūra Ḥadīd lvii: 5).

We are nearer to man then his jugular vein-(Sūra Wāqiya, lvi: 78).

I am in your individuality, but you do not observe.—(Sūra Dhāriyāt, li: 19).

He is the first and the last—the apparent and the real—and He knows everything—(Sūra Raḥmān lv: 26).

God is the light of the heavens and the earth, etc.—(Sūra Anfāl, viii: 18).

The Qur'an is full of the attributes of God; such as speech, seeing, hearing, knowing, etc. The best definitions given are all negative; indeed, as in the definition of a point, nothing could be positive. The Kalima, or the first article of the Muslim faith asserts: "There is no allah, but Allah." The word Allah is from al-elah. Ilah is simply "that which is worthy of worship." So the Kalima means: there is no one worthy of worship excepting the One who is worth of worship. Some people worship several things; some worship anything and everything that are believed to help them in the realisation of their objects. Some worship their good selves; some have, in the words of Bacon, the idols of the market-place, the idols of the forum, the idols of the cave, and the idols of the theatre to worship. Some worship the phenomena of the Universe. The Muslim Kalima declares that none of these are worthy of worship. These are all transient, illusory appearances. The one deserving of worship is the God on whom these depend; and this he testifies as in evidence (shahāda), unlike the Jewish Kalima (Shema Isrā'il) where the testimony is of the ear: "Here, O Israel, Jehovah, our Elohim, is one Tehovah."

Again, the Sūra, which is the quintessence of the Qur'ān (Sūra Ikhlāṣ,) gives negative definitions. God is Aḥad, ie., His Dhāt is homogeneous. Here He is not wāhid, if that means one as opposed to two, three and any other number—implying contrast and comparison—but He is Aḥa4. A pile of grain of the same species illustrates the nature of Aḥad; where His Dhāt is concerned, it is homogeneity, or, more correctly, oneness of homogeneity. Heterogeneity is in manifestation. Then he is Samad (independent). Everything depends on Him; He does not depend on anything. Though positive in appearance, these are really negative in nature. Also the saying, "He is unbegetting and unbegotten," is obviously negative in nature. It is the same as the definition of a point, out of which the whole world is formed.

Chapter IV

THE ONE IN THE MANY (Wahdat-dar-Kathrat)

Human nature is perforce compelled to acknowledge the existence of a Superior Power which guides and moulds its destiny. All religious books make a direct appeal and home-thrust to the heart and intuition of man, which results in a universal acknowledgement among mankind, thinking and unthinking, of the existence of this guiding Power (argumentum ex-concesur gentium), or as Sinā'ī puts it.

> Kufr-o-din har du dar rahat puyan Wahdu lā sharīka-lah guyan.

David summarised this appeal to intuition, when he sung: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handy work" (Ps 19-1.)

The Qur'an has also directly appealed to this inner sense: "Do they not consider the camels how they are created, and the heaven how it is raised and the mountains how they are fixed and the earth how it is extended?" (Sūra 88).

It is only when the question of relationship between God and man, between the absolute and the limited, between the infinite and finate, between the unseen and the seen—between Rabb and 'abd is debated, that opinions and beliefs differ. The debate is as old as the hills. Aristotle taught that God and matter

(or more literally the reality of the word— $m\bar{a}h\bar{i}yat$) are co-eternal; only that God was unchangeable and māhiyat was changeable. His followers—the Peripatetics (Mashshain) are the advocates of his theory. Their motto was, as Mullā Jāmī has put it:

Qabiliyat-bijali-jail-nist Fili fail khtlafi qabil nist

Aptitude is not the product of the action of the actor.

The action of the actor is not contrary to the aptitude of the acted.¹

According to them there are two essences from the very beginning—the actor did not produce māhiyat; but He only bestowed His own existence upon it. Take for example, the reality of fire. God bestowed upon it His own Existence. Fire has its own peculiar properties and angularities. These manifested themselves, when fire clothed itself with existence. When Abraham was slung into the bonfire by order of Nimrod (Numrūd), God commanded fire thus "va naru kuni bardun wa salamun ala Ibrahima (O Fire, become cold and protective towards Ibrahim). God did not command the Essence of Fire to change, it being co-eternal with God, He commanded its property or quality (heat) to be changed into cold—the extension was changed and not the essence: like in the Catholic Church doctrine of Transubstantiation, in which the substance of bread and wine changes and not their essences.

This school says that the knowledge of God is co-eternal with Him, the known in the first stage is the "known unknown" (ma'lūm-i-ma'dūm). The a'vān are the known (ma'lūm), so far as the knowledge of God is concerned; and they are the (ma'dūm) (nonexistent), so far as their own existence is concerned A triangle, for example, is there in the knowledge of God: but it has no external or concrete existence (so to speak.) One aspect of the triangle is "beingness" in the knowledge of God; and co-eternity with Him. and the other side is its triangularity in externalitywhich is 'adam. God cannot alter its triangularity or anything else. Its māhiya! is therefore co-eternal with God. Its mahiyat were absolute 'adam, then the Dhat, of God would become an absolute 'adam like $1 \times 0 = 0$. But it is 'adam in the sense of mal'um-i-ma'dum. there being distinction in knowledge of Himself from māhīvat; so by adding this cypher, there is no charge in Dhat like 1+0=1. This cypher with the addition of any number of cyphers with plus sign before them does not affect the oneness of one; but gives it distinction. In their inward aspect, the a'yan possess Imtlyāz-i-sulbi and in their outward aspect. Imtiyāz-i-'Ilmi. God can, however, manifest any particular aspect of a'yan, at His Will. A potter cannot alter the shape of a Kūzu into a Jug and still call it Kūza; but he could mould clay into either a jug or a kūza as he likes. While a'yān could not be altered. their particular properties (or muqtaziyāt) could be suppressed or brought into prominence by God's Will. The poet Hafiz has sung:

^{1.} See also "Jawahir-as-Sulūk", p. 31

Dar kuyi naik nami mara guzar na ladan Gar tu nami pasundi ta ghyir kun kaza ra They did not allow me to enter the path of rectitude

If thou dost not approve, change Thy will.

That is, manifest Thyself in the approvable and approved points of my a'yān—

Those who maintain two eternal essences, one of God—real essence, and the other of 'abd an 'adam—nothingness, neither preceding the other are the Ahlishara (people of ordinances), and Ash'aris (of which Sunnis are the prominent sect). They bring forward the following documentary evidences in their support:

- 1. God does not tyrannize over His creatures (Wullahu laysa bi Zallamel abd).
- 2. Kalima-i-Shahādat; "there is no god, but God and Muḥammad is His Prophet."
- 3. The cursed is cursed from his mother's womb (Ash-shaqiyyu man shaqa fi batni um-mihi).
- 4. God does what it pleases Him; and orders what He wills (Yef Allullahu ma yashayu wa yakkumu ma yurid).
- 5. Whomsoever God directs in the right path, thou (O Prophet) canst not direct into wrong path; and whomsoever He directs in the wrong path, thou canst not direct to the right path (man yahili hillahu fala mudil-la lahu, wa man yuzlilhu fala hadiyalah.
- 6. He gives the kingdom to whomsoever He likes; He gives honor to whom He likes and degrades whom He likes. In His hand is good (Tuti-l mulka man tashau, wa tuizzu man tashashu wa tu zillu man tashau bi-yadi kal-khayr).

- 7. If a'yān are the reality of Dhāt, then who is the cursed and the blessed?
- 8. If a'yān are 'adam (nothingness); then who is the cursed and blessed—the evil-doer and good-doer.

These are the advocates of the theory of A'yni-yāt-i-Ḥaqīqī and Ghairyat-Ḥaqīqī—the dualists; as opposed to those who believe in A'yniyāt-i-Ḥaqīqī (Real Identity of rabb and 'abd) and Ghairyat-i-I'tibārī. (suppositional distinction).

Ishrāqin or the Realists of Plato believed in a world of ideas. God pressed His ideas (the Mahiyat) into externality. Whatever exists in this world ('Ālam-i-Mulk) has its Archetype or counterpart in 'Ālam-i-ma'ani (the world of ideas); and these two—mulk and ma'ani, are conjoined in man—Here the question arises, whether ideas are distinct from Dhāt.

In the knowledge of God, they are not created; but in the expressed world—the world of manifestation, they are created. (Māhiyat bi jali jail majul).

Shaykh Muḥīyuddīn ibn al-'Arabī believed that there is only one Dhāt from the beginning, the Dhāt of 'abd is hypostatical or suppositional. Hypostatical distinction begins, as Herbert Spencer 1 has put it, in the "appearances of differences in the parts of a like substance." The Dhāt of God expressing or as it were crystallizing itself in forms, becomes the dhāt of 'abd. The moment, the unknown descended into its own knowledge, an aspect of its own, it showed itself to itself as 'abd—and this was the stage of Ḥaqīqati-Muḥammadī. From the first to the last rung, the ^{1.} Essay on Progress: its Law and Cause.

Dhāt has manifested itself in knowledge; and it is therefore the Dhāt that is manifest. God is thus sensed and the 'abd is only inferred, (Al-haqqu mahsū sun wal 'abd-u-ma'qūlun). The Sifāt (attributes) are thus hidden and inferred, and the Dhāt is in the full blaze of evidence; just as the sun is in evidence and the dhāt of the moon is inferred (Ash-Shums-u-mahsū sun wal Qamaru ma'qulun.) There are, however, others of Ibn 'Arabi's school, who hold that Sifāt are in evidence, and the Dhāt is hidden. Al-Ghazzālī and Shaykh Ibrāhīm Gazūr-i-Ilahī belong to this school. There are evidences in Hadīth to prove this. The prophet has said:

- 1. I am Ahmad without mīm (Anā Ahmadun bilā mīm); without mīm Ahmad becomes Ahad.
- 2. I am Arab without 'ayn (Anā Arabun bilā 'ayn); without the letter 'ayn), Arab becomes rabb. It may be observed that herein the Prophet first shows himself as 'abd, and then says that when the letter 'ayn disappears, he becomes rab in the state of self annihilation.
- 3. He who has seen me has seen God (man raani faqad ra-al-haqqa).

Christ himself has also said "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." (St. John 14-9)

4. He who knows his nafs knows his rabb (Man 'arafa nafsahu faqud 'arafa rabbahu) i.e. He who knows his own nafs, knows it as God.

Some, however, interpret this, as meaning that he who understands his nafs as "ignorant," understands his rabb as "knowing." He who understands his nafs as "created" understands his Rabb as "Creator" and so on. Shaykh Ibrāhīm Gazūr-i-Ilahī relates a story in his "Irshādāt" (Kitāb-ut-Taṣawwuf) that a certain fakir entered the cloister (Khanqāh) of Junayd, wrapped in a black blanket. Junayd asked him the reason for his mourning. He said "my God is dead." Junayd ordered the fakir to be peremptorily turned out. This was done three times. On the fourth occasion, the fakir was asked to explain himself. He said "Not knowing that my nafs was a manifestation of God, I have killed it and therefore I am in mourning for it."

This Hadith about Nafs is sometimes said to be a saying of Hadrat 'Ali. It is akin to the Socratic dictum "man know thyself" which is further traceable to the Delphic Oracle.

- 5. Muḥammad is not the father of any one amongst you; but he is the messenger of God and the seal of the Prophets (mā kāna Muḥammadan aba aḥadin min rijālikum wa lakin rasulalla wa khātimul-Nabiyyīn. This is interpreted as meaning that Muḥammad (peace on him) was not of your world.
- 6. Among the elders of the Islamic Church, Bāyazīd Bistāmī said in his ecstasy "Holy I am, how great is my glory" (Subhāna ma azam-a-shani) and Mar'ūf Karkhi said in the same state "I am your Rabb-Obey me" (Anā rabbakum fubuduni)

Thus according to Ibn 'Arabī of the Wujūdiyyah School, there is only one Dhāt, that has manifested itself. It is the Indian juggler's piece of pottery that being thrown up in the air comes down in the shape of a silver Rupee. This school believes in there being one Dhāt—but at the stage of asmā', the Dhāt of 'abd differentiates itself from the Dhāt of rabb. In the stages above this, the Dhāt of 'abd is hidden in the Dhāt of rabb (mundamaj), like fire in stone or like 5,000 (say) in number one. This is Kathrat-dar-Waḥdat (many in one). The reverse process (one in many) is Waḥdat dar kathrat, they call mundaraj. There is a distinction in knowledge after the expression of asmā'i-ilahi in the form of asmā'i-kiyāni; and this distinction in knowledge is a great purdah (Al-'ilmu hijābun ahbar); and from this stage begin the two streams which never commingle but flow on separate for ever (maraj al-bahryni yaltaqiyan bayna huma barzakun la yab-ghi yan.)

The Shuhūdiyyahs are, however, the Realists of Plato, in as much as they place the a'yān immediately below the Shuyūnāt of Dhāt.

Through a'yān, God sees himself as one. According to this school, a'yān are the mirrors through which God is reflected. The Dhāt of God is one—and his manifestations are many—the number of mirrors do not affect the individuality of the observer. Hence the Ḥadīth "He is now as He was" (Huwal anā kamā kāna). He was and nothing was with Him (Al-lazi kāna wa lam yakun ma-a-hu shayun.) Jāmī says:

Dar ayina gurchi khud numai bashad Pai vastha zi khistan judai-bashad Khud ra bi labas-i-ghayr didan ajab ust Kin bul ajabi karı khudhai bashad.

Although in mirror, there is constant selfexpression,

And there is also separation from self;

Yet to show one's self in the garb of another is a wonder

This wonder-doing can only be the work of God. Shaykh Ibrāhīm Gazūr-i-Ilāhi says that the book of Nufhatul Uns of Jāmī contains over 600 names of Ṣūfīs of whom 300 side with Ibn 'Arabī in maintaining that 'abd and rabb are like ice and water; or as William James' has put it "Each is all in God." "The finite realized as such is already the infinite in posse." Shaykh Shihāb-uddīn Suhrawardi leads the other school of 300 savants who maintain that the relationship between 'abd and rabb is like that of iron and fire. Temporarily iron becomes fire, but reverts to its essential condition.

^{1.} The Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 383.

Chapter V

THE THEORY OF EMANATION

Three distinct schools reigned in Greece, before the noted philosophers of that land made their appearance: the lonic, the Doric and the Eleatic. Amongst the Ionic philosophers, Thales of Miletus pitched upon water as the first cause of all things: Anaxamines the Milesian, on air; and Diogenes of Apollonia, while accepting air as the first cause attributed to it a kind of intelligent soul. Pythagoras of the second school viz., the Doric fixed on numbers as the first cause. Of the Eleatic philosophers, Xenophenes considered God—to be one and all: Parmenides considered the absolute being and absolute thought to be identical; Zeno was, however the first to proclaim the non-reality of the world and the reality of the Absolute. The question of reality (Wujūd) and non-reality ('adam) has since been taken up and discussed by Mussulman philosophers. Some like Ibn 'Arabi hold after the manner of Porphryry that Existence itself is Dhat. The Ash'aris, a sect founded by Abul Hasan Ash'ari nold the same view; and on this is based the belief of Ahl-i-sunna. This Existence is not derivative or limited existence. It is an entity itself. Derivative Existence is derived from this. This Existence is absolute from absolutism itself. The world is limitation (taayyun) of this Existence or Dhat. This latter has two aspects; one the aspect of Dhat, in which it is present by itself and independent in itself (As-samad); and the other is the aspect of asmā' (names) in which it is united by attributes and actions (active and passive). It cannot be thus attributed except by the localization of a'yān-i-thābita (fixed entities, i.e., entities having fixedness in knowledge); for there cannot be a knower, without a known already existing. This is the line of argument of Shaykh Muhiyyddin ibn 'Arabī (1165-1241 A. D.) Shaykh 'Abdul Karim ibn Ibrāhim al-Jili (767-81 A. D.) criticises this doctrine. The known having already existed in knowledge, the knower issued His command to it. The known has thus created the knower. This exhibits a sort of defect in Him, which is unthinkable. Reality is the non-existence of nonexistence; and non reality is the non-existence of existence (Al-wujūd 'adam-ul-'adam wal adam 'adam ulwujūd). Reality between two non-realities is a nonreality (Al wujūd-u-bayn-ul-adamaini adamun). The Ash'aris hold that Existence itself is Dhat and all other sects hold that existence is State (hāl) necessary to the essence so long as the essence abides and that this state has no illa (cause). Muhammad Fudali, a savant who flourished in Egypt in the first half of the thirteenth century of the Hijra says1 that the meaning of its being a state is that it does not attain to the degree of an entity (mawjūd) and does not fall to the degree. of a non-entity (ma'dum), so that it should be nonexistence pure; but is half way between an entity and a non-entity. So the existence of Zayd, for example is a state necessary to his essence; that it cannot be separated from his essence. And when it is said that it has no cause, the meaning is that it does not originate in anything as opposed to Zavd's potentiality (Qadir, powerful), for example, which originates in his power (qudra) so potentiality and his existence are two states which subsist in his essence unperceived by any of his five senses: only the first has a cause in which it originates his power, and the second has no cause. According to this doctrine the essence of God is not His existence and the essences of the created things are not their existences. But Al-Ash'ari holds that the existence of God is the self ('ayn) of an entity, and not an addition to it externally, and the existence of a created thing is the self of its essence. Existence and non-existence equally balance themselves and the God brought the world from non-existence into existence. It may, however, be noted that if essence is existence, it cannot be said to be "above thought, guess, imagination and fancy" as Shaykh Sa'di has put it, for existence is "that which" according to the definition of shay and can be brought within the ken of these. It is what the desirer desired (Shaa Sha'in). The Qur'an, however, says that God is not like the pattern of anything (Laysa Kamithlihi Shayun), which may mean that he is the entity of thing itself; and shay is "a concept that could be known and of which something could be asserted, irrespective of the fact that it exists or not". If "that which" (shay) exists, it is wujud (Entity): say London, it is "that which," and it "exists"; and so it is an entity. If this "that which" does not exist like the fabulous bird 'Unga, it is 'adum (non-entity.) According to this view, existence is super-imposed on entity; and entity does not come within the ken of "thought, guess, imagination and fancy." Plotinus and Dionysius, the Areopagite, were of this opinion. This entity is, however, manifest in everything.

¹ Translated by D B. Macdonald, Development of Muslim Theology etc. App. p. 349

One day the Prophet (peace be on him) got together the leaders of the tribe of Qureish and said to them: "If you with the sincerity of your hearts say one word, you shall become masters of Arab and 'Ajam' (i.e., 'Arabistān: and 'Ajam stands for the rest of the world). Abū Jehl as the spokesman of the assembly said: "We are prepared to accept not merely one world, but tens of words from yo 1." The Prophet said: "Say there is no god but God." The assembly was taken aback; and said: "How could one God contain the world (Kayfa zas ul khalq illahun-wahid); and also said: "Has Muḥammad (peace be on him) turned all Gods into one God?" This is strange (Ajaal-al-ilahatun-ilahin wahid. Inna hadha shyun 'ujjab).

Now the audience was purely Arab, whose language was the purest of the Arabic tongue; the language of the Quraysh was considered the standard language of Arabia. They should have realized the niceties of the language; and they certainly understood that the teaching meant that everything is the manifestation of the Deity. Everything is not a Deity in itself, but it is a manifestation of it; just as every beam of light is not the Sun itself, but a manifestation of the Sun. How the Dhat (in whatever sense it is taken) manifests itself and what relationship there is between the Dhat and Sifat (attributes) and finally between rabb and 'abd (the Creator and created) is the theme of the Theory of Emanation (Tannazzulāt or descent). As explained above, the philosophers of the Ionic, Doric and Eleatic Schools had their own theories. Socrates had no definite theory. Plato had his world of Archetypes, Aristotle had two eternal principles, God and matter. It was not till the establishment of the School of Alexandria that any definite theory about the relationship of God and man was established. The Grecian, Jewish and Christian ideas were all at work. Tewish-Platonism is seen in the writings of Philo, who flourished in the first half of the first Christian century, God has revealed Himself through the world. God's first manifestation or (as they put it), the first born of God is the first Logos as in the Gospel of John; then this first Logos created the world. This is the crude form of Emanation. The world was created through the clothing of the Divine ideas in a material form. This is the first attempt at the elucidation of the doctrine of A'vān-i-Thābita. Dionysius, the Areopagite, wrote to accommodate Proclus to Christianity. Plotinus, the disciple of Ammonias Sacchus is the founder of the Neo-Platonic School. Zeller says that "Plotinus' system has no more right to be called a system of Emanation than a system of dynamic pantheism." His system comes nearer Shuhūdīyyah than Wujūdiyyah. "The all perfect One is ever streaming out of Himself in this way; He produced, before countless ages, another being a perfect type of Himself, the product of His own infinity." This is the second principle and is called Intelligence, Reason or Logos. The theory of Emanation supposes the Universe to descend in successive, widening, circles of being from the supreme—In the highest, narrowest and most rapid orbits sing and shine the refulgent rows of Cherubims, Seraphims and Thrones or as Mulla Jami has put it:

^{1.} From an unpublished copy of Tanazzulati-Sittak by Maulvi 'Abdul 'Alī, vid: also Kalimatul-Haq wa Kunz-ul-Asral-ul-Qidam.

Zan chi az kitm amada ba ay an Safi-awwal safi malayk dan. Whatever has come out of the recesses of nothingness

Consider the first row as the row of angels.

The theory of Immanence (Shuhūdīyyah school) declares that God is everywhere present. The Observer is one and the mirrors are multitudinous. The multiplicity of mirrors does not affect the oneness of reflection in the numerous mirrors. He is present in His reflections in all mirrors. God is as near His 'abd here as on the other side of the grave 4 Wa huwa ma'kum ayna ma kuntum. (He is with you wherever you are). The theory of Emanation is compared to a pyramid which extends from a point on the top downwards to the base in expanding gradations. The symbol of Immanence is a point in the centre, which expands all round towards the sphere. The first theory held its ground in the West from the days of Dionysius the Areopagite, (middle of the sixth century) down to the fourteenth century. Eckhart the mystic of Rhine-land (middle of the 14th century) substituted the idea of ^{1.} Morell's History of Philosophy, p. 115.

^{2.} R.A. Vaughan's Hours with the Mystics, pp. 278. 280.

^{3. &#}x27;Aqāyid-i-Jāmi.

^{4.} Sûra Hadîd (lvii-3).

Immanence for that of Emanation. So also Shaykh Akbar (twelve century) perfected the idea of Wujūdivvah; and 'Ala'ud-Dawlah Samnani (beginning of the 14th) and his disciple, 'Abdul Karīm al-jīlī replaced it by the idea of Shuhūdīyyah. The atmosphere of the Middle Ages was surcharged with Spiritual Electricity. There was no tangible communication between the West and the East; and it cannot therefore be said that currents flowed from the East to the West or vice versa. The 3rd principle is the soul. The 4th is Nature (Tab'iyāt·i-kul). The theory of 'Alam-i-Mithal had just then put forth its nebulous adumbrations in the "daemon theory". It did not as yet form a world by itself. But a daemon attached himself to each individual, like the Socrates' daemon who could tell him when a flock of sheep was coming from an opposite direction, and thus warn him to enter a side lane. Last comes the manifestation of the Universe. The links of the chain were thus forged by Neo-Platonists. They were burnished and set in concatenation by Muslim Philosophers who based their teaching on the Our'an and Hadith.

The Theory of Emanation is a discussion of the origin of things. It forms the province of Haqāyiq (Greater Mysteries); the other province called Daqāyiq (Lesser Mysteries) is related to the mystical side of sūfism The material superstructure of sūfism has a Neo-Platonic basis; the mystical side, the Daqāyiq, is an original attempt at the elucidation of the mysteries of life and is purely Islamic in origin.

Mr. E. G. Browne says that "Ibnul-Farid," like

^{1.} Born at Cairo, A. H. 555.

Muḥīyyuddīn ibn 'Arabī had no connection with Persia and so Dhun-nūn Miṣrī; and hence ṣūfism is not a manifestation of Persian or Aryan thought, etc. Too many of those who have written on ṣūfism have treated it as an essentially Aryan movement, and for this reason, it is particularly necessary to emphasize the fact that two of the greatest mystics of Islam and perhaps a third, Dhun-nūn Miṣrī, were of non-Aryan origin."1

The Daqayiq are really the theories of ascent (Taraqqiyāt); and these are purely of Islamic origin. The theories are several and varied; for as the saying goes. "there are as many ways to God as there are souls of men' (al-turuqu'ilallahi ka nufusi bani adama). Existence has descents, i.e., manifestations according to limitation. These are the potentialities (Shuvunāt) of Existence like the potentialities of a tree in a seed. No attributes or asmā' (names) are to be found in this stage; in this stage, the Dhat is called Munqatul Ishārāt (Dropping of all indications), Dhāt-i-sadhaj (uncoloured Dhat). Majhūl-ul Nath (undefined by attributes), Ghayb-ul-Ghuyub (the unseen even in thought), La Taiyun (the unlimited), Ghayb-i-Mutluq (the absolute unseen), Wujūd-i-bahat (Pure Existence), 'Ayn-ul-Kāfūr (Reality of Camphor, i.e., that which falls in Camphor becomes Camphor itself). Every descent has a world of its own for its manifestation. The second stage is called Wahidiyyat. Between these there is the borderland called Wahdat; just as the present is the borderland between the past and the future. This is called barzakh

^{1.} The Literary History of Persia, Vol. 11, pp. 501-505.

(and the barzakh in the present instance is Wahdat). It is also called Haqiqat-i-Muhammadi (the Reality of Muhammad). It is the mirror through which God sees His attributes and asmā'. Unless the glass is coated with mercury, the seer cannot see his face in it; (i.e., without the coating, there can be no reflection of one's face.) Without the barzakh, the manifestation of attributes is unthinkable. The third is the world of souls, (it is also called 'Alam-i-Jabrūt) the fourth is Mithal (it is also called Malakūt), the fifth is Shahādat (the external world) and the sixth is Insan-ul-Kamil (the perfect man), which includes all the attributes and asmā'. The Reality Muhammad has thus fully manifested itself in Adam. There are thus six stages and five manifestations and these latter are called Hadrat Khamsa (the five Presences).

In the psychology of forty years ago, only Mind and Matter found a place; there was no corner for God. Mind was "no-matter," and matter was "nevermind"; if mind was not reduced to an effulgence of matter very much like bile, as the product of liver or if matter was not reduced to a Mind dormant as in the case of Schelling. Mind was only a series of the states of consciousness. How these fleeting states were linked together was no more known than the missing link in the biology of Darwin. This theory has now given place to a field of consciousness or awareness, which cannot be brought within the four corners of a definition. There is a field of consciousness, plus its object as felt or thought of, plus its attitude towards that object, plus the sense of self to whom the attribute belongs.1

A point first appears on the unlimited disc of consciousness. This point is an imaginary limitation; an attitude is then created between this point and consciousness; and then again the idea of consciousness acting on that point, comes into play.

That point according to Sūfīs, (which is neither essence nor extension as defined by the Megarian Euclid), is the limitation of Dhat in its own knowledge. Thus the i'tibar (imaginary limitation) of 'ilm (knowledge) is realized. The Dhat as it were descends into its own knowledge. The limitation of the Dhat in knowledge involves the idea of Existence. Its realization of itself is "I" (Nūr). Dawning on itself. it becomes aware of its potentialities (Shuyūnāt); this is shuhud. In other words, when the Dhat dawned on itself it found itself possessing attributes (ergo names.) Existence is thus a statement of possession of relationship. The dictum of 'Abdul Karīm Jili was Lavsal wujudu siwal khayali inda mon udri ul khayal. (Existence is nothing else than thought itself). When the Dhat knew its own attributes and names, knowledge was found; when it discovered beauty, Nür was found. When it knew itself, it was its shuhūd. Or as some others say; dawning on itself was Nur: discovering itself, Existence; being by itself shuhud; and knowing all these knowledge. Others again say that the totality of a'yan is the 'Aql-i-kul (Absolute Reason). The relationship between the Dhat and this totality is an attribute. Originally this totality was in annihilation, much as sparks are, in the dhāt of stone; or were merged therein. The first attribute was 'Ilm (knowledge); when the totality of a'yān appeared, the Dhāt gave prominence to a'yān over 'adam (nothingness). This was irāda (will) of the Dhāt. When it worked on a'yān, power came into prominence. When the Dhāt beheld them, before their manifestation, it was sight; when the aptitudes of a'yān became prominent, they as it were proclaimed their individuality, the Dhāt heard this. It thus had Hearing.

^{1.} James: The Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 499.

In the first stage which is called Ahdivyut, there is the unlimited. In the second, which is Wahdat, four potentialities (shuyūnāt) are found. Plato found his God above being, Plotinus gave Him being, thought and power and called Him Dimiurgus. The i'tibarat of the Dhat were the hypostases in the Divine Nature as propounded by Plotinus. In this second stage, there is no differentiation of one from the other or from the Dhat. The potentialities of the Dhat were thus first manifest in knowledge. In the third stage (or 2nd limitation) the knowledge of self became cognizance of Shuyunāt (Ann-Allaha kad ahāta bi kulli shayin 'ılma), God's knowledge surrounds all things. Existence becomes Life (Allahu la ilaha illā hual hayyul qayyum).2 There is no god, but God; He is ever living and supporting. Nür becomes Ego (La tudri-kuhul-absar). Eyes do not see His Dhat; and Power becomes will (fa'ālun limā yurīd).3 He does what He wills. When before their external manifestations, the Dhat realized Its potentialities, Its sight (Basr) was in evidence (Wa huwa Samiun basir), He is the hearer and the seer. When the requirements of these potentialities according to their aptitudes were realized, Hearing was in evidence Alam ya'lam-biann-allaha yarā. Do they not know that God sees. When in the same state, the Dhat attended to these requirements, it became speech, Kullimallahu Musa taklima (God spake unto Moses). Thus there was first the Dhat, the unknown and unknowable of Herbert Spencer about which Hadith has said la tafakkuru fi Dhatihi-wa-illa-tafakhakuru fi sifati (Do not contemplate on Dhat, but contemplate on Sifat). This is the stage of Ahdiyat. Then four i'tibarats (imaginary relations or hypostases) are found, knowledge of self, existence, light, power. This is the stage of Wahdat.

^{1.} Sura Talaq (lav. 12).

^{2.} Sura Bagara (ii. 255).

^{3.} Sura Hud (xi. 107).

The third stage is then reached, called Wāḥidī-yat in which knowledge of self becomes knowledge of Shuyūnāt; Existence becomes Life; Light becomes Ego; Power becomes Irāda (Will); and to these Sight, Hearing, and Speech are added as explained above. As six out of these attributes are dependent on existence; existence is shown first in calculation. Without existence, there could be no knowledge. Some others give knowledge the premier place in the i'tibārāt and call it Imām-ul-Āyimma; for without a cognizance of existence, existence is not realized—(Descartes' dictum of cogito ergo sum). Shaykh Muhīyyuddīn ibn 'Arabí and his followers belong to this school of thought. They say knowledge is realized only after the potentialities (shuyūnāt) have been realized: thus the Dhat is dependent on shuyunat for its own realization. Shaykh 'Abdul Karīm [īli in his Insān-ul-Kāmil is, however, of another mind. God is spoken of in the Our'an as as-Samad and ghani both meaning "Independent". This view of Ibn 'Arabi, he thinks, militates against His Independence He says that God has Personal knowledge; as He is aware of his shuyunāt without the relationship of the knower, the known and knowledge. These shuyunat in knowledge have their own peculiarities. Their peculiarities were their own, and God commanded them "to be" and they "became". Before their manifestation, God was aware of them. This school gives the premier place to Irada in the seven i'tibarat. They believe in the doctrine of volo-ergo sum. There is thus Dhat corresponding to Universal Consciousness (Ahdiyyat), a point appears in its disc (so to speak) and four i'tibārāt appear.

This is Wahdat called also the Reality of Muhammad (Haqīqat-i-Muhammadī). These i tibārāts were differentiated and became more pronounced; and seven sifāt (attributes) are in evidence. David asked of God, "O, Lord, where wert Thou, before Creation? "I was a hidden treasure, I loved to be known and created the world to be known." This is a Hadīth-i-Ṣaḥīḥ, though coming under the category of Da'īf. The Prophet was asked by one Abi Zarara, "where was God before creation?" (Ayna kana rabbuna qabla an khalaq-al-khalqa). The answer was: "He was in a cloud (ama); above which, there was no air and below which, there was no air." Man can contemplate as far as i'tibarat (Wahdat) but cannot pierce further. A screen always hides his view. Shaykh Muhiyyuddin ibn 'Arabi connected the ama with Ahdiyat, but other thinkers connect it with Wahidiyat i.e., the Dhat in these stages is covered by the ama (cloud of attributes or asma') and thus is indiscernible. Between Ahdiyat and Wahidivat is the line of demarcation (Barzakh); much as the present is a line of demarcation between the past and the future, or the imaginary line between the different hues of a rainbow. Wahdat is the dawning of self on self. Wahidiyyat is the dawning of self on its potentialities. Wahdat is the reality of Muhammad; and the world is a manifestation of that reality. It is said that the realities of the souls and bodies of the world are the details of the reality of the soul and body of Muhammad 1 A doctrine like this regarding Christ amongst the Christians might have given rise to the idea of transubstantiation, which however is traced to the festival of 'the Lord's supper.'

The reality of Muḥammad finally became the figure of Adam. According to Imām Qistalāni, Tahir ibn 'Abdulla Anṣārī said that Muḥammad (peace be on him) said, "the first thing which was created was the light of your Prophet, which was created from God." Another Ḥadīth says: "O Jabir, the first thing created was the soul of thy Prophet." A third: "I have a special time with God, in which is not contained the nearest angel or a sent Prophet." "I was a Nabī, while Adam was between water and mud." The Quranic text: "Muḥammad is not the father of any of you, but he is a Messenger of God and the Seal of the Prophets'' is explained by Najmuddīn-i-Kubra² to mean that he is not of your world.

^{1.} Haqāyiq Numa, commentary on Jum-i-Juhan Numa by Ibrāhīm Shuttari of Ahmedābād, p. 191.

The Wahābis who are the Puritans and literalists of Islam do not believe in the doctrine of the Reality of Muhammad.

The four i'tibārāt of the first limitation, Waḥdat, multiplied by the seven sifāt of the second limitation Wāḥidīyyat (called also Ummahat-us-sifāt, mothers of attributes) give 28 sifāt ergo 28 names, of which the world is a manifestation. The following diagram gives an idea of the 28 names both manifest and un-manifest.

^{1.} Sūra Ahzāb (xxxiii, 40).

^{2.} Mursad-ul-Ibad, p. 90.

Diagram showing descent from Ahdiyat to Perfect Man. The left hand arc shows Asmā'-i-Ilāhī (Divine names); and the right hand arc shows Asmā'-i-Kiyānī (Worldly names); and the middle line is the Barzakh between the two sets of names.

Translation of the Names and their Significance

No.	The 'Creator's Names	Translation	The Created Forms	Translation	The Arabic Letter corresponding to each
-	Badī	The Wonderful Originator	'Aql-i-kul	Absolute Reason	Нашха
7	Baich	The Cause	Nafs-1-kul	The Preserved Tablet	Ha
٣	Batin	The Unmanifest	Tahiyat-i-kul	Absolute Nature	Aiyn
4	Akbır	The Exterior	Jauher-i-Haba	Essence of matter	Hai
S	Zahir	The Manifest	Jism-i-kul	Absolute Corporeality	Ghain
•	Hakim	The Wise	Shakl-1-kul	Absolute Form	Khay
~	Muhit	The Surrounder	The Arsh	The Throne (of God)	Khaf
20	Shakur	The Multiplier of rewards	Kursī	The Seat	Qa f
0	Ghani	The Independent	Falak-ul-Manazil	ere	Gim
9	Muqtadır	The Exertor of influence	Falak-ul-Buruj	Zodiacs	Sheen
=	Rabb	The Supporter	Zubal	Saturn	Ĭ.a.
12	.Alim	The Knower	Mushtari	Jupiter	pez
13	Osbir	The Overwhelming	Marrikh	Mars	E E
Ť	Nur	The Light	Shams	The Sun	Nun
2	Musawwir	The Painter	Zubra	Venus	Ray
91	Mühsiy	The Recorder	Uțărid	Mercury	Toe
17	Muhaymin	The Guardian	Qamar	Moon	Dai
28	Qabid	The Curtailer of life	Nar	The Sphere of Fire	Ţay
19	Havy	The Life	Hawa	Air	ç ay
8	Muhiyy	The Quckener	Mā	Water	Sin.
21	Mumit	The Annihilator	Ard	Earth The Winerale	Sad
77	712V	I De Valued	Ma dail	The Minerals	7. C
2	Razzāq	The Providence	Nabatat	regetables	130
42	Muzil	The Degrader	Haywan	Animals	Lai
52	Qani	The Powerful	Maláyak	Angels	Fay
28	Latif	The Minute Observer	Jion	ומם	Bay
27	Jamı'	The Gatherer of all	Insan	Man	Meem
8 2	Rafi'-ud-Darajāt	The Elevator of Rank	Insan-ul-Kamil	The Perfect Man	wan

"We have issued two oceans that never mingle together; between them is a Barzakh, that is never removed." (Sura Raḥmān, lv: 19-20).

"I swear by the Lord of the Easts and Wests; that We are able to destroy them and substitute better than them in their places." (Sura Ma'ārif, lxx: 39). The left hand names are the Easts and the right hand names are the Wests referred to.

The first three stages or two limitations are called Zuhūr-i-'Ilmī (manifestation in knowledge) or Marātibillahi (Divine Ranks); and the succeeding three stages (Arwah, Mithal, Ajsam), which are manifestation of names are called Marātib-i-Kouni (worldly ranks). Each succeeding stage is a covering over the next higher one, i.e., the higher stage is obscured by its lower manifestation, while at the same time, the latter is the form of the higher one. The twenty-eight names have multiplied themselves by permutation and combination into innumerable names, in fact into as many names as there are drops in the Ocean. God has hidden Himself behind 70,000 screens of light and darkness (ie., names of beauty and glory.) (Inn-allahi taala sab'ina alfa hijabun min nurin wa zulumatin.) These are taiyunāts (limitations). But what is a limitation? It is so far as Existence is concerned, nothing else than Existence itself; while Existence in respect of limitation is not the reality of limitation, e.g., the form of a jug in respect of clay is nothing else than clay itself, while clay in respect of this form is not the Reality of the form. So also the simile of letters and ink. They call this doctrine, 'Ayniyat-i-haqiqi and Ghariyat-i-I'tibari. (The reality of sameness and differentiation in fancy). External figures are, therefore, the shapes of Existence. A Deccani poet, Maulānā Bhari has sung:

Yih rup tira rati ratti hay
Parbat parbat patti hay
Parbat men adiq na kam patti men
Yaksan rahayi ras aur ratti men
O Thou, Thy form is in each atom.
In mountains, so in leaves
Not big in mountains nor small in leaves
It is same in heaps as in atoms.

THE A'YAN-I-THABITA

Ghariyat-i-l'tibari. The twenty-eight attributes became twenty-eight names (asmā'). His first ism (name) was Badi (Greator), called also Qalm-i-A'la (the Pen). This name is the repository of all other names that ever manifest themselves. It has two sights. or to put it in modern phraseology, two angles of vision; one on its own entity or dhat, and the other on its attributes. From the first point of view, Baith came into being; and from its second, 'Agl-i-kul. Similarly from the personal view of Baith, the name Bātin came into being, from its attribute-aspect Nafs-i-kul; and so on till the last Divine name and its worldly counter-part (as in the diagram). Thus each name has its view on each succeeding name and through it on the one that succeeds it till the verv last. It is therefore said that the soul world has its sight on the material world. So long as Soul has its sight on Rafi'-ud-darajat, its counter part "Perfect man" is in evidence. When it shifts its sight to Al-Mumīt, its body dies and he lives in the mithāl world.

This being in descent, the upper-most reality is manifest in man Shaykh Muhibulla of Allahabad, a commentator of Fusus-ul-Hikum has said: Arawhina aisadina aisadina arwahina (our bodies are our souls, and our souls are our bodies). The first series of names are called asmā'-i-ilāhī (Divine names) or necessary names and their "counterpatts are called asma"-ikiyānī. Each ism in the first set taking a form ('ayn) bacame an ism-i-kivani just as Ahdivat taking a form became Haqiqat-i-Muhammadi. The influence that each ism (name) exerts on its counter-part is called the Divine Breath or inflatus (Nafs-i-Rahmāni). "There is no creeping creature on the earth, whose forelock is not in the hand of its rabb. That rabb is on the right path" (Wu ma min dabbatin fil arvi illa hua akhizum bi nasiyath-i-ha. Haza rabbt ala siratin musta ım. Each ism-i-Ilahi comprises all other asma' but goes by the particular name of that ism, owing to the predominence of its particular attribute:

Gulshan-i-Rāz says:

Agar ek katra ra dil bar shigafi Berun-ayad azo sad bahri safi

If you cleave the heart of one drop of water

A hundred pure oceans emerge from it.

This is known as the doctrine of Indiraj-i-kul fil kul.

(Pervasion or immanence of all in all).

Ghariyat-i-Ḥaqiqi. The doctrine of a'yan approaches very near to the aeons of the Christian gnostics; but the idea is centuries older than the Christian mysticism. It is the "Eternal Idea" of Plato (Archetypes), to which his immediate disciple, Aristotle had given the name of entelecheia. An "eternal idea" contains all that is to become manifest. The idea of Zayd in God's knowledge is the general idea of the man from his conception in the womb till his dust returneth unto dust, or still further till he journeys back through mithal, arwah and reaches the point from which he started.

^{1.} Neander's Church History quoted by Dr. Canon Sell in his Essays on Islam. p. 10.

Gulshan-i-Rāz again:

Kaz andar amad awwal ham bi dar shud Agar cheh dar maad az dar bi dar shud

Man returneth to the door from which he started Although in his search, he went from door to door.

The changes that take place are merely the unfolding of that idea; or as Zeller has put it, "though ideas are eternal and unchangeable, things are regarded as derivative, perishable and in constant change."²

In the first named theory, the descent is gradual from Aḥdīyat, Waḥdat, Wāḥidīyat, Ṣifāt, Asmā', and A'yān. At the last named stage, the differentiation between rabb and 'abd appears. In the second named, theory, there is God and his shuyūnāt. The shuyūnāt are both co-eternal with and disappearing in Dhāt like billows and the ocean.

According to the second theory, the manifestation of Badi was 'Aql-i-kul. When the latter realized its potentialities of manifesting a world, it prayed to Badi for a Companion, then Bāith the interior of Badi came into play, and manifested Nass-i-kul. By the conjunction of 'Aql-i-kul and Nass-i-kul, Ṭabiyāt-i-kul came into existence. Paracelsus has said, that this was a marriage between heavenly influences and terrestial objects to which the Grecian Theosophist gave the name of Gamahea (which the Ṣūsis call Izdawaj).¹ Then the product is a third ism. This, however, is liable to the objection that when a thing comes out of another thing, it must leave a blank in the latter.

^{1.} Outlines of the History of Philosophy, p. 145.

^{2.} Zeller's Outlines of the History of Philosophy, p. 145.

According to the first theory, the a'yān are fixed forms in the knowledge of God, they never come out leaving a blank there.

Al ayan-i-thabitatum ma shummut rahiya tul-wujud. (The a'yān have not smelt the smell of Existence), as remarked by Shaykh Akbar.² The difference between Plotinus of Alexandria and the Shaykh is this that while the former "refused to ideas any existence externel to our own minds" a sort of Berkelianism, the latter refused to Ideas any existence outside God's mind." The Grecian philosophers believed that aeons had come out of God's knowledge, and had an external existence.

As regards the mutability or immutability of a'yān, the same Muslim authority on Ghairyat-i-I'tibārī thinks that they are immutable, even in manifestation; for if they were mutable, they would indicate a change in the eternal knowledge of God—a hiatus of ignorance in Divine knowledge, which is unthinkable. Some hold that a'yān are immutable; but their peculiarities and effects are extension, and a'yān are essence. There can be no change in extension, without a change in essence. Shaykh Abū Sa'id Abul Khayr is of opinion that both a'yān and their effects are liable to change in the stage in which the lover himself becomes the beloved; Shuyūnāt disappear in Dhāt.

^{3.} R.A. Vaughan's Hours with the Mystics, p. 75.

^{4.} Fuşüş-ul-Hiham—Fusi-Idrisi.

Ishq-o-ashaq mahu gardad zin muqam Kud hamo mashuq manad wussalam.

Shaykh'Alā'ud-Dawlah Samnānī (the philosophergovernor of Samnān in Persia), the real founder of the Shuhūdīyyah School, and prototype of 'Abdul Karīm Jīlī is of the same opinion with the exception that though the distinction of "I" and "thou" disappears, duality still remains; the shadow (the world) cannot become the substance (God). The difference between the two schools is really owing to the point of view that each takes regarding the stage at which a'yān make their appearance.

From Falak-ul-Manāzil to Qamar in the diagram are the Planets, which work on the Inferior Material world, which is from the sphere of fire to Insān. The net result of this working is the production of Insān-ul-Kāmil (the Perfect Man). This no doubt leads to a belief in astrology and theurgy.

In astrology, the influence of heavenly bodies on the destiny of man is calculated. Man is a conglomeration of all the asmā', each heavenly body is a manifestation of a particular ism (name) and so the position or as it is called the sight, of a particular heavenly body has an influence on the destiny of a particular individual at a particular time. In theurgy ('Ilm-i-taksir) again, the influence of each of the 28 Arabic letters has an effect at a particular time. In the statement subjoined to the diagram, it will be seen that each ism is represented by a particular letter. When the Divine One emerged from selfabsorption. He became aware of Himself—this is the stage of Self-Love. (Fa ahbubtu-an-urifa.—He loved to be known. Vibrations brought about by Love gave rise to sounds which were the sounds of letters, and these sounds manifested themselves as asmā'-i-llahi. Like in the case of heavenly bodies in astrology, each sound, ergo, each letter of the Arabic alphabet represents an ism. If, therefore, an amulet is prepared, consisting of particular letters, the asma' represented by these letters must find their manifestation. The idea therefore is that a theurgist or Mashshāvikh who has selflessly practised in this art. can bring about a particular desired effect, by the manipulation of the Arabic letters. He is supposed to have permission from his Pir who grants him the same, after he is fully satisfied about the moral character or selflessness of his murid; the same precaution as is taken in the case of teaching Hypnotism or Mesmerism.

Thus in the manifest world, there is the soul-world and the material world and the barzakh (the intermediate stage), which is also called 'ālam-i-mithāl.

ALAM-I-ARWAH (THE SOUL-WORLD)

The first four Asmā'-i-Kiyānī form the soutworld. 'Aql-i-kul is the form of Existence of God's knowledge. It is called Qalam-i-A'ālā, (The Exalted Pen) in the language of shara. All individual souls are contained in this; and are, as an embodiment of one soul, called Rūb-i-A'zam (the Great Soul); and out of this, individual souls manifest themselves. Maulānā Rūmī says: "There is differentiation in the Animal Spirit; the Soul of Humanity is one."

Tafriqa dar ruhi haywani buwad Nafsi wahid ruhi insani buwad.

This doctrine is known in the West as Averroism. the doctrine of the Muslim philosopher of Spain, Averroes (Ibn-Rushd, 1126-1198) who maintained¹ "that the spirit or the rational part of the Soul is one in all. Individual Souls are the manifestation of this one Soul." Nafs-i-Kul is the breath of the Dhat and the embodiment of God's knowledge of Creation. All forms of Existence are impressed on it. It is also called Lawh-i-Mahfūz (the Preserved Tablet). Whatever was or is to happen is, as it were, written down by the Exalted Pen on this Tablet. In the first, God's knowledge finds a habitation; and in the second, it takes a shape. The second is also called Ummul-Kıtāb (Mother of Book). There are also called Exalted angels as they work out God's decrees automatically. Under them are minor pens and tablets (both minor angels). The decrees in these are liable to change, but not of the Preserved Tablet. The third is Tabiyāt-i-kul, (absolute nature); this too consists of angels and they mould Nature which is the nature of God according to which the nature of man is manifest. Fit-ratulla hil-lati fataran nasa alayhai. Jawhar-i-Ḥaba is the Essence of Matter (Prima matrix), the fourth angel, it is the nebula of which the creation is a manifestation as subsequently postulated by Kant and Laplace. It is the mercurial covering at the back of a mirror, which enables the mirror to reflect forms. Jism-i-kul is absolute corporeality. The first set of angels are called malā-i-a'alā (the highest angels); and they were not commanded to worship Adam.

^{1.} De Boer's History of Muslim Philosophy, p. 179.

The pre-natal existence of individual souls is acknowledged in the Qur'an, Sūra vii: 71. "The Lord drew forth their posterity from the loins of the sons of Adam." As the souls came out, they arranged themselves in four rows: the first row was of Prophets: the second, of saints, the third of believers, and the fourth of non-believers. It was asked: "Am I not your Lord?" they all said: "Yes"—, Again in Sūra xxiv: 35; "the body is compared to a lantern; the vegetable spirit, to the lamp: the instinctive spirit, to the oil; and the spirit of humanity to the fire that kindles. The Proverb (xx: 27) expresses the same idea. "The life of man is the lamp of the Lord." A Hadith related by 'A'yisha says: "Al-arwah-u junudun-mujunidum, fama taarafa minha italafa-wa-ma-man tanakara minha ikhtal fa. "Souls are a collected army. Those in it who recognised each other, begen to love each other, and those who did not recognize each other, were repugnant towards each other." Such was also the theory of Love, propounded by Plato. At the instigation of the Jews, says Ibn Khaldun, Nāşir ibnul Hārris and 'Utba proposed three questions to the Prophet: (peace be upon him) one of which was: What is the soul? To this, the Qur'an says, "They ask thee about the Soul. says: "Soul is the command (amr) of the Lord thy God." (Ar-Rühu min amr-i-rabbī): soul thus belongs to the world of command and comes after the first three stages (Ahdīyyat, Wahdat and Wāhidīyyat) and is in limitation. But the Our'an also says: Nafaktu fi hi min rūhi. We breathed unto him (Ādam) out of Our own Rūh. This soul is the Rūh-i-A'zam (Haqīqat-i-Muhammadī) which is the stage of Wahdat itself and is not under limitation. Though the individual soul is a limitation; it is free from matter and extension, and from colour and form. It is cognizant of self and notself, but not liable to be sensed by any of the senses. The limitations of Rūh-i-A'zam are the souls of men. and when such limitation is manifest in body, it becomes animal-spirit. It is subtle in nature, and each particle of it is connected with each particle of the body. This soul is liable to reward and punishment: as it alone tasted of the pleasures of the body. It is immortal in nature, and after the decay of the body assumes a thought-shape. In the theory of gradations (tanazzulāt), it has been said that each gradation is the form of the next higher grade, and the lowest grade is the form of all the higher grades up to the highest. It has been shown previously that as each ism-i-llāhī takes a form, it becomes an ism-i-kiyānī in the manifest world. Dhat with a relationship (attribute) becomes an ism, i.e., it is infinite and ism is finite. If the ism is inclined towards absolutism (Nirguna) it is ism-i-llāhī, if it sees form and is inclined towards finitism, (Sarguna) it is ism-i-kīyānī and becomes an 'ayn which is a shadow of ism-i-llāhī.¹ The first isma-i-llahi directly influences its isma-i-kiyānī and indirectly all the lower ism-i-kiyānī down to the lowest one. No sight reaches Him; He reaches the sight, the Subtle and Knowing; (Latudri kal absar, wa hua yudrikal absar wa hua latee-fun khabir)² Thus it is said that it has its sight or vision on its corresponding and lower asmā'.

In the "Book of Apples" attributed to Aristotle, the Essence of Soul is said to consist of knowing; and the punishment for not knowing is going down into still deeper ignorance. The spirit is described by Bergson as memory; and matter as succession of images. The Sufis, however, characterise Nafs with desire, Qalb with knowing, soul with sight, and ser with contemplating, and Dhat with appearing. Since the Dhat appeared, we appear, all images are of this appearance. Since the Dhat contemplated we contemplate; since the Dhat saw, we see (Light is the stage of soul); since the Dhāt knew, we know (stage of galb); since the Diat desired, we desire (Stage of Nafs); sight and not knowledge is thus the faculty of the soul. He who is blind here (in this world) will be blind in the next world and still worse (Man kāna fi hazi-hil a'ma fa-huwa fil akhirati a'ma wa azza'lu sabila.3 The author of "Shar-i-Muwafik" (p. 583) commenting on this, says that "the spirit will either be in ignorance or it will be in enlightenment. Those in ignorance will go from bad to worse. Those in enlightenment will suffer till they improve." The faculty of sight being the characteristic of the soul; the soul is said to be neither in the body, nor without it. The sun illuminates a house, the illumination is neither within the house nor without it. The soul has three sights: when its sight is on Dhat it is called Amin Rüh (the trusted soul), its sight is called Amin Nür. When its sight is on Mumkin-ul-Wujūd (thoughtworld), it is called Rüh-i-Muqim (stationary soul); and its sight is called Anā-Nūr (Ego-sight). When the soul's sight is on Wājib-ul-Wujūd (Causal Existence), it is called Ruh-i-Jari (the travelling soul), which leaves the body in sleep, and wanders about in the spirit world; and its sight is called Min-Nür. Rüh has a more influential sight on the body in wakefulness than in sleep. In sleep it has a more influential sight on mithal.

^{1.} Vide the marginal note to p. 140 of Jawakir-us-Sulak.

² Süra Rüm (xxx. 32).

^{3.} Sura Bani Isra'il (xvii. 72).

ALAM-I-MITHAL (THE WORLD OF SIMILITUDES)

This is the fifth limitation. It is the world of archetypes of Plato or the world of Correspondence of Emanuel Swedenborg. It is the borderland, between the soul world and the causal world. It does not consist of matter, yet it is dimensional, characterized by colour like the world of dreams.

It is also called 'Alam-i-Ghayb, a world that is outside our sight.

Ghayb ra abri wa abi digar ust Asman wu aftab-i-digar ust Nayad an illa ki bar pakan pidid Baqiyan fi labs min khalikin jadid

(Mathnawi)

The mithal world has clouds and rain of its own

Has a different sky and sun
This is not open to the eye of the ordinary man Who is deceived by the phantasma goria of the World.

Sir Sayid Ahmad Khān thought that whatever is outside our sight is Ghayb—like the force of gravitation; but this 'Alam-i-Ghayb is a real world corresponding to our World. There is pre-established harmony between the two, like the harmony of two clocks correctly set, or of the hand and the key which it turns. The very term material world," say Balfour Stewart and Tait¹ "is a misnomer, the world is a spiritual world merely employing matter for its manifestation. We are led by scientific logic to an unseen and by scientific analogy to the spirituality of the unseen. In fine, our conclusion is that the visible Universe has been developed by an intelligence resident in the Unseen."

It is not the world that comes after death which is also called mithāl or barzakh.² To the latter,³ the individual souls carry away the traits of character peculiar to them. Each individual reaps the fruits of his actions; and lives till the day of judgement, in what 'Abdul Karîm Jili call Hayakal-i-Khayālī (Thought-circles) or what Shaykh Shihābuddīn Maqtūl, known also as Shaykh-ul-Ishrāq, the exponent of Plato's Realism, called 'Ālam-i-Asbab (the world of objects); or what Shāh Walīullah Ṣāḥib of Delhi has called Nusma. Those who thus live in mithāl and are blessed souls have been described in the Qur'an as living in "crops of green birds." Thought is of two kinds, the thought that works through the brain called Khayāl-i-Muṭṭaṣil (attached thought); and the thought that does not work through the same is called Khayāl-i-Munfaṣil (separated-thought). The one is called Falsidical and the other Verdical in Mr. Meyer's "Survival of Human Personality." This latter work and Sir Oliver Lodges "Survival of Man," are replete with examples of recorded manifestations of veridical thought. Mithāl is therefore a veridical thought world; which is as real as, if not more real than this world; for what occurs in this world, first takes its shape there.

^{1.} The Unseen Universe, p. 221.

^{2.} At-Tahashshuf, Pert II, p. 5.

^{3.} Ibid., Part III, p. 4.

With the shapes of thought-world, angels descend on the Earth. Gabriel used to appear before the Prophet (peace be on him) in the form of Dihya Kalbi; Khizar also appears in the thought-body. 'Umar could appear before the army of Sariah ibn Rustam; and direct Sariah towards a certain mountain; while he himself was preaching from his minbar in the Mosque at Medina, Call it clairvoyance and clairaudience as you may. Munkir and Nakīr, the two angels that appear before the dead body in the grave, appear in thought-bodies. Actions are extensions in this world; their realities are Jawahir (Essence), that remain after extensions disappear. These Jawahir appear in the shape of 'behisht', etc., in the case of good actions and in the shape of fire in the case of evil actions, for the origin of evil is fire.

ALAM-I-AJSAM (THE CAUSAL WORLD)

From the diagram, it may be noted that asmā'-i-kiyani from 1 to 4 from the soul-world; these higher asmā' are the same as the Malā·i-A'alā' (which are unconsciously absorbed in the contemplation of God). They are the counter-parts of Badi, Bāith, Bātin, Akhar, which having taken forms (a'vān-i-thābita) have manifested their counterparts viz., Absolute Reason, Absolute Breath, Absolute Nature, Essence of Matter. From the fifth to the eighth in the diagram are mithal manifestations; and from nine to twenty-seventh are corporeal manifestations. Again from 8th to 17th are superior Fathers (Abā-i-'Ulawī); and from 18 to 27 are Inferior Mothers (Ummahāt-isiffi). The first set working on the second set produce the Persect man (Insan-ul-Kamil). Just as Badi contains in itself all the succeeding names; so does Insan-ul-Kamil contain in itself all the proceeding asmā'-i-kiyānī and is the representative of them all. Hence Insan-ul-Kamil is the Vicegerent of God on the earth. Thus has God made man in His own image. (Khalay-al-Insana ala suratihi). Some commentators take He (His) to mean "Man's image," i.e., God created man, in man's own image; since every asmā'-i-kiyānī is a figure of every ism-ilāhī, no superiority of man is made out by such an explanation. Man therefore is the representation of all names. St. Anthony, a Christian Mystic Father 1 is said to have observed 20,000 angels dancing a saraband on the point of a needle, i.e., on the dhat of man, there is a display of manifold sifat and asma'. The angels in the Malā-i-A'alā' were not commanded to worship Adam: for when Iblis refused to prostrate himself before

^{1.} Clodd's The Pioneers of Evolution, p. 17.

Adam saying: "Thou hast created me out of fire and him out of earth" (Khalag-tana min nari-w-khalag-tahu min teen)." God said: "What has prevented thee from prostrating before him, whom I have created with both my hands. What! You showed pride or went thou of the Malā-i-A'alā' (Mā man'aka an tasjuda limā khalaqtu bi yadia astakbarata am kunta minal 'alimin).1 Excepting the malā-i-A'alā, all angels worshipped Ādam. i.e.. all other Kivānī names are sub-servient to Ādam, who is the embodiment to all Kiyani names. Hence man has not to worship any particular Kiyani name or names; he is not to worship the god or angel of fire, or of air, or of earth, though he knows that these are incessantly working out their allotted task. Besides each name is a "limitation". Without keeping the "named" in view, a particular aspect of it cannot be worshipped If the "unlimited" and "unnamed" is in view, the worship of it through a particular name will be justifiable. But this is impossible in the nature of things. The author of Gulshan-i-Raz says:2

Mussulman gar bi danisti ki buth chist Bi danisti ki-din dar buth paras thist Agar mushrik zi din agah gushti Kuja dar din-i-khud gumrah gushti Na dyd wu dar buth illa khulqi zahir Badan illat shud undar shara Kafir.

If the Mussulman but knew what is faith, He would see that faith is idol-worship. If the polytheist only knew what idols are, How would he be wrong in his religion;

^{1.} Sire Sid, zxxviii. 75.

^{2.} Whinfield, p. 84.

He sees in idols naught but the visible creature; And that is the reason that he is legally a heathen.

After Jawhar-i-Haba, is the 'Arsh or the throne of God, which encircles the Universe: there are four angels bearing this throne. Within the cavity of the 'arsh, there is the Kursī (seat) in the form of a square. On this seat, there are the two feet of God (glory and grace). From this seat, shine forth on the earth, the glory and grace of God; the latter over-shadowing the former. Then the crystalline sphere which is subject to constant changes, hence constant changes in the Universe, brought about by this firmament. The succeeding names all culminate in Insān-ul-Kāmil; the developed tree finally ending in the seed from which it sprang.

To put the whole theory in a nutshell, the Dhāt saw itself in sifāt; this was a tajallī (illumination). The Sifāt are like the mercurial coating of the mirror. This coming into being of illumination, gave rise to duality. This illumination manifests itself as soul,—when soul saw itself, it was mithāl, the coating of the mirror of soul was body—for there can be no reflection, without a coating. When the coating of the body and the gaze of the seer disappear, the seer (the Soul) itself remains. So also, finally when the Dhāt's gaze disappears, the soul disappears, and Absolutism alone remains.

Chapter VI

INSAN-UL-KAMII.

In the diagram in the "Theory of Emanation," after the first three stages, Ahdīyyat, Waḥdat and Wāḥidīyat, twenty-eight asmā'-i-ilāhī with their tewenty eight asmā'-i-kiyānī are shown in the downward arc of descent, the last ism reached is Insān-ul-Kāmil, corresponding to the name Allah, the top-most point in the arc. Thus man embraces the spiritual, the mithāl and the physical worlds. The Qur'ān says, Sanurihim ayātina fil āfaqi, wa fī anfusihim hatta yatabayyana lahum annahul haqqu.' "We shall show them our signs both in the horizons and in their individualities, so that it may be made clear to them that this is the truth."

SPIRITUAL ASPECT

The first four asmā'-i-ilāhī viz., Badī, Bāṭin, and Ākhar, with their corresponding asmā'-i-kiyānī, the Absolute Reason, Absolute Breath, Absolute Nature and the Essence of Matter form the Soul-world. The next three asmā', Zāhir, Ḥakīm and Muḥīt with their corresponding asmā'-i-kiyānī, Absolute Corporeality, Absolute Form, and the Throne from the mithāl world. In the first stage of Aḥdīya the name Allah is really the named. The soul-world is the soul of the name Allah, and the mithāl-world is the heart of the same name. Of the remaining twenty-one asmā,' ten form the celestial fathers and ten the mundane mothers, the result of these being Insān-ul-Kāmil, the 28th name.

Haq jani jahan ast wa jahan jumla badan Arwah wa malayk chu havasi ein twn Aflak wa muwalid wa anasir aza Tawhid hamin ast digar shewa wa fan All are parts of one stupendous whole Whoes body Nature is, and God the Soul.

When the Dhat inclines itself towards Itself, it is named Wājib-ul-Wujūd, (Necessary Existence); and when It inclines towards Its Sifat, it is named, Mumkin-ul-Wujūd (Contingent Existence). Mumtaniul-Wujud (Negative Existence) is like the fabulous bird 'Unqa which has a name, but no existence. In Ahdiyyat again, the i'tibārāt are suppressed: in Wahdat, they are in evidence, and in Wahidivat, they become manifest and show themselves as sifat. These three form the stage of La Bi Shart-i-Shay. In the soulworld, the i'tabar of knowledge becomes the knowledge of sifat. When His knowledge is that He is active, the ism becomes 'Aql-i-kul; when knowledge is that He is passive, the ism becomes Nafs-i-kul. When the Dhat finds itself immanent everywhere in the seen world, the ism becomes Tabīyat-i-kul; when it finds itself manifested everywhere, it is Shakl-i-kul; and when it finds itself as thingness of things (Ding an sich of the Germans), it becomes Jism-i-kul and so on in the soul and mithal worlds. These two latter worlds form the stage of Bi Shart-i-La Shay, The four i'tibarat in Wahdat and the seven sifat in Wahdiyat have no opposites; they are personal. The seven asma' in the soul and mithal worlds have no opposites. After Al-'Arsh, materiality begins (Bi Shart-i-Shay) and asma' appear in opposite, e.g., Hadi (one leading aright) as opposed to Mudhil (one leading astray); Muhivy (the quickener) as opposed to Mumit (the Killer). The Our'an says, Khalagallahu saaba samawatin thumma stawa alal arsh1 "God created the seven heavens and took his stand on the 'Arsh'' ie., after Al-'Arsh His opposite and contrary asma' (Jalali and Jamālī) make their manifestation; and variety and diversity begin the world. These manifestations of names in the material world culminate in Insan-ul-Kāmil. Just as the name God 'is conglomerate of all asmā'-i-ilāhī, the name Insān is conglomerate of all asmā'-i-kiyānī. Man is thus 'abd, the opposite of rabb, and appears at the lowest point in the arc of Tanazzulät, opposite the name Allah, which is at the highest point. He is composite of both Jalali (glorious) and Jamālī (beautiful) names; for God made man with both His hands. He is a manifestation of all names that come under this category. In fact everything is a Mazhar-i-Atamm, that is, it contains all asmā' in itself,

Agar yak qatra ra dil bar shigafi Burun ayad azu sad bahr-i-safi

(Gulshan-i-Raz)

If you cleave the heart of one drop of water.

A hundred pure oceans emerge from it.

but it has the potentiality of manifesting one ism or a few asmā' while man has the potentiality of manifesting all the known asmā'. The form of the ^{1.} Sūra xvii : 54 : x · 3.

Prophet (peace be upon him) in God's knowledge is that of the ism Hadi (one who rightly guides); but in manifestation, the name sometimes assumes the aspect of Mudil. The Our'an has been the same from the very first; not a jot or title of it has changed; yet there are as many as 72 sects (and innumerable subsects) in Islam brought about by its interpretations. One interpretation alone can be true and the rest false. The form of the Prophet in 'alam-i-arwah is that of the name hadi; but in the causal world, his teaching has been misappreciated by some people; and to these latter, he stands in the name of Mudil. Each man's form in the mithal world is that of hadi. and he must work up to that name; but owing to different influences of the world, he becomes the manifestation of mudil, which is the dross that is to be burnt up, for the alloyed gold to become pure. "Thus was man created in the best form and sent down to the worst plane"—Khalaqul-insana fi ahsani taqwim thumma radadnahu asfala safilin. Iblis also is a part manifestation of the name Insan-ul-kamil in the material world. He is a form of the name Mudil (one leading astray) in the Spiritual World.

Khalaqar-Rahmānu ala sūralihi, "God made man in His own image." God has the attributes of Living, Knowing, Powerful, Willing, Hearing, Seeing, and Speaking; so also Man has these attributes, but in limitation. God is Dhāt unlimited; man is Dhāt limited. God has Sifāt and asmā', all known to Himself, man has knowledge of some sifāt and asmā'; for there are sifāt and asmā' of His, which are known only to Himself and to no created being. God is eternal by Himself, man is eternal so far as God's knowledge is concerned; and God's knowledge is eternal. Thus man is an image of God; but not in the sense, in which a clay-idol is a model of a real person. Kabīr Dās has put this idea in his own blunt way:

Har ko kya puchhat ho, Kaya butaun har kaysa hai Kaya khunti say bandhun bhainsa hai Ya hath men de dun paisa hai Tu jaysa hai har waisa hai

What do you ask about God? How can I show what He is like. Is It a buffalo to be tied to a peg, Or a coin to be passed over to you? He is like what you are.

Three persons are said to have been interrogated by Imām Jāfar-i-Ṣādiq regarding God. One said, "I worship a God, who possesses all the attributes." The Imām said he worshipped a man-god or an idol; since eating, drinking, dying are all the attributes of a created being. These are the pantheists. Another said he worshipped a God who had no attributes. The Imām said he worshipped a nothingness (Philosophical nihilism like that of Buddha). And the third said he worshipped a God who had the attributes of perfection, and was devoid of the attributes of imperfection and decay, which are attributes in limitation that are manifest from the side of Adam. The Imām said, he worshipped the true God of the heaven and the earth.

The word Insan is variously derived—some derive it from uns, love; some derive it from nas forgetfulness, because life on earth begins in forgetfulness and ends in forgetfulness. Some say the word comes from 'ayn san, "Like the eye." Man is the eye with which God beholds His sifat and asma' in limitation; Insan-ul-Kamil is thus the mirror in which God's sifat and asma' are fully reflected. Gulshan-i-Rāz says:

Adam ayina alam aks wa insan Chu chashm-i-aks dar way shakhs pinhan Tu chashm-i-aks-i-wa wa nur-i did ast Bi dida dida-i-ra dida did ast

Not being is the mirror, the world the reflection and man

Is as the reflected eye of the Unseen Person You are that reflected eye and He the light of the eye,

In that eye His eye sees His own eye.

To Insān-ul-Kāmil, God is not a screen from His creation, and creation is not a screen from the Creator. He becomes equipoised in both directions. (Māsāwiy-ut-ṭarfayn). He is one who has performed his sulūk (pilgrimage) in God (Sayr-fillah) and with God (Sayr)-ma Allah), and reached the point of Ḥaqīqat-i-Muḥammadī, which is Qaba-Qawsayn awa adna, the point at which the two arches of the bow meet and still nearer than that." He becomes the axis around which the whole existence turns and sheds light on the heart of other created beings. In fact, he is the direct pattern of Ḥaqiqat-i-Muḥammadī and the rest of mankind are indirect patterns or copies of his individuality. This is what Shaykh Ibn 'Arabi calls "the wisdom of individuality" in his chapter on Fusi-Muḥammadī. Creation began with Muḥammad(peace be upon him) i.e., with Ḥaqīqat-i-Muḥammadī; and the wisdom of existence completely manifested itself in his individuality. "I was a Nabī" he said, "when Ādam was yet between water and mud" Ana nabiyyun wa Adamu baynul mai wat-tin, i.e., I was Nabī, while Ādam was yet in the knowledge of God, and had not taken his earthly form.

The name God is also conglomerate of the names. Awwal (the First), Batin (the internal), Zahir (the external), and Akhir (the last). To the first name, corresponds the world of a 'yān-i-thābitah (or the soul world—names 1 to 4); to the second, alam-i-mithal (names 5 to 7), to the third, 'alam-i-shahadat (the causal world—the rest of the 21 names), and to the fourth, 'alam-i-akhirat (the future world) (names partly revealed and partly not revealed). Thus the name 'abd is a conglomerate of all these asma': it comprises all the asmā'-i-kiyānī, which is dhāt with attributes in limitation, just as God comprises all the asma'-i-ilahi which is dhat with infinite and unlimited attributes. 'Abd does not merely mean a servant, it conveys the idea that it comprises all the asma' acted upon, subservient (murbub), in opposition to all the asma' that act and that are masters (rabb).

The perfect 'abd could not fully and completely manifest himself in all his perfections all at once, as the world was not prepared to receive him; and so each item of his perfection manifested itself from time to time according to the requirements of the world. The Mathnawl puts the idea thus:

Nam-i-Ahmad nam-i-jumla anbiyast Chun ki sad amad nawad ham peishi mast

The names Ahmad is conglomerate of the names of all Prophets

When you have one hundred, ninety also in with you.

Hence the Qur'an says: "Do not differentiate between any of God's Prophets" (La nufarriqu bayna ahadin min rusulihi).¹ The perfect 'abd appeared in the fullness of time in "the Seal of the Prophets." The line of Prophets here ends; but the line of Walīs, the interior aspect of Prophetship still continues. Sri Krishnā is reported to have said:

Chu ahwali dunya bi gardad khasai Numayim khud ra bi shakli kasai

When the affairs of the world get rotten I show myself in the form of somebody.

A wali ascends to the highest point of the arc, and loses his self; so whatever emanates from him is the work of God. He becomes the instrument of God (Qurb-i-Farāyid); a Prophet descends (in his Satarma-Alla) after reaching the very same point, with Divine attributes, to the lowest point of the arc for the benefit of humanity; and God becomes his instrument (Qurb-i-Nawāfil). A Prophet has to coordinate and harmonize the affairs of the world. Ya Dandu inna ja'alnaka khalifatan fil-ardi fahkum bainunnāsi bil ḥaqqi wa lā tattabi' ul-hawa." "O David, We have made thee our vicegerent on the earth, so that you rule over the people with justice."

The ism Zāhir requires diversity of asmā'. When the asmā' are manifest, they become a'yān-i-khārija (the manifest a'yan); and there is conflict of interest among them. The rabb is satisfied and pleased with its own murbūb. The ism hādī (one who guides aright) is pleased with its own murbūb—those rightly guided, i.e., those who say their prayers, the charitable, the kind. etc. And the rabb-i-mudil (one who leads astray) is pleased with its own murbūb—the profligate, the cruel, etc. Hence Jesus Christ's prayer to the Lord: "Lead us not into temptation but delive." us from evil." (Luke II-4), i.e., God in His name Mudil leads us astray, and in His name Hādī guides us into the right path. The Our'an says: Mā min dābbatin illā hua akhizun bi nāsiyatha inna rabbi 'ula sirātin musiagim.2 "Of the creatures that creep on the earth, the forelock of each one of them, is in the hand of its rabb and that rabb is on the right path." This is like each member of the Parliament thinking himself on the right path, or each party of the Parliament indulging in its own justification. To keep these jarring elements, in order, a Speaker is required. And so to keep the jarring and antagonistic asma' in order, a manifestation of the name Hadi is required; and this manifestation is a Prophet who distributes justice according to everyone's due and according to everyone's 'ayn. One lakh and forty-four thousand Prophets, and more, have appeared, till the full manifestation of Ḥaqīqat-i-Muḥammadī appeared in Muḥammad (peace be upon him). Whatever is manifest in the world is immanent (mundarij) is Ḥaqīqat-i-Muḥammadī; and the latter is immanent in the Absolute God (Dhāt-i-Muṭlaq). Hence there is no "and" in the Muslim Kalima, which says "there is no allah, but God, Muḥammad is the Prophet of God"; although the two parts of the Kalima are taken out of different places in the Qur'ān.

^{1.} Sūra xxxviii : 26.

^{2.} Sūra xi . 56.

PHYSICAL ASPECT

The Physical world is the manifestation of the name—Az-Zāhir. Just as the soul-world and the mithāl-world as found in man, the Physical Universe is also found in him in miniature. The twenty names from Al-'Arsh, (the Throne or Empyrean) to Insān (man) are found in him thus,

- 8. Kursi (the seat)—Primum—Mobile—Skull.
- 9. Crystalline Sphere (Firmament of no stars)—
 Membranc in the skull.
- 10. Zodiacs—(Firmament of fixed stars)—vide
 'X' below
- 11. Sature-Spleen.
- 12. Jupiter-Liver.
- 13. Mars—Kidneys.
- 14. The Sun—The black spots in the heart.
- 15. Venus-Gall-bladder.
- 16. Mercury—the brain.
- 17. The moon—Lungs.
- 18. Sphere of Fire—Bile.
- 19. Water-Phlegm.

- 20. Sphere of Air—Blood.
- 21. .. Earth-Black Bile.
- 22. Minerals—The Teeth.
- 23. Vegetables—Hairs and nails.
- 24. Animal—Lust.
- 25. Angels—Good Khatras (or affections of the mind)
- 26. Jin-Suspicions of the mind.
- 27. Man-The mind.
- 28. The Perfect Man—the conglomerate of all above.
- (X) the Zodiacs are represented thus in the body:
 - 1. Head—Ram (Aries).
 - 2. Neck—Bull (Taurus).
 - 3. Hands-Twins (Gemini).
 - 4. Nipples—Cancer.
 - 5. Breast—Lion (Leo).
 - 6. Heart—Ear of Corn (Virgo).
 - 7. Navel—Balance (Libra).
 - 8. The private part—the Scorpion.
 - 9. Thighs—arches (Sagittarius).
 - 10. Buttocks-He-goat (Capricorn).
 - 11. Legs—Watering-Pot (Aquarius).
 - 12. Soles—Fishes (Pisces).

The twelve gate-ways in the human body also represent the twelve constellations of the Zodiacs In man, there are said to be 360 bones, which represent mountains; 360 arteries and veins which represent rivers and streams. The stomach is the ocean replete with reptiles. Hairs on the skin are the trees; the teeth are carnivora; birds represent Spirituality. Face is the populated area; and back, the barren land.

Infancy is spring; youth, summer; old age, winter; dotage, autumn. Health and wealth-represent Paradise; poverty, hell. The tongue represents Gabriel; and nose, Isrāiil: body, Michāil: ears, Izrāil, Insān (man was from eternity in the original knowledge of God, and he is there, even now as he then was (Al-ana kama kana): and he will be there for ever: for God's knowledge is eternal; and a hiatus in it is unthinkable, which will be the case if he disappears from there. Death in his case is merely disappearing from the ism Az-Zāhir, into the ism Al-Bātin, Sleep and forgetfulness are reversion to the first stage of Ahadiyvat, in which the Dhat was self-absorbed. God, one of whose names is Al-Ghani (the independent) created man by His wish, i.e., will. The same wish appeared in man in the shape of Helplessness. Fear and Sorrow. God thus is all powerful; and man, all powerless; the one has the consciousness of fulness and the other of emptiness.

SYMBOLICAL ASPECT

Once Hadrat 'Alī was delivering a sermon, and was so absorbed in himself that he gave out Anā nuqtu bai Bismillah; anā Qalamun wa anā Lawhun mahfūzun, anā 'Arshun wa anā Kursīyun wa anā Samawāt (I am the point of ba of Bismillah, I am the Pen, I am the Preserved Tablet, I am 'Arsh, etc.) Now that the Dhāt is undefinable; its definition like that of the Euclidian point is negative. It is more possible to say what it is not than what it is. When the Dhāt threw out its shadow, it became cognizable. Alam tara ıla rabbika kayfa maddaz-zilla. "Do you not see how your rabb has lengthened His shadow?" When this point lengthened itself into seven points, it became cognizant of itself. Arabic calligraphists make an Alif, of the length of seven points. When these seven points appeared, Ahdiyyat became Wāḥidīyyat. These are the seven sifāt, 'Ilm, Nūr Wujūd, Shuhud, Sama', Basar, Kalam (Knowledge, Light, Existence, Observance, Hearing, Sight and Speech). With the appearance of these sifat, and with still further devolution, Wājib-ul-Wujūd (Necessary Existence) became Mumkin-ul-Wujud (Contingent Existence). The Alif tilted from perpendicularity to horizontality, and became Bay which is really an Alif with a dot below. Now this alif is found in all the 28 letters of the Arabic Alphabet, either straight or curved, i.e., the Necessary Existence pervades all forms of existence in the manifest and unmanifest worlds.

The word "Allah" in Arabic is really Al-Ilah (abridged by usage into Allah) composed of four perpendicular lines (alifs) and a line, which is a part of ha and a half circle which is a part of the same letter. The mineral world consists of lines—one stright alif (the trunk) with some horizontal alifs, as branches, and a root below (ha)

Her giya hi ki az zamīn ruyad Wahdahu lā sharīka lah guyad

Every blade of grass that sprouts out Proclaims 'He is one without a partner.'

A bird consists of one horizontal alif (the body) with two alifs below (legs), and two above (wings) and a hay (head) in a horizontal position. A quadruped, consists of one alif horizontal (body), four alifs below (legs) and a hay (head) in horizontal position. In man, the body forms one alif, hand and legs form four alifs and the hay the head. Here the tree gets bodily upside down, the root is thrown up in the air. and the branches are planted on the ground. The name Allah is found inscribed on the face of man: the first alif begins from top of one ear and goes downwards; the four alifs are, two on each cheek and two beside the nose, on each side, the ha is the other ear, vide diagram No. 1 (p. 87). The Hand of the man with its four fingers and a thumb form the same name and the body of man is modelled after the Arabic name Al-Ilah. When a wild beast stares a man in the face, it is overcome with fear, owing to the delineation of this word on his face. Similarly the name Muhammad (peace he upon him) is delineated on the face of man, vide dragram No. 2 (p. 87) and also on each perpendicular half of his body. The head forms the mim, the hand ha, the waist and the thigh another mim and the foot, dal. Devout Muslims wish to be laid in their death-bed in such a posture that half or upper side of their body (in horizontal position) gives rise to a curvature which forms the delineation of the letters of the word. Muhammad in Arabic, i.e., they wish to lie in Barzakh-i- Muhammadi or the Barzakh of Insan ul-Kamil 1 ^{1.} Vide Risāla-i-Ism-i-Dhāt (unpublished) by Ḥaḍrat Makhdum ibn Abdul Nabi Savi; and Tajalliyāt-i-Rahmāni by Saiyid 'Alī Muhammad Ḥasaynī, pp. 144-145.

DIAG. No. 1.

DIAG. No. 2.

Chapter VII

FANA AND BAQA

Fanā in its literal sense is the state of a shay (thing), that does not last, i.e., when permanence of the state comes to an end, it is said to have attained fanā. The world will attain the state of Fanā: and the Futurity will remain in bagā (Wal akiratu khiarun wa abga). Fanā is not considered to be an attribute; it is not like a dissolution, as of sugar in water. The author of "Kashful-Mahjūb" thinks that it is not the disappearance of essence. Bagā is that which was not, and became: and will not subsequently become Fana, like heaven and hell. It is also that which was not non-existent before, and will no be non-existent afterwards like the Essence of God. The Mutakallimin (the Muslim Scholastic Theologians) consider that Fanā is the process of the becoming nought of the attributes of a shay; and Baqā is the everlastingness of the same attributes With the Sufi, Fana is the non-cognizance of one's attributes as one's own; and Baqa is the recognition of the same as the attribute of God. In Fana, the 'abd has no consciousness of his self, i.e., his self does not exist for him; but he is conscious "only of the manifester, the manifested and the manifestation." So long as you are present in your own sight, God disappears, and when He is present in your sight, you disappear. Take an example, when you are concentrated on words, you lose sight of ink, and when you are concentrated on ink, you lose sight of words. Shah Kamal, a Ṣūfī poet of Gurrumkondah in Cuddapah has said:

Dhāt-o-sifāt mere Dhāt-o-sifāt unke Bande mein aur Khuda mein nisbet isay kayhte hain.

My attributes and my essence are His attributes and His Essence,

This is what forms relationship between 'abd and God.

In Fanā, the significance of the possible disappears in the consciousness of the 'āriff; the material body of him, of course, does not. Some consider that Fanā is the disappearance of a shay in knowledge, and not the actual disappearance of corporeality. Others consider that it is disappearance in sight.

Some others, again, consider that it is the disappearance of the "I"ness (Ego) of 'abd in the "I"ness of God. In Fanā, the 'abd finds these limitations (tai-'yunāt as the limitation of God and spreads his "Iness" everywhere. In baqā, he finds everything as his own manifestation. The limited consciousness of 'abd is lost in the unlimited consciousness of God. In Baqā, the consciousness of God underlies the consciousness of 'abd. Jalālud-dīn Rūmī says:

'Ilm-i-Ḥaq dar 'ılm-i-ṣūfi gum shawad Aein sakhun kai bawari mardum shawad 'Ilm-i-Ḥaq nuqt ast wa 'ilm-i-ṣūfi khat Az wujud nuqt bashad bud-i-khat,

The consciousness of God is lost in the consciousness of suff

How can common people believe in this.

Sufis' knowledge is line and God's knowledge, point.

The existance of a line depends on the existence of point.

The Ṣūfī thus finds his self annihilated; and also himself without the self everlasting. This is cosmic consciousness, which the Qur'ān has called Muqām-i Maḥmūd (the Praised Station), which is reserved for the Prophet (peace be upon him); and from which he will plead for intercession on the Day of judgment.

St. Bernard, the mystic of Rhineland, of the 14th century identified his own thoughts with the mind of God. With the Christian Mystics of Germany, annihilation was not making nought of the reality of 'abd, but it was making nought of the aspect of humanity in Divinity. It is said that the question of Khilāfat was, in the first instance, determined by the answer given to the question of Fanā and Baqā.

When it was announced that the Prophet (peace be on him) had departed this life, the people gathered together at Thaqīfa Banī Sā'ida, and went up to 'Alī his cousin and son-in-law (husband of his beloved daughter Fāṭima), and said: "What is your vision of God?" He said: "I do not see shay, but I see only God." (Ma raytu shayan illa raytullah). Then they went to 'Othmān, another son-in-law and put the same question to him. He said: "I do not see shay, but I see God after it" (Ma raytu shayan illa raytullah ha badabu). Then to 'Umar. He said: "I do not see shay, I see God before it" (Maraytu shayan illa raytullah ha qublahu). Then they went to Abū Bakr. He said: "I do not see shay but I see God along with it" (Ma raylu shayan illa raylullah ha ma a hu). Now about the time of the demise of the Prophet, there were 144,000 companions, (according to the article on "Aṣḥāb" in Hughes' "Dictionary of Islam"). The electorate thought that although the "vision of God" of 'Ali was the most perfect, yet it was too impracticable to steer the ship of the state, and so they elected Abū Bakr, who had both the rabb and 'abd in view at the same time, to be the first Caliph of Islam.

In fanā, the essence, attribute and action of 'abd become the essence, attribute and action of God, and not that those of 'abd are dissolved like sugar in water, in the essence, attributes and actions of God. The 'abd has no consciousness of "Other than God" (ma-siwālla). God becomes actor, and 'abd becomes His instrumentality (Qurb-i-Farā'yiḍ). Jalālud-dīn Rūmī has expressed this in the form of an allegory:

Nuh guft ay sar kashan man man nayam Man zi jan mardum zi janna mi ziyann Chun bi murdam az hawas-i-bul bashar Haq mara shud sam-o-idrak-o-busar Chun ki man man nis tam, aein dam zi oust Peish i aein dam har ki dam zad kaffir oust

Said Noah to his nation, "I am not I"
I am not, It is God that lives.
When the "I" ness disappears from the sense of man,
It is God that talks, hears and understands
When the "I" is not I, the "I" is the breath of God

It is a sin to assert one's "I" with Him.

The reverse process in which 'abd becomes actor; and God his instrumentality is called Qurb-i-Nawafil (wabi yasmau wa bi yabsuru) - Through Me, he hears and through Me, he sees. Those who see the world in evidence, and the Truth hidden are called the men of reason (zawil-'aql); and those who see the Truth in evidence and the world hidden are called the men of sight (Zawilayn). The Fana is said to be of two kinds, the fana in essence like ice or hail disappearing in water, and the Fana in attributes, like iron disappearing in fire, protem. In the first instance, the 'abd becomes Him (Hu-Hu); in the second, he becomes like Him (Ka anna hu-hu). The first Fana, which is in Dhat is the privilege of the Prophet (peace be on him), and none else; since the Reality of Muhammad was the first cognition of God as Himself. This is not the name of a mere state of consciousness. Bāyazīd-Bisṭāmī has said that everybody has his state (hal). Hal is the result of thought—the Perfect man is not subject to thought, he has the reality of illumination; his mind's eye (oculus cordis as the Latin mystics called it) is opened, and he is illumined; and Baga is not therefore the mere result of ecstacy (wajd). Fana is attained in various ways. In the first instance, there is the attraction from God. The Qur'an says that "An attraction from God is equal in effect to the virtues practised in both the worlds (jaz batun min jazbat ilahi mutawazi min amalith thaqalayn. A Hadith says: "There is a time for me with God, in which neither the nearest angels, nor the sent prophets can be contained ("Li mallahu waktum la yas ani fi hil malikkil muqarabun wa la nativyil mursalun. The term Fanā was made use of to express the sense of the result of attraction and absorption by AbūSa'id Ahrār. In the second instance. it is realised by the observance of ahkām-i-Sharī'at (the Ordinances of Shari'at), an account of the spiritual significance of which, will be given in the Chapter on the "Five Pillars of Islam". The esotericism of the Shari'at is the establishment of connexion between Rabb and 'abd. The exotericism of the same—is the maintenance and practice of certain bodily actions. (i.e.,) certain bodily actions must be performed to keep up this connexion. Loyalty to the King is the Summun bonum of life, corporal life of an individual or the corporate life of a community. When once loyalty is established, it must be kept up. Otherwise, with disuse, it might lose its strength and vitality. Use and disuse have played a most important part in the formation of the organised world. By the process of use and disuse. Charles Darwin thought, new species evolved and old species disappeared. Similarly use and disuse play an important part in preserving, strengthening, and perfecting a feeling. The sense of oneness with God can be maintained by the performance of certain acts. These acts are the ordinances of Islam, which are compulsory on all Muslims. The acts can never be dispensed with, seeing that human nature is what it is. Adepts have, however, devised short-cuts to the attainment of a knowledge of God. There are as many ways to God, as there are souls of men (Al-turqu ilallahi ka nufus-i-bani adama)

^{1.} Qur'an, xxii : 46.

Excepting the Azād-mashrab-Ṣūſīs who have discarded outward demonstration, all are agreed in keeping up the law and the Prophets. A Pīr-i-Kāmil is therefore one who strictly observes the outward law, while, he adopts his own short method. This method consists in what is called sulūk (pilgrimage). The course on the downward arc is the Tanazulāt-i-sitta (the six downward stages) vide the "theory of emanation." It is the Journey of God towards 'abd, the journey of the ocean towards the drop. The course of the 'abd in the corresponding upward arc is his own sulūk, it is the journey of 'abd towards God; the journey of the drop towards the ocean; it consists of four stages according to Shaykh 'Abdal Karīm al-Jīlī.

Ist Safar-ullah. 1—This journey of 'abd towards knowledge, journey from sinfulness towards submission to ceremonial institutions.

Second Safar-italiah.—Journey fromneglectfulness towards the repetitions of God's name or of the ism of which the 'abd is a manifestation (according to Kaisari).

Third Safar-fillah, i e., journey back on the lines of God's names and attributes.

Fourth Safar-billah.—When the sālik (pilgrim) reaches the summit, he comes down again to the lowest point with the attributes of God for the reformation and enlightenment of the world. 'Gulshan-i-Rāz'' says:

Kasi mardi-tamam ast az tawammi

1. Jawahir-us-Suluh, p. 10.

Kounad ba khwaja ji karey ghulami,

He is the perfect man who with his perfection, And in spite of his mastery, does the work of a slave.

In the safar-ilallah, the 'abd attains fanā, and in the safar-filah, he attains baqā. In the first, he merges into the ism, of which he is a manifestation. In the second, he obtains permanence (permanent hold) in that ism. The Prophet, however, reverted to the shan from which he was directly manifest.

In safar-ilallah, the salik is still in simitation, i.e., he is still a salik, only that he has acknowledged that there is no existence save that of God. In safar-fillah. the mysteries of Nature clear off before him, he becomes majdhūb (the attracted). Fanā is the termination of safar-ilallah; and Baqā is the commencement of safar-fillah. With the sect of Shuttaris, the salik descends, of himself, in his own knowledge—there is no annihilation of self with them. Fagr is another word for Fana. The Prophet has said "Fagr is my pride. and it is from me (Al-Fagr-u-fagri walf agru minni). He also said that fagr is the blackening of the face in both the worlds (Al-fagru swadul wajh fid darain), i.e., when the face is blackened, it disappears. A fagir is therefore synonymous with fani (one who has attained fana). Some, however, omit the first safar; Kaisari in his commentary on Fusus-ul-Hikam (Fasi-Adami) refers only to the last three stages, of which the first two are in the ascending scale; and the last. in the descending.

In performing these journeys, some saliks have sudden elevation and transport, like in the case of

Jacob Behmen, the Cobbler-mystic of Gorlitz in Germany; and St. Paul who suddenly got into a state of ecstacy. The mysticism of the Middle Ages was united with the dialectics (Kalām) of the Schoolmen. by Hugo of the School of St. Victor in Paris; as the Sofism of Islam was united with 'Ilm-i-Kalam by the Imam Hujjatul-Islam (Ghazzāli). Hugo made a threefold division of human faculties, cogitatio (Mujahada) Meditatio (Muraqaba) and contemplatio (Mushahada). In his loftiest elevation, man beholds all things in God. Richard of the School of St. Victor had six stages of contemplation, two visible, two invisible, and two divine. The Sufi has four stages in his upward course. First, he observes that all objects are the manifestion of God's names and attributes. These are the multitudinous objects in which He is reflected. Here he performs a jihād against his nafs, which considers objects as having independent existence—this is mujahada. Then he observes that the world, as a whole, is a mirror and manifestation of God's names and attributes. This is mukāshafa. Then he sees that his own knowledge surrounds all things. He is thus the mirror in which the world is reflected. Before, the non-ego was the mirror; now his own ego is the mirror. This is muragaba. Then he removes all objects including his self (i.e., both ego and non-ego) from view as non-existent and finds the seer and perceiver is God Himself. This is mushahada. Kullu man alaiha fan wa yabqa wujhu rabba ka zul jalali wal ikram. (All objects are to be annihilated; and there will remain the face of the Lord thy God—with His glory and beauty). Maulana Rumi has put the same idea in a terse manner:

Gar tu bar khizi zi ma wu man dami Har du alam pur zi khud bini hami Aein ta'ayyun shud hijabi ru-i-dost Chun ki bar khizad ta'ayyun jumla ust.

If, for a while, you rise higher than I and Thou, You will find both the worlds full of yourself. This ta'ayyun is the veil on the face of thy friend, When the ta'ayyun disappears all is Him.

The doctrine of 'Hama-oust' is not therefore that all things taken together are God—as the pantheists affirm; but it is the disappearance of all ta'ayyunāt in the knowledge or sight or both of the Sālik; in whose view, the worlds are limitation of appearances—and the reality is the essence of God.

In this, the final stage, the 'abd may be said to be re-incarnated. He has died to himself, and lives in the life of God. There is no re-incarnation with the Ṣūfī, in the sense of God taking on flesh and appearing among mankind for their reformation, like in the case of Sri Krishna, who is reported to have said:

Chu ahwāl-i-dunyā bi gardad khasay Numāyim khud ra bi shakli kasay.

When the affairs of the world become rotten, I shew myself in the semblance of somebody.

Here, it is the salik that transforms himself mentally, morally and spiritually into another character; so much so, that his essence, attributes and action become the Essence, attributes, and actions of God.¹ He "is born again, not of corruptible seed, but of uncorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever." Gulshan-i-Rāz says: (lines 348-49).

Baqa-i-yabad wu bad az fana baz Rawad anjami wu digar bi aghaz Shariat ra shaari khish sazad Tariqat ra wi sari khish sazad.

He finds life after dying to self and again He runs another course, from his end to his beginning.

He makes the law his upper garment But know very truth is the station of his nature.

In the journeys on the upward arc, (safar-il-allah and safar-fillah), God is the mirror of sālik. The mirror, in the intensification of gazing, vanishes from view (i.e.) gets hidden; and the salik sees his self, and works up his way. In the subsequent downward journey (safar-billah) from Wahdat to the stage of man, the sālik becomes the mirror and vanishes, and God alone remains. In safar-fillah, the attributes of sālik disappear, and the attributes (ergo, asmā') of God alone remain; the sālik works himself up in the attributes of God; the sifāt of 'abd are the sifāt of God in limitation:

Sufi na shawad safi ta dar na kashad jami Bisyar safar bayad ta pukhta shawad kami

Safi does not become pure till he has drunk of the cup

Much journeying is required for the unripe one to become ripe.

God has, of His own accord, as it were, become accustomed to such limitations, and finds it against

His will to throw them off. The salik endeavours to throw off these limitations, and become absolute. The limitations cover God's absolutism, who estranges Himself from Himself. In this stage, the salik retains only the most absolutely necessary fard and sunnat and discards even benevolences; as Shah Muḥīyyuddīn Ṣāḥib of Vellore 1 and Saiyed Muḥammad Makhdūm bin 'Abdul Nabī Savi 2 have remarked.

When the Sālik has accustomed himself to absolutism, he reverts to limitations in this Safarbillah and becomes Musāwī-ut-ṭarafain (i.e., equipoised between two extreme distances and forces); to whom creation is no veil from the Creator, and vice versa; and to whom necessary existence and possible existence are equal; and who has by the aid of Fikr, discovered the Ḥaḍrat-i-Khamsa, and their details in his individuality, and become the perfect man. This is the stage in which auliyā' and Prophets take their stand.

When the sālik after mujāhada, enters upon the stage of mukāshafa, he meets with photisms, epiphanies or tajallīyyāt. A tajallī means a disclosure, an opening out of certain mysteries. It is the manifestation of Dhāt without the instrumentality of Shuyūnāt, asmā', attributes and hypostases. The first is the sphere of colours; these are Satanic, i.e., that in which the Sālik's nafs prodominates. Mr. Meyer calls them hypnagogic and hypnopomic illusious. These are vivid illusions of sight or sound, "faces in the dark", etc. They may be remnants of the impressions of light on the retina in one or more of its seven primary colours, after the eyes are closed, or the impressions of a dawning light, when sleep is departing; or they may be the work of an imagining brain-True photisms are, however, reflections from 'Alam-i-mithal (Veridical thought-world, which is a world of colours). The last sphere is a colourless region, or as the Our'an puts it, "With God, there is no morning or evening," (Ma indillahi subh-un wa la masa un). Abū Sa'id Abul-Khayr (ob. 1049 A.D.) has divided Illuminations into three kinds. First buruq. These are flashes of lightning (forked lightning) which leave appearances of stars behind. Then Lawamih which may be compared to sheet-lightning; it is like the light of the Sun falling on the surface of transparent water. The third is Lawayah; it is compared to a shining lamp (sirājan munīran). The sulūk of the Patriarch Abraham is borne out by the Qur'an (Sūra An'ām, Rukū 9). The story that Abraham was brought up in a cavern; and at the end of three years brought out of it, is only an idea of the commentators; and similarly no more importance is to be attached to the story, that he made the remarks in his sixteenth or fortieth year as maintained by Maimonides and R. Abraham Zucuc: or that he made them by way of argument to convince the, idolators amongst whom he lived, as observed by Muslim commentators. The fact is that the remarks refer to the suluk of the Patriarch. When he progressed in his suluk, he saw a star in the dark recesses of his heart; and said: "This is my Lord," (Haza which sets." (Lā yuḥibb-ul-āfilin). He saw the Moon rising and setting; and so also the Sun rising and setting, and made the same remarks. His conclusion was: "I turn my face towards the Lord who created the heaven and the earth; I am a unitarian and not a mushrik," Inni wajjahtu wujhiya lil-lazi fataras samawāti wal arḍ hanifan wa mā anā min-al-mushri-kīn).

^{1.} Jawāhir-us-Sulūk, p. 141.

^{2.} Risāla-i-Ḥayāt-i-Jan (unpublished).

^{1.} See Sale's Note on Sura A'nam.

Shaykh Ahmad, the Mujaddid of the 11th century has, according to the progress of his salik in the upward course, seen different colours at different stages. He, a Naqsbandi mystic, is the discoverer of six positions in the part of man's body between the neck and the navel, which he has called the six subtlties (Latayif-i-Sitta), one encircling the other, much after the manner of Kundalini of Patanjali. The colour of qalb is yellow; of soul, red; of ser, white; of khafi, black; and of ikfa, green. It may be noted that these stages are according to the stages given in the doubtful Hadith mentioned in the Iḥyā-ul-'Ulum of Ghazzāli, viz., that in the body of man, there is a lump of flesh; in this lump, there is qalb or mind; in mind, reason; in reason, fawad; in fawad, there is khalfi, and in khalfi, there is "I." Ina fi jasada ibn adama la muzghatun wa fi muzgatin qalbun, wa fi qalbın aqlun, wa fi aqlun, fawad wa fi fawad khasi wa si khasi serrun wa si serrun ana) Some say that the colour of nafs is blue, and of rith, ochre. When the nafs entirely disappears, whiteness overshadows. The colour of soul often becomes green, the last stage is colourlessness, "everything disappearing, and leaving the salik in a state of fana, the Transcendental wonder—spoken of, by Tennyson, which the Sūfis call 'Alam-i-Hayrat. (There is no moring or evening with God, vide p. 100 ante). The colour of the cloth, specially the head dress, is indicative of the stage of the pilgrim's journey, e.g., if this cloth is of ochre colour, it means that his sulūk has reached the stage of $r\bar{u}h$.

^{1.} Bahr-ul-Ma'ani (19th letter on the 'Mystery of Kufi') by Salyed Muhammad Husayni.

Chapter VIII

THE FUTURE STATE OF MAN

In his "Principles of Sociology," Herbert Spencer, one of the deepest thinkers of the modern times, develops the idea, "that it is the dream that has given birth to the idea of a future life in the primitive man. In a dream, the primitive man saw that he had been elsewhere; and so necessarily thought that he had two individualities; one of which left the other, and presently came back; and thus he had double existence like many other things. Somnambulism serves to confirm this interpretation."

Saiyed Amīr 'Alī, a Muslim exponent of Islam to the English-speaking public, thinks that that "a more careful examination of the facts, however, connected with the infancy of races and tribes, leads us to the conclusion that the conception of a future existence is also the result of the natural development of the human mind." The life after death is considered to be a mere continuation of life on the earth, a sort of Scandinavian Valhalla, in which the battles of life are fought over again, and the warrior drinks out of the skulls of his enemies.

Up to the time of Daniel and Ezekiel, the wandering Israelites of Moses had their punishment meted out to them, only in this earthly life; the idea of Sheol was not well developed. Gehenna was only a rubbish depot infested with reptiles under the walls of Jerusalem; which was now and then burnt down. Hades, the intermediate stage (Barzakh), found prominence in subsequent years; for we are told in the Acts of the Apostles, that Christ descended into hell (Hades). The Aryans had developed the idea of a future life more systematically. The Zoroastrian had his Hurān-i-Behisht, and Chinvat pretu (the Bridge of the Gatherer); and the Jewish Talmud inculcated the severity of punishment in Hell.

Amīr 'Alī, therefore, says that the faith of Muhammad was electic.1

Gar hameen maktab ast o aein mulla Kar-i-tiflan tamam khahad shud.

If thus is the school, and this the teacher It is all over with the children.

He, however, throws a glimmering ray of hope, in as much "the joys and pains are entirely subjective; the description of these being only beautiful imageries."

With the Sufi, whose mind's eye (oculus cardis) is opened, the future life instead being of such stuff as dreams are made of, is the real and tangible world; and life on the earth is a dream; for the Prophet has said "Al-nasu niyamun fa iza matu intabahu" (People are asleep, when they die, they awake).

This world is a projection from the next world; and will be reabsorbed into it.

Haq bi jan andar nihano-jan bi dil andar nihan Ai nihan andar nihan, andar nihan, andar nihan Acin chunin ramzi ayan khud bi nashan o bi guman Ay jahan andar, jahan andar, jahan andar jahan

The truth is hidden in life, and life is hidden in mind

O "hidden" within "hidden," within "hidden."

The mystery is plain, itself without sign or symbol

O world, within world, within world.

The Qur'an says: "On that day, this earth will be changed into another earth," Youma tabad-dual ard ghairul ard. In his Revelations, St. John, the Divine, has said, "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away, and then there was no more sea." Some refer the above Quranic verse to the last Day, but as this Day extends over a period of fifty thousand years, it obviously refers to the period that elapses between death and resurrection, i.e., to the duration of the mithal World.

When the Soul, (Rūḥ-i-Jari) travels over the spirit world, leaving Rūḥ-i-maqim behind in the body, and brings back its reminiscenses of that world, it is a true dream. When it is a mixture of this world and of that, it is a Satanic dream; and when it is a transformation of the thoughts of this world, it is a Nafsānī dream. Dreams are the precursor of Prophetship. Before the commencement of his mission, which lasted 23 years, the Prophet had true or veridical dreams for six months. Hence true dreams are considered to be a one-fortysixth part of Prophetship. The Prophet's dreams were as clear as daylight; what he saw therein actually came to pass. Some dreams are such that an interpretation $(t\bar{a}wil)$ has to be put on them, eg., the Patriarch Joseph dreaming that elven stars and the Sun and the Moon bowed in worship to him. Some dreams go by their contraries, as the dreams of the Pharaoh's butler, in which he carried a basket of bread pecked by the crows.

^{1.} Sūra xiv : 49.

^{2.} Rev. 21.

^{3.} Sūra lxx: 4.

Like Amīr 'Alī, the late Sir Saived Ahmad Khān too believed in dreams having only a physical basis. "Yes it is said," he says, "after some discipline (Sulūk) and pious life and Mujāhada, veils are lifted up; and the realities of nafs and Mala-i-A'la' dawns upon the mind; but how do we know that whatever dawns on the mind is a reality and not the very thoughts of the man taking a similitude like thoughts in wakefulness. To us no other faculties are known than the nafs in man. He does not believe in 'alam-imithal. The king of Egypt had an idea based on the calculation of floods in the Nile, that there would be famine in the land; and this idea took the shape of the seven lean kine, in his dream." How the mere material vibrations in the brain-centres could generate an idea is yet an unsolved mystery with the psychologist; and it is still a greater mystery how a future event could set up such vibrations in the organ and produce a set of similitudes, which find their realizations in the future in a different shape This explanation does not find a response in the general system of Islamic thought.

The future world is not the creation of dream stuff; it is as real as, if not more real than, this world. The investigations of the Society for Psychical Research have considerably changed the angle of vision of scientific men. The Prophet has said, "After me Revelation (wahy) will cease: but not true dreams," (Inqataal wahyu badi wa la ruya-i-siliha). In the diagram given in the chapter on the "Theory of Emanation." it has been shown that from Ism-i-Bad! to Tawhar-i-Haba is the soul world; and from Jawhari-Haba down to the 'Arsh is mithal world: from the 'Arsh down to the Insan-ul-Kamil (Perfect man) is Causal world. The soul travelling down from Ism-i-Badī (which is also the reality of man-Haqiqat-i-Insani) reaches Jawhar-i-Haba; and travelling down from Jawhar-i-Haba to the 'Arsh, it takes the colour of 'Alam-i-Mithal; and travelling further down from the 'Arsh to Insan-ul-Kamil, it takes the colour of the Causal World. When the Dhat dawns on all those, they are all annihilated; and there remains the Dhat absolute (Kulla man alay ha fan wa yabqa wajhu rabbika zuljalali wal ikram). The mithal body is a devolution from above, it is not, therefore, the creation of imagination or the child of a dream.

¹ Taşanif-i-Ahmadiyyah, Part I, Süra Yüsufi.

Death is a bridge that joins the beloved with the beloved. (Al mautu jasrun yu sil-ul habiba ilal-habib). Before the natural death, the Ṣūfī dies to himself. There is first Maut-i-Aswad (Black death). This is to suffer at the hands of others. Then Maut-i-Aḥmar (Red death); it is to work contrary to carnal desires. Then Maut-i-Akhzar (Green death), which is to wear ragged clothes. Fourthly is Maut-i-Abyaḍ (white death), in which one suffers starvation, as that is said to create the light of knowledge in the heart. Sa'dī has said:

Andarun az taam khali dar Ta darun nur-i-marifat bini.

Corporal death is the death of the body, wherein the ego (nafs-i-nātiqa) transfers itself to 'Ālam-i-mithāl.

Jalāluddīn Rūmī says:

In khayal acin ja nihan payda athar Zin khayal an ja huwayda shud suwar.

This thought is hidden here and its effect is obvious,

By this thought, figures are formed there.

Thoughts lead to the formation of character; one's character is the crystallization of his own thoughts. The thoughts and actions of this world take their shape in the next world.

A Hadith says:

"Verily there is a market-place in the Paradise, wherein there is no buying and selling, except of the faces of men and women" (Inna fit jannati la suqhan ma fina sharran wa baiun illa bi suratin min rijalin wa nisain).

The author of Risāla-i-Mursad says that greediness takes shape as a rat in the 'ālam-i-barzakh, avarice as a pig, miserliness as a dog, pride as a cheetab, enmity as a serpent, craftiness as a fox, anger as a leopard and so on.

A Hadith says: Hushirat-un-nasu ala surati amalihum (the resurrection of men will be according to the shapes of their actions). If personality is to survive tendencies, literary and technical, must also survive.

The Shi'ahs and the Sūfī; believe in this. Sūra Wagiya (lvi: 60) says, "We have fixed death for you and we are not helpless in changing your attributes and creating those attributes, of which you are not aware (Nahnu qaddarna bainakum al-mawt wa ma nahnu bemasbuqin ala an tubdila amthalahum wa nunshiukum fi mala talamun). Such thoughts as one thinks and harbours here, take their shape and await him there. Imam Ghazzālī has the following explanation in his "Kīmiyā'-i-Sa'ādat" "When the Nafs separates itself from the body, it bears away with it, the faculty of fancy (Wahima); and nothing else accompanies him from the life of this world At death, it is cognizant of separation from the body and from the world. In the grave, the thoughts that he was thinking in the world, take their shape—virtuous thoughts take happy shapes, and wicked thoughts, shapes of calamities according to what he believed in this world. Hence the real grave is this world. The first appear as paradise possessing gardens, and rivers and honey. Hence said the Prophet (peace be upon him) that grave is either a garden in the land of Paradise or a pit from the pits of hell."

The nass is the last devolution of the Tanazzulāti-Sitta, and it goes by four different names, according

^{1.} Under the heading, "Knowledge of the Future World"
Note: The faculties of the nafs are four in kind, Retentive faculty (Hafiza) imagination (Khayal), thinking faculty (mulasarrifa), Fancy (Wahm). The centrepetal force that keeps all these together, and the common ground of their meeting is commonsense (Hiss-1-Mushlarah); this is the analysis of the mind according to old Psychology; it need not be here discussed in the light of modern researches. It is, however, the Wähima (Fancy) that accompanies the nafs to the other side of the grave.

as it shows itself in four different aspects. The first is Nafs-i-Ammara (Sūra xii:53). This leads man to evil, thus turning him away from the path that leads to perfection. It makes him participate in the attributes of the lower creation; and if he stops short here, he cannot attain that perfection, which a creature endowed with Nafs-i-Raḥmānī (Holy Ghost or Spirit) was purposed to attain. Ṣūſīs, sike the Shaykh Ibn Ārabī and Abū Muḥammad Ruzbahan explain that virtuous actions consist in killing this Nafs.

Nafs-i-Lawwāma (lxxv: 2) is the animus that reproaches a man who goes in evil ways. It is the conscience of the western psychologist. It is like the mirror on which the slightest breath of moisture is visible; it can so far lose its brightness under the influence of Ammāra as to be dead to all susceptibilities to good influences. "When the scale of virtue rises up, this Nafs will be in hell", (wa amma man khaffit muwazinuhu fa ummuhu hawya); the third is Nafs-i-Mulhima—the Nafs that is inspired (Sūra, Sabā: 2).

Wa nafsin wa ma sawwaha Fal hamaha fujuraha wa taqwaha Qad aflaha man zakkaha Wa qad khaba man dassaha.

By Soul and Him who balanced,
And breathed into it wickedness and piety,
Blessed is he who kept it pure
And undone is he who corrupted it.

The fourth is Nafs-i-Mutmainna (Sūra Fajr: 27)—the Nafs that has found rest in God. It has been addressed thus "O Nafs which hath found rest in God, turn back to thy Lord. He is pleased with thee; and thou are pleased with him. Mingle with my servants and enter into my paradise."

According to the nature of the predominating faculty, the nass itself is in heaven or in hell. As a Nass cannot be wholly good or wholly bad, there are gradations of heaven and hell. Those who purify themselves (as gold from alloy in the heat of surnace) enter the paradise, for which they become fit. The different kinds of heaven and hell are according to the thoughts (which, of course, precede action), that a man had thought and harboured.

The first is Jannat-us-Salam, in which a man's actions take shape, and give him happiness. They take the form of hūrān-i-behisht, and rivers of milk and honey; for he had these in view in doing good actions; or in other words, his thoughts take beautiful shapes; and he enjoys the happiness of possessing Divine knowledge and perfect faith; for milk is a symbol of the former; and faith of the latter.

The second is Jannat-ui-Makasib. It is also called Jannat-us-swar (Jannat of thoughts); to this he attains, when he has had good expectations from his Maker. "I am near the fancy of my creature, let him entertain favourable hope from me (Ana inda zanni abdi bi, fa yazunna bi ma sha). A Hadith related by Abū Hurayra says: "Good actions take beautiful shapes, and accompany the departed" (Al amalu yattaka ma al mayyiti fil qabri fi ahsani suratin).

The third is Jannat-ul-Mawāhib. God's name is Wahhāb, the bestower of gifts without consideration—"without value received." This is God's blessings, to which people of every creed and faith will be admitted, for God has said: "My Mercy encircles everything" (Rahmati wasaat kulla shayin). His Mercy is not focussed on good works alone of His creatures.

The Fourth—Jannatul Istihqaq. As its name implies, it is for those who by their actions, by religious discipline, have earned merit, for God's name is 'Adil (the Just). The Fifth is for those who have obtained gnosis of God, and who annihilated themselves in Him, and who have observed the beauty of His Creation. It is called Januar-ul-Firdaus. The Sixth is for those who observed in this world the manifestations of His names; and they are admitted to Januat-ul-Fazilat. These are auliya (the Saints). The Seventh is Januar-us-Sifat-intended for Prophets and great saints; and the last is Jannat-udh-Dhat. It is also called Muqam-i-Mahmud, in which is the beatific vision or cosmic consciousness reserved for the Prophet alone; from this station he will plead for the "Salvation" of humanity. "In this state, individuality itself seems to dissolve and fade away into boundless being, and thus it is not a confused state, but the clearest, the surest of the surest, utterly beyond words. The loss of personality, as it were, being no extinction but only true life."2 This is the transcendental wonder ('ālami-i-ḥayrat), to which Alfred Tennyson has referred. In consciousness, a centre appeared; and it became the point of devolution; this centre now dissolves itself, and becomes the entire consciousness, which cannot bear the stain of sin. There are thus eight heavens, the highest is the heaven of Dhāt, and the rest are those of asmā'-i-jamāli (Beautiful names). But there are only seven hells which are manifestations of seven of His asmā'-i-jalālī (names of glory). There is no hell corresponding to Jannat-udh-Dhāt.¹ for God's names are Raḥmān (one who is merciful to all witout distinction) and Raḥīm (merciful towards those who deserve mercy); and not Ghadban and Ghadub (Merciless in general, or Merciless in particular). Mercy and not anger is God's personal attribute (fifat-i-Dhāti).

^{1.} Chap. lxxxix: 27.

^{2.} Tennyson quoted in W. Jame's The Varieties of Religious Experiences, p. 384.

God created the light of Muhammad (also called Yaqūt-i-Bayda—the white Chrysolite) by his names (asmā') Badī (the creator) and Qādir (the powerful); and looked at it by the sight of the names of Mannān (the bestower of blessings) and Qahār (the Wrathful). That light broke into two; the right hand side became Jannat (heaven) and the left hand side, Dūzakh (hell). His name Qahār brought the hell into existence; the secret of creation of this latter was to manifest His name of Ghāfir (The Pardoner).

God's creation of the world is a manifestation of His mercy and not anger; for the world had never sinned before. Hence in His hell, comfort will appear for His Creatures. Shaykh Akbar derives the word 'adhāb (torment,) from 'azb (relish); for, from that torment, comfort will come; the fish is for water, and salamander for fire. These cannot change places. They are comfortable in their own elements. It is like scratching-to-bleediness of body to a man who is suffering from itch. Therein he finds his comfort.

^{1.} Ibrahim Gazur-i Dahi, Kttab-ut-Tasawwuf (unpublished).

In hell, the names that are manifest are:

- 1. Muntaqim (I'he Avenger). Düzakh, the manifestation of this name—is for those who have taken away the rights of others and oppressed them.
- 2. 'Adil (One who is Just. (Jahim is the manifestation of this name, and is for those who have unjustly taken away the property of others.
- 3. Shadid (One who is severe). 'Usra, the manifestation, is for misers, the envious, harbourers of revenge; lust-worshippers.
- 4. Ghadab (One who is wrathfull). Hāwīya is for hypocrites, liars, etc.
- 5. Mudil (Leading astray). Saqar is for the proud, the haughty.
- 6. Dhil-Batsh (Hard-compressing). Sair is for the crafty, the apostates.
- 7. Zul'iqāb (One who torments). Jahannam is the manifestation of this name. It is for mushriks, those who join partners with God.

Are heaven and hell local? or are they mere state of existence for the departed souls, created by their own thoughts. This world is a projection of God's thoughts, according to Jīiī, khyālun fil khayālin fil khayāl (thought within thought within thought); but you see it very material; the Intermediate State is a projection of man's thoughts quo God's thoughts; and it is material in that sense. The projection or appearances will dissolve leaving the reality as it is

Dr. Browne in his Literary History of Persia (Vol. II, p. 498) says: "Thet he (Shaykh-Muhiyy-uddin) believed in the value of dreams, and in man's power to render them veridical by his own. It behaves God's servant to employ will to produce concentration in his dreams, so that he may obtain control over his imagination; and to direct it intelligently in sleep. as he could control it, when awake. And when this concentration has accrued to a man, and becomes natural to him, he discovers fruit thereof in the Intermediate State (Al-Barzakh) and profits thereby: wherefore let man exert himself to acquire this state. for by God's permission it profiteth him greatly." They are therefore conditions as much as the Universe in a condition of Divine thoughts. As a man soweth, so doth he reap. This world is the harvest ground for the next; or as a Hadith puts it: "Ad-dunyā muzratul ākhira." It may be said that heaven or hell is the personal thought of each man. While it is the result of personal thoughts, it is as expansive as the whole thought itself.1 "In my Father's house, there are many mansions," said Jesus Christ A description of the twelve heavens is given in Revi. 21-16. Each man's heaven or hell is, therefore, the result of his own thought, while it is situated in a background and surrounded by an all pervading atmosphere of similar kind. Imam Abū Sa'id Salmī says: The Prophet had a dream, in which he entered into a Paradise, in which was Ramiza, the wife of Abū Talha He heard the footsteps of somebody, and asked who it was. They said it was Bilal. He again saw a magnificent palace in the Paradise, wherein a river was flowing, and asked whose it was. They said it was 'Umar's. The Prophet intended to enter, but became shy. When 'Umar heard this, he wept and said: "O Prophet, is there strangeness between you and me." This shows how far the background is common; and how also each creature reaps the fruits of his own actions.

The question arises, whether the dead retain their awareness. The Qur'an (Al-i-'Imran) says: "Do not consider those dead who have sacrificed their lives in the way of God; they are alive and derive their subsistence from God. Surely God does not leave to waste the good works of the faithful," 2 (Latah abanna al-lazina gutilu fi sabīlillahi amwātan bal ahyawun inda rabbihim yurzagun. In Allaha la yuzia ajral muminin). After the battle of Badr, the Prophet (peace be upon him) called out to each and every one of the dead of the non-Muslims by name. So it was understood, that they heard the call. Again the Our'an says "You cannot make the dead hear, and the deaf do not hear vour call, 'Innaka lā tusme-u!-mauta wa lā tusmeul summa-ad-du'ā). It may be that the spiritually dead and deaf cannot hear; but the comparison clearly implies that the corporeally dead and deaf also do not hear. The conclusion is that an effective voice alone could make itself heard as in the case of the witch of Endor; who had called up Samuel out of his grave, whereas an ordinary voice could not have this effect4 Christ also preached to the spirits in hell or the bottomless pit, mentioned in Revi. Chap. 20.5 A

^{1.} Shar-i-Barenkh, Chap. 73 under the heading "the Prophet's dreams."

^{2.} Sura Al-i-'Imran (iti . 169).

^{3.} Sūra Rūm (xxx: 52).

^{4.} Samuel, Chap. 28-12 6.

^{2.} St. Peter. 3-19

man of this world engrossed in some affair does not hear the voice of a caller; but when, at leisure, he hears the same. Abū Dīna has related a Ḥadīth on the authority of Sa'd bin Jābir that, "When a man dies, his departed relatives come to him and talk to him about the people on the earth."

"The souls of the departed Muminin live in the crops of green birds, which fly about among the green trees of the Paradise" so relates 'Abdulla ibn Mas'ūd. This puts them on a par with the angels, who are able to fly about.

Shāh Wallīyullah Ṣāḥib of Delhi (ob. 1176 A H.) who belonged to the Naqshbandiyyah Order of Ṣūfīs says in his 'Ḥujjat-ul-Bāligha' that the 'Ālam-i-Mīthāl takes any shape it likes. Things take their shape in that world before they appear here. He bases his arguments on the following Ḥadīthes:

- (a) Sūra Baqra and Āli-'Imrān will appear in the shape of two clouds, between two convoys of birds and will plead for those who had read them.
- (b) Good and Evil will take shape, and appear before people. Good will bring glad tidings, and evil will envelope those who had committed it.
- (c) The world will appear in the shape of an old woman with rugged hair, blue eyes and a haggard face.
- (d) Do you see things which I see? I see showers of mischief done by you, falling in the backyards of your houses.

^{1.} Shar-i-Barzakh, Chap. 49.

- (e) Heaven and hell took shape before me. I saw them between myself and the Qibla wall, and stretched out my hand to pluck a bunch from heaven, and receded from the heat of hell.
- (f) Death will take the shape of a ram on the day of judgment, and will be sacrificed between the heaven and hell.
- (g) An angel of God appeared in shape before Maryam (Mary).
- (h) Gabriel used to appear in a body before the Prophet who talked to him, but the surrounding people could not see him.
- (i) The works of the dead appear in a shape before them.

Shah Sahib says, "That three courses are left to us to understand these Hadithes. Their literal meaning is to be taken; in which case, we have to confess to the existence of a world which we have spoken about. The great historian and traditionist, Sayūtī, believes in the veridical existence of this supersensuous world, 'Abdulla ibn Mas'ūd believes in its falsidical existence (i.e.,) these things are not externally existent, but appear so to the seer. There is the third school which says that these statements have a different meaning from what is literally attached to them. These are brought in, merely as illustrations." . The Shah Sahib further says: "that at death, nafs-inātiqa or the soul does not entirely leave matter." The Nafs sticks to Nusma; it is dissolved in the matter of Nusma. This Nusma is perhaps the ectoplasm, spoken of by Sir Oliver Lodge, "Exudation of a strange white evanescent dough-like substance, which has been photographed by scientific enquirers in different stages of evolution, and which shapes itself into parts or whole of the body, beginning in a putty-like mould, and ending in a semblance. This is the spiritual body spoken of by St. Paul, a body that contained the Spirit and yet was distinct from the ordinary body."

'Alam-i-mithal lends itself to the Nusma; and a body of light appears. The Qur'an says: "Do not consider those dead who have sacrificed their lives in the way of God. They are alive. They derive their subsistence from their Lord; and they are kept protected by His Mercy." Those who sacrificed their lives as martyrs, are fed with the substance provided by the Lord; and those of the non-elemental world, who are fond of a bodily shape, attempt to express themselves in that shape. There is a tendency in the 'Alam-i-Mithal which conjoins with the Nusma to assume a luminous body; those who had a desire for food help themselves with the food offered to them and their desire is satisfied. Some have mischievous tendencies and rotten tastes; and they clothe themselves in dark dresses; suitable to the stages of nafs, and they do not sever themselves from their bodies in thought. When their body is ill-treated, they think they have been ill-treated. Shah Waliyullah Şahib is also a believer in a world which is between Mithal and the causal world, and which he calls Barzakh: the seeing of angels, revelation, Mi'raj, heaven, etc., all take place in that world. Regarding angels taking shapes—this takes place in a world which is the effect of the mixture of Mithāl and Shahādat; and this is the reason why angels appear to some and do not appear to others. Regarding Mi'rāj (or the Prophet's Night Journey), such things happened to the Prophet's body in a state of wakefulness; but in that world which is between and betwixt Mithāl and Shahādat, and which is the borderland between the two.

^{1.} Mystical Message, p.). 79 and 109.

The Prophets Ezekial and Moses have had the same experiences; and so also the Auliyā (Saints) have them.

In fine, after all these wanderings through Mithāl, Arwāḥ, and Asmā', one returns to the ism, of which he was a manifestation, (whether Jalālī or Jamālī); and the Musamma (the named) alone remains, or as "Gulshan-i-Rāz" puts it:

Kaz aan dar amad ... wwal ham bi dar shud, Agar chi dar maad az dar bi dar shud.

He enters the door from which he emerged, Although in his travel, he went from door to door. Only that he should realize this in his sulūk!

Chapter IX

THE FIVE PILLARS OF ISLAM

The tabernacle of Islam raises its head on the pole-staff of the formula, "There is no god, but God and Muhammad is the Prophet of God." (La-ilaha il!-allah Muhammad-Rasulullah). This tabernacle consists of four inner Courts, one within the other and a sanctuary, "Let them make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them." 1 Thus spake the Lord unto Moses. The first Court is the Shari'at, into which one has to step, when one's goal is the sanctuary, "There is none worthy of worship except God." (La ma'buda ill-allah) Muhammad is the sent messenger of God. This is the Court of ceremonialism. Then one enters the second enclosure: this shows that the pilgrim has the intention of advancing in a particular direction. that he is bent upon advancing towards the sanctuary. This is the Tarigal (the way); Christ himself has referred to this stage, when he said: "I am the way. the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father, but through me."2 When he enters upon Tarigat or Suluk (the pilgrim's path), he does not leave his Sharī'at behind; for as "Gulshan i-Rāz" says (line 350):

Shari'at ra shar-i-khis-sazad Tariqat ra visar-i khis sazad.

He makes the law his upper garment But know very truth is the station of his nature.

Țariqat simply says: "None is the destination, but God (La-muqsudu-il-a!la's), and Muhammad is the manifestation of the Light of God." A Hadith says: "I am from the Light of God and all things are from my light." (Ana min nurillahi wa kullu shayin min nuri). You are then admitted into the third enclosure. There you find none existing but God himself (La Mawjudu ill-allah) and that Muhammad exists by the existence of God. Then you enter the sanctuary, and there you see none other than God Himself (La Mushhudu ill-allah). God Himself is self-evident in His work. The Nirguna is self-evident in Sarguna. The Nirguna, the Colourless, evidences Himself in His limitations. God is God without limitation and is 'abd within limitations, and Muhammad is the reality of Himself in his first cognizance of Himself. The remaining four pillars of Islam are the Salat, (Persian: Namāz), Saum (Persian: Rūza), Zakāt (charitable contribution), and Hajj (the annual pilgrimage to Mecca).

SALAT

The obvious or external object of Salāt (Namāz or ritual prayer) is to make oneself disposed towards goodness. "Read your prayers at the joining times of the day and night, and the early part of the night. Good works make sins disappear" (Aqīmis ṣalāta ta ra fayin nahar wa zulfan min-al-layl. In al-hasanatu yuzhabnas sayyiat); this is the exoteric object of Namāz; the esoteric object is the ascent of the believer in his journey upwards (As ṣalātu mi'raj ul muminīn). When one stands for his prayers, he begins by saying "Certainly I direct my face or attention towards the One who has created the Heaven and the Earth; and we are not of those who join other gods with God (Inni wajhatu wajhiya lil-lazi fataras samawāti-wal arda hanīfan wa ma ana minal-mushrikīn). Here the four stages mentioned above are traceable. "I direct my attention to God" shows the object of Worship. This is Shari'at (none worthy of worship except God) "Who created the Heaven and the earth." This shows the course adopted by the worshipper. The goal to be reached is God (La Magsūdill allah). - Hanifan, "We are unitarians." The worshipper realizes that none exists other than God. Then he says: "We are not of the mushriks" i e., he sees that God alone exists and none else (La Mushud). Thus the very introduction leads the worshipper through all the four stages. After this, he raises his hands up to the lobes of the ear, in as much as to say, "I have left behind all other than God." His hands are empty; when he makes his nivat (intention) to say the prayer of a particular time or kind and begins, "In the name of Allah the Rahman, the Rahim." Allah is a conglomerate name, an aggregate of all His conceivable names. Then the worshipper descends lower, and becomes more specific and calls him Rahman, one who is the sustainer of all His creation, who bestows His gifts on all alike—the saint and the sinner; who sends down His rain on the garden or on the desert land. The worshipper then descends still lower, and calls Him, Rahim-one who leaves nobody without his earned recompense; who bestows His gifts and blessings on those who have worked for them. The worshipper is thus absorbed in himself and calls upon His Maker. Then God answers him in first three lines of the opening Sūra. The answer is, of course, from the mouth of the worshipper himself. The Sūra Fātiḥa repeated by the worshipper runs as follows:

"Praise be to God—the supporter of the worlds; the Raḥmām and Raḥīm, the controller of the affairs of the worlds. Thee do we worship, and of Thee we crave assistance. Direct us in the right way—the way of those on whom Thou hast poured down Thy blessings, and not of those, against whom Thou art incensed nor of those who have gone astray."

God utters His own praise: "He is the supporter of the World (Rahman); and Rahim—the Recompenser of those who deserve recompense. Then He is the King of the day of judgement, i.e., He keeps the balance even, between the counteracting and contradicting forces of the world. Hearing this answer from God, the 'abd expresses himself in the succeeding four lines: "Thee do we worship," etc. So really this sura is a conversation between God and 'abd and is sealed by the word "Amen." Then one small sura or two long verses of a sūra are conjoined with this. This posture in the prayer is like the rendering of the accounts on the day of judgment. Then the worshipper bends horizontally. This is as if he prays to God in the stage of the lower animals; while standing he was praying as a man, like a slave before his master or servitor in the King's durbar. In this bending posture, he feels as if his back is bent down with the load of his sins and then repeats Subhana Rabbiyal 'Azim thrice (Pure is my Great Lord). Then he rises up from this posture saying: "God has heard my praises" (Sami allahu-liman hamida). If the prayer is behind the Imam, the Mugladis (the followers) add Rabbana wa lakal-hamd). Then the worshipper bends down and then prostrates himself. Now Sajdah (prostration) means that the worshipper is in the posture of the lowest creature (the creeping animal), that he has left the whole world and his own individuality behind, and kisses the dust at the door of his Maker; the dust cleanses him from his sins. Now he repeats, "Pure is the Most Elevated Lord" (Subhāna Rabbiyal-'Ala), i e, My Lord is above all praises. After his first Sajdah, which is the Sajdah directed by the inspiration of God, he goes down into another Sajdah, which is the Sajdah of thanksgiving. After repeating the same genuflections, he sits down (Oa'da). In the first sitting, he repeats the Tashahud (or Attahiyyāt) in a two rak'at namāz, and Tashahud with darud and du'ā in a four rak'at namāz. The sitting posture thus assumed. indicates that from the posture of a man standing, the worshipper has descended to that of the lower animal (bending); and from the position of the lower animal, he assumes that of the creeping animal (prostration); and then from the latter, he descends to the mineral kingdom (sitting); thus the worshipper worships his Maker in all the postures conceivable of created forms; and also in all the conceivable postures that he himself assumes for all practical purposes of daily life. Standing before his Maker, he has performed all the obeisances; he has now received orders to sit, just as a King grants permission to his servitor. When the servitor sits down in the durbar, he has to say what presents he has brought with him; the worshipper then says: "All good and pure things and praises are for Thee, O Lord," Attahiyyat-u-lilahi was-salawatu wat tayubat). To which the Lord says: "Peace to thee, O Prophet" (Was salamu alayka ya ayyuhan Nabiyyu). The worshipper says: "Peace on all of us and on all worshippers." Was-salām-u-'alaynā wa 'ala 'ibadihis sālihīn): and then I bear witness that there is none else to be worshipped but God and Muhammad is His 'abd and messenger," (Ashhadu an la ilaha ili-allahu wa ashhadu anna Muhammalan rasülullah). This is the chorus in which all creation joins with the worshipper in reciting the praises of the Lord. It may be remembered that Salat was instituted in Mi'rāj (the Elevation of the Prophet to the presence of God, called the Night Journey). Gabriel who had accompanied him in the journey stopped short at the Great Fig Tree (Sidrat-ul Muntahā), i e., Reason could not soar beyond the tree of life. The Prophet himself had to progress into that non-spatial, region (Wara-ul-Wa'a). When he reached there, he had the injunction: "Sit down my beloved and utter my praises," (Ijlis ya ḥabibī wa khul sanai) The Prophet replied: "Why do I sit down." The answer was: "God is saying His own Namaz." The Prophet sits down and says the Attahiyyāt (described above). This is repeated by the worshipper in all prayers in the manner described above. Salat is thus the ascent of the believer; and the heart of the true worsInpper is filled with light, of which outsiders can have no conception. There are five salats to which minor salats are added. There is, however, an injunction to observe the middle prayer carefully (Hafizu salat al wusta). Commentators refer this to the midday prayer (Zuhr prayer); for in this busy part of the day, people are apt to overlook it. This may, however, be the constant contemplation of God in daily life, dependant on the out-going and incoming breath. The chief point to be secured and laid stress upon, in Namaz, is concentration of Mind (Huzūr-i-Oalb), according to a Hadith related by 'Ugba ibn 'Umar (Mishkāt p. 31) In the several genuflections, this may be lost sight of. To secure this, it is enjoined that the worshipper should deliberately and determinately attend to each and every word and each and every action that proceeds from him. If he says: "Holy is my Lord" (Subhāna kalla hu), he must concentrate his attention on the meaning or at least on the words that proceed from him and so on. Thus if he diverts his mind in one particular channel, it is not carried away in another. According to a Hadith related by Anas (Mishkat, p. 83), he is to fix his attention on the point on the ground, which his forehead has to touch in prostration (Sajdah). These are the means to secure concentration in the ordinary Salat. The devotees of several orders of Sufis have, however, devised various practices for securing concentration in contemplation which will be dealt with separately.

SAWM OR RUZA

Rūza is the third pillar of the building of Islam.

Sawm literally means "to keep closed." The same reasons are given in the first instance to keep fasts in the month of Ramadān as for saying the prayers, i.e., you will be kept back from several sins Laa'la kum tuflahun). In fasting, man shows the qualities of angels, who neither eat nor drink, neither marry nor are given in marriage. "Fasting is for me and I give its recompense." (As sawm li wz-ana ajzuhu). In fasting, 'abd attains the attribute of God who neither eats nor drinks and whose name is Ṣamad (Allah-us Ṣamad).

ZAKAT

This is giving away one-fortieth part of what you possess, under certain conditions, when your savings are 521 Rupees at the end of one comeplete year, which is called Hawl-ul-hawl. In a Hadith-i-Oudsi? related in connection with David's query, "what were Thou. O Lord before the creation", it is said, "I was a hidden treasure. I loved to be known, so that I created the world to become known." God has thus distributed His treasure, and so his 'abd also distributes his treasure: thus entitling himself to the possession of one attribute of God; in fact, becoming a manifestation of one of His names. The same essence is manifest in all forms. The limited Dhats or Essences recognize their identity with one another in manifestation, and distribute their attributes amongst one another. "Verily, saith God," says a Hadith. "I became ill.

^{1.} Bagara, 23.

^{2.} Hadith-i-Qudsi is a revelation in the Prophet's own words; whereas the Qur'an consists of the very words of God. This is the view of those who believe in Kalam-i-Lafri, i.e., the Qur'an as uncreated and eternal like Imam Hambal.

why didst thou not enquire after me, I became hungry, why didst thou not feed me, I begged of thee, why didst thou not give me, etc." (Inallaha yakulu mariztu, falam tu idni, rusitu falam tut imnī wa saaltuka falam-tu-itni, etc.)

HAJJ

This is the annual pilgrimage to Mecca—the making of seven circumambulations around the Black Stone (Hajr-ul-Aswad) and performing other ceremonies, the details of which are given in all ordinary books of Ordinances. Sir Savvid Ahmad Khān thinks that this was the attempt to keep intact the method of the worship of Abraham. He jocularly puts it. (though jocularity is out of the question in serious matters) "Spending a few days in the same barbarous condition, which were in vogue in the time of the old grandfather creates a deep effect on the mind, of the love of God, and creates a sentimentalism in the minds of plain people" and adds, "There is no religious foundation for the killing of animals in sacrifice at the Haji, to be traced in the Our'an. Mecca is situated in a desert, destitute of animal life. it was difficult to procure food for man in such a place. For this reason, people carried animals for food to such a place which are known as Budan and Khulayd. Those who did not carry them, had to purchase them at Mecca, kill them there and feed themselves and others. This alone appears to be the foundation of sacrifice in the Qur'an.

In those days, an untold number of animals were killed and left to be devoured by kites and jackals; this has no origin in the religion of Islam." Sir Sayyid Aḥmad, it has to be remarked, was not in for the higher truths, underlying these institutions. The seven circumambulations are, no doubt, the revival of the worship of Abraham; and Muslims follow the cult of Abraham in several respects; but it is to be remembered that this worship is performed once a year, excepting, of course, the same worship, performed at other times known as 'Umrah. But the question is why around a stone? Now the mineral kingdom is the lowest rung in the ladder of manifestation of the Divine attributes. It is the lowest emanation. The poet Mullā Jāmī says:

^{1.} Tafsīr-i-Qur'an, Vol. I, Sūra Bagara, 24

Bud kull-i-jahan daru mastur Karda dar kul bi Dhāt-i-khish zuhūr.

The whole of the world was hidden in Him. He descended into the whole by His Essence.

Then the next higher zuhür was in the vegetable, then animal and then man, i.e., in the Sarguna or the manifested God; from man, upwards again in the unmanifest world. The whole is put in a nutshell by Jalāluddīn Rūmī:

We have grown like grass often,
Seven hundred, and seventy bodies have we taken.
From the inorganic, we developed into the vegetable;

Dying from the vegetable we rose to animal; And leaving the animal, we became man. Then what fear that death will lower us? The next transition will make us an angel. Then shall we rise from angels and merge in Infinity.

Now these circumambulations around the Ka'ba indicate that man realizes his true origin; and from this, he wants to rise higher and higher. That is the starting point of his life in the world. The spirit descended into clay, for its fuller manifestation. Such a recognition of his origin once in a lifetime is sufficient to give him an upward or spiritual start. The kissing of the stone brings back the same state of things to mind, though Sayid Ahmad Khān has remarked that it indicates the goal of a circumambulation or the number of times it is done.

'Umar remarked to 'Alī: 1"That the Black Stone could not hurt him or benefit him: that he would not have kissed it, had he not seen the Prophet himself do so. It was a stone after all." 'Alī replied: "There is benefit in kissing it. The promises that Adam and his descendants had made are in the mouth of this stone; and the kissing of the stone is the kissing on the promises; and the Prophet had said that the stone is the right hand of God. (Al hajaru yaminullah fil ard)." When 'Umar heard this, he said: "Thou hast saved me. O 'Ali, from ruin." In the world of mithal, this stone has a form, and the kissing of it means the revival of the promise made by man to His Maker on the day of promise (Roz-i-Mīthāq) viz, "that when he grew out of the sodden earth, he would remember his Creator." The mineral Hajr-ul-Aswad has its prototype in the Mithal World.—An esoteric Ka'ba exists behind the material Ka'ba; and this celestial prototype called Bayt-ul-Ma'mūr exists in the Fourth Heaven.

^{1.} Baḥrul Ma'ani (Letters,) by Saiyed Muḥammad Ḥusayn ibn Saiyed Nāsiruddīn Ja'ffarī, vide letters 2 and 3.

Chapter X

THE SUFI'S ASCENT

The high road to the attainment of a knowledge of God traverses over what are called the "five foundations of Islam." This road is a long one; the Ṣūfis have devised short methods to attain the same object. In salāt, which is ascent to the highest stage for a Mumin, (lā ṣalāta illa bi huḍūr il-qalb), there can be no prayer, without concentration of thought. Man is the lowest point of devolution on the downward arc of tanazzulāt; he has to ascend again from this to reach the highest point. His mind is assailed from all sides by Khawāṭir (plural of Khaṭna, an affection). Unless he stills these affections, he cannot see himself reflected on the serene surface of his mind; there should be no ruffling on the surface of water for one's image to be reflected in it. Sa'dī has said:

Taammul dar ainayi dil kuni Safai ba tadrij hasil kuni.

Observe yourself in the mirror of your heart Get the clearness of reflection by gradual steps.

A khaṭra is an affection in thought that descends from Wabdat itself, and passes down through all the stages of Tanazzulāt, Wāḥidiyyat, Malakūt, Arwāḥ, Amthāl and Shahādat, before it crystallizes itself and finds expression in human thought; and finally appears in the material world as action and solidifies in the character of man.

Nineteen hundred years ago, there went out the dictum "there is none good but one and that is God." If God is only good, then how can that which is reflected from Him be anything but good. As a matter of fact, the affections of our hearts are good as well as evil. In descending, the affections partake of the character of the asmā, through which they pass. (See the diagram in the chapter on "Emanation"). God is Hadil (guide in the right path), as well as Muzil (one leading astray); He is Muḥīyy, (the Quickener of life), as well as Mumīt (the Annihilator); He is 'Azīz (bestower of honour), as well as Mudhil (the causer of degradation). The pairs of contraries make up the manifestation of the world. God abjures thus:

Wa nafsin wa ma swwa ha Faalhamaha fujuraha wa taqwaha.

By the soul and Him who balanced And breathed into it wickedness and piety.

A Khaṭra is the illumination of God on the heart. It can but be neutral by itself. Khaṭrāt dawn upon the minds of auliyā; and they are fully absorbed or lost in them, so much as they become unconscious to their own existence, their consciousness is lost in the consciousness of God:

'Ilm-i-Ḥaq nuqt ust wa 'ilmi Ṣūfi kat Az wujūd-i-nuqt bashad bud-i-kat.

(Mathnawi)

God's knowledge is a point, and 'abd's a line, On the existence of a point depends that of a line.

When, however, the Khatra does not reach perfection, it becomes the Khatra of Māsiwāllah (i.e., of other-than-God). The first kind partakes of the character of good, and the second of evil. In Sawm (fasting,) there is total abstention from food and drink; this is the sample of good Khatra, in which the idea of masiwallah (other-than-God) is totally eschewed. Hence the reward for fasting is As-sawmu li wa ana ajruhu (the fasting is for Me and I am its reward.) In Sulūk (pilgrim's course) all Khatrāt, are to be annihilated; just as in fasting, food and drink are annihilated. When in manifestation, the Khatra manifests itself in desire for good action, it is called Khatra-i-Rahmāni (Divine). If, however, it is a good Khatra, but finds no permanence in the heart, it is Khatra-i-Maliki (angelic). If it develops evil tendencies in the breasts of men, it is Khatra-i-Shaytanī (Satanic). It is "the mischief of the whisperer who slily withdraweth, who whispereth evil suggestions into the breasts of men" (Sharri-il-waswas-il-Khannās, a'-ladhiyuwaswisu fi sudūrin nās). If, however, it fully discards all Shari'at, and all remembrance or fear of it. it becomes Khatra-i-Nafsanī (of Nafs). The first two kinds are of the nature of good; and the last two are of the nature of evil. Man is composed of four elements, earth, wind, water and fire. The four Khatrat correspond to these in nature. Man is to obey all Khatrat, as they descend from above, Khwaja 'Abdulla Ansāri, like Buddha, has said that all Khatrat must be carried into practice, if they accord with Shara', if they conflict with it, they must be carried out only in fancy. In any case, they demand obedience. To regulate these Khatrat, the Sufis have devised several askar and adhkar: and hence have arisen their several orders.

^{1.} Sūra Nās, cxiv: 4-5.

The Sulūk of Qādiriyyah, the order of şūfis, founded by Shaykh 'Abdul Qādir Jīlanī (561 A.H.—1165 A.D.) whose sacred shrine is at Baghdad, is divided into three stages by Maulānā Rafī'uddīn Naqshbandī.

1. Ordinary.—The Sālik recites silently or aloud the praises of God. By this, "those who have brought faith, are taken out of darkness into light (Il-alladhīna aamanu yukhrij hum min al zulmāti il al-nūr).

The Sālik considers that every manifestation is His. He practises Hama ūst.

- 2. Special.—This has reference to the sight on Nirguna. Whatever enters the salik's thought, God is free from it. It takes no cognisance of things. Objects have no reality. This is called Wilayat-i-Waḥdat-ush-Shuhūd.
- 3. The Most Special.—This is the sulūk of the Prophets—evacuation of the thought both of reality and non-reality. A colourless impression dawns on the mind; the impression of sameness, God being above thought. Some people were reciting the name of God vociferously in a mosque, the Prophet (peace be upon him), said: "Why are you so aloud, you are not addressing a distant God." It is also commanded: "Read the Qur'an slowly and deliberately (wa rattilil Qurāna tartīla). The idea in the beginning was to shut out Khwātir by deliberate and loud repetitions as in the case of Hadrat 'Umar. When one has practised this, he may have recourse to zikr-i-khafī as in the case of Hadrat 'Ali. After a man has practised himself in thus shutting out ideas by vociferous and then silent adhkar, he shuts his eyes and closes his lips and concentrates his thoughts on the out-going and incoming breath. When the breath goes out, he thinks he says: "Lā ila ha"—he annihilates all external objects; and when it comes in, he thinks he says "Il-lallah" (but God): the point in his heart which is the seat of God (Qalbul-mumin arshullahi says a Ḥadīth) expanding itself without limit.

The order of Naqshbandi was founded by Khwāja Bahā'uddīn (719 A.H.=1319 A.D.). The ashghāl (practices) of this order were as many as eight, or as some say, eleven. The first eight were devised by Khwāja 'Abdul Khāliq; and the last three by Khwāja Naqshband. Out of the first eight, a few are noted below:

- 1. Hush-bar-dam: Awareness on breath. This is to observe whether one's individuality is aware of the Divine Existence or has become neglectful towards it; whether the Khaṭrāt have been shut out or not. This is taking count of each in-coming and outgoing breath.
- 2. Nazar bar Qadam: The appearences of different colours disturbs the mental equilibrium of the sālik. The sālik is aware of the footsteps of the Prophet in which he is travelling. The Prophet Ādam attributed action to himself; when asked why he had disobeyed, he said: "I have done an injustice to myself Thou art merciful and forgiving" (Zalamna anfusana anta ghafūrur-raḥīm). Abraham had adopted the sifāt of God, he was a patron of guests. Moses had found himselt a ma'dūm (non-entity), and saw the Dhāt of God. Christ annihilated himself in sifāt. The "Seal of the Prophets" changed his character into the character of God; the last stage of the descent of khaṭrāt. These are the stations of the great prophets; and the sālik sees towards what station he is treading with steady steps, and by the will of God.

- 3. Safar dar watan: Journey within one's own land. This is journeying from human to angelic attributes.
- 4. Khalwat-dar-anjuman: Solitariness in an assembly; while busy in the affairs of the world, to concentrate one's thoughts on God.
- 5. Baz ghasht: To turn one's attention towards the soul.
- 6. Nigah dashi: To shut out the affections of mind, The fakirs of this order, who go about with lighted lamps, are supposed to be noted for healing diseases by touches of hand (mesmerizing), for hypnotizing, thought-reading, and for dispelling epidemics.

The suluk of Chishtiyyah. This order was founded by Khwaja Mu'inuddin. The devotees of this order generally practise chilla, ie., they shut themselves up in a room for forty days, put themselves "on short commons' and also sleepless. They hear music. With them, music causes the ascension of auliya and prophets towards God. It is the ascension of the qalb. With them, there are no hūrān-i-bihisht or young slaves in Paradise, nor rivers of milk and honey; there is only the beatific vision. (In alliannata la fiha hurun, wa la khusurun wa la labanna wa la asla wa lakhaya illa liqaullah); an enchanting sound is the air from the breath of God (saut-ul-hasana rihun min nafsir-Rahmān). Samā' (music) is, however, the training ground of the beginner, as it works on thought. The adept has out-stripped thought, he is impressed by the unlimited effect of music—the music of the spheres; the voice of the musician and of the jackdaw have an equal effect on him; or as Sa'dī has put it:

Kasani ki yazdan parasti kunand Bi-awazi dulab musti kunand.

Those who indulge in God-worship
Get into ecstacy from the creaking of a waterwheel

In the limited effect of music, one concerns himself with, either the flow of words, or of the sense underlying them or the art of the musician. For samā' three conditions are necessary—zamān (time), makān (place) and ikhwān (brotherhood). By time, is meant the time in which the audience is concentrated on the thought of God; by place, a secluded place from which strangers are excluded; and by brotherhood is meant the followers of the one and the same Pir.

Besides samā', the Chishtiyyah order practises Nāṣira and Maḥmūda which are practices akin to the Hīndu Samathi, converging the two eyes on the tip of the nose, and then gradually carrying the point of convergence up to the middle of the forehead; or they are similar to the navel gazers of the Middle Ages of Mount Athos in Germany. There are eighty and odd orders among the Ṣūfīs; the nature of the short cuts adopted by a few has been shown; and a list of some others of them is subjoined:

Studies in Tasawwuf

	Name of the order.		Name of the Founder.		Place of birth.		Date A M,
1.	Alwaniyya		Shaykh Alwan		Jadda		149
2.	Bistāmīyyah		Bāyazīd-i-Bistāmī		Jabal Bistām	•••	261
3.	Naqshbandiyyah		Khwāja Pīr Muḥammad	•••	Qaşr-i-ārifān	•••	719
4.	Buktasiyyah		Ḥājī Buktas		Khayr Shar	•••	730
5.	Suqtayiyyah	•••	Sarri Saqti		Baghdad		295
6.	Qādirīyyah	•••	Shaykh 'Abdul Qādi Jilani	i r	Baghdad	•••	561
7.	Rafā'iyyah		Shaykh Ahmad Rafe	ā'ī	Baghdad	•••	576
8.	Subarwardiyyab	•••	Shaykh Shababuddi	מ	Baghdad	•••	602
9.	Shazliyyah	•••	Abul Hasan	•••	Mecca	•••	650
10.	Maulaviyyah		Jalāluddīn Rūmī		Qonia	•••	672
11.	Jalwatiyyah	•••	Pîr Uftādî		Brussa	•••	988
12	Jamāliyyah	•••	Jamāluddīn		Constantinopl	e	1164
13.	Chishtiyyah	•••	Khwāja Mu'inuddin	٠	Sistan	•••	532

Chapter XI

PREDESTINATION

The controversy of Free-Will arose in the very beginning of the spread of Islam; but the people who discussed this question were discouraged by the Elders of the Church. The party that professed the freedom of man's will began and ended as a heretical sect. In A. H. 80 Ma'bad al-Juhani paid for heresy. He and 'Aṭā ibn Yassār went to Ḥasan Baṣrī (ob. 110) one day and said: "Kings shed blood and assert that they do it by the will of God." Ḥasan said: "They are liars, they do it by their own power." The question was also mooted befere Ḥasan Baṣrī whether a Muslim who committed a Kabīra sin (heinous) as opposed to Saghīra (trifling) continued to remain a Muslim.

Before Ḥasan could frame a reply, Wāṣil-ibn 'Aṭā, one of his disciples stepped forward, and cut the Gordian knot by saying: "Such an one is neither a believer nor an unbeliever—Muslim is a praise-worthy word, and cannot be applied to such an one—such an one will be in purgatory, before he is admitted to heaven." Hearing this decision, Ḥasan said: Itazala anna. (He has seceded from us). Thus arose the sect of Mutazilites—which had the Shī'ahs on its side; and they denied that God had predestined the action of man The Mutazilites were the men of Unity and Justice (Ahl-i-Tauḥīd wal 'Adl). Abū Hudhail Muḥammad al-Allaf (ob. 226) was a disciple of Wāşil in the second generation. He was a Qadarite and held that changes are by Divine necessity; it was God that was working man.

Al-Nazzām (ob. 231) then stepped in and asked whether it was God that did evil through man, he held that God had not the power to do evil.

Abul Ḥasan al Ash'arī (born 873 A. D), a remote descendant of Abū Mūsā al-Ash'arī, who had played a part in the arbitration between 'Alī and Mu'āwīyyah at the battle of Ṣaffīn was a pupil of Al-Jubbai, a Mutazilite doctor. He broke away from his master on the question whether all that God does is best (aslah) for his creatures and then gave out (1) that the Qur'ān was uncreated, (2) that man shall see God with these very eyes, and (3) that we are not the author of evil deeds. These doctrines subsequently formed the belief of Ahl-i-Sunnat wal jamā'at. Wal quarī khayrī wa shurrī min Allah-i-Taala. (The power of doing good and evil is from God.

The doctrine of predestination was considered in its religio-metaphysical aspect by the Muslim sects. From a purely metaphysical aspect, it is the doctrine of Free Will and Necessitarianism.

In a note to Reid's "Works", p. 599, Sir William Hamilton remarks: "Liberty does not consist in the power of doing what we will, but in the power of willing what we will." Necessitarianism is denying freedom of will. "The proper meaning of free," remarks Professor Bain, "is the absence of external compulsion; every sentient under a motive to act and not interfered with by another being is to all intents 'free'; the fox impelled by hunger and proceeding unmolested to a poultry-yard is a free-agent. The motive of hunger is here therefore a compulsion." "Given the motives, which are present to an individual's mind and given likewise the character, and disposition of the individual, the manner in which he will act may be unerringly determind. Religious Necessitarianism is, however, a sort of Fatalism. A superior being overrides our wishes and bends us according to its will."²

All religions which admit the existence of God believe that God has Will; and He directs the world as He wills Islam is submission to the Will of God; your will must pass away into the will of God. "Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." Religion being dualistic in nature, while in its inmost depths it is monistic, its two phases are to be considered side by side. Qur'an, like all other religious books, contains verses showing dualism; otherwise during the peregrinations of the mithal body in its upward course there could be no punishment for wrong-doing and reward for right-doing.

There are a large number of verses showing this, eg. Sūra Baqara—"God has fixed His seal on their hearts, and on their ears; and before their eyes, there is a curtain and for them is great calamity." Sūra Jāthiya—"Whatever acts you do, we cause them to be recorded (entered in your register.)

There are again verses which prove that man is not a free agent. Sūra Anbiyā', 3. 14: "By way of trial, we shall tempt you to good and evil—you shall return to us."

^{1.} Mental and Moral Science p 398.

^{2.} Mill's Logic, II, p. 416.

^{3.} Math. 6-10.

When Abū Ṭālib refused to embrace Islam, the Prophet was down-hearted, and then the verse descended, "Innaka la tahdi man ahbubtu wa la kinnallaha yahdi man yashau, (Truly you cannot rightly guide those whom you like, but God can rightly guide as He wills). Yahdi allah bi nurihi man yashau, (Whomsoever He likes, God directs him aright) There are thus verses showing that man is a free agent, and also that he acts out his destiny as pre-ordained for him; and it is left to those who have to understand them to find out their way.

In a pamphlet named "Mir'atul-'Ārifīn", said to have been written by Imam Zaynul-'Abidin at the dictation of his father Imam Husayn, it is said that God's hnowledge was in the abstract—in the Pen, (the First Intelligence) called also Umm-ul-kitab; and it became detailed in Lauh-i-mahfūz (the Preserved Tablet) also called Kitab-ul-Mubin; or Imamul-Mubin² and what was still abstract in the latter. showed itself as detailed in Kursi-The former thus. in its turn became Ummul-Kitāb and the latter Kitab-ul-Mubin; and the illustration is therein given of a seed and a tree; what is in the abstract in the seed, is detailed in the tree. That is what was in the abstract in the knowledge of God, has become detailed in the manifest world. Shaykh Muhiyūddīn ibn 'Arabī (ob. 1241 A. D) said "that God's knowledge is given Him by the objects which he knew (a'yan). He simply granted them their prayer to be what their nature required them to be-unless the thing to be known is there—the relation of knowledge cannot arise, and the three, viz., the knower, knowledge and the known cannot be." In the Dhat all these three are hidden: Fate therefore is fixed. God certainly decreed that everything should be what its nature required to be-Kun-fayakun-"Be and it was." There could be no command "to be" unless there was something already there to receive the command. Shaykh 'Abdul Karim Jili (ob. 1406 A.D.) however said: "That their (a'yan's) natures were necessitated by His knowledge of them before they were created and brought into existence. It was His knowing them; not the necessity inherent in them of being what they are, that caused them to become objects of His knowledge. After they were created, their nature required other than what He knew of them at first, and then He for the second time, decreed that they should be what their nature required, according to that which He knew." Again to quote the same synoptical translator of Insan-ul-Kāmil, "Ibn 'Arabī says God brought the world from being in His knowledge into actual being; Jili argues that this is making the world co-external with God. It is not so, the judgment that God exists in Himself is logically prior to the judgment that things exist in His knowledge; and the former judgment implies the non-existence of things and the existence of God alone-God brought things from not-being, and caused them to exist in His knowledge, i.e., He knew them as brought into existence from not-being; then He brought them forth from His knowledge, and then to exist externally—Does it follow that because they were produced from not-being that they were unknown to Him, because He caused them to exist in His knowledge. No, the priority is of logic and not of time. There is no interval between the not-being of things and their existence in knowledge. He knows them, as He knows Himself, but they are not eternal as He is eternal "

^{1.} Mirsad-ul-Ibad by Khwaja Najmuddin-in-Kubra, p. 142.

^{2.} Sūra 36 : 12.

^{1.} R. A. Nicholson: Studies in Islamic Mysticism, p. 101.

The argument is simply on the first stage of Tanazzulāt-i-sitta (The six devolutions). The Dhāt of God is unknown and unknowable (Kullu shayun halik illa wajhullah). He is known only when He is manifest in sifāt. Then there are four i'tabārāt (hypostases),'Ilm (knowledge), Nūr (Light), Wujūd (existence), Shuhūd (observation), and these four are i'tabārāt of Himself and not of any "Other"; for the Other is not there. The a'yān (the realities of things) are Him as the tree is the seed; there is no necessity of the tree being coeternal with the seed. While with Ibn 'Arabī Fate is unchangeable; with Jīlī it is liable to change, as Khwāja Ḥāfiz, one of his remote disciples, has said:

Dar ku i-niknāmi mara guzar na dadand Gar tu nami pasandi taghyir kun qaza ra.

On the road to good name, they allowed me not If thou doest not approve, change my Fate.

If Fate is liable to change, man is a free agent. If, however, there is non-else but God to will, then his fate is determined for him.

The sifat (attributes) of man are derived from or are circumscribed within the sifat of God; and man can have no idea of the sifat of God which are infinite; the finite cannot comprehend the infinite, and the will of man is derived from the will of God. The will of God is free; and man's will so far as it is identical with God's is also free, but it is limited, as his other sifat are limited and it partakes of his temporality (Hudūth) and then becomes predetermined. When man passes away in the stags of Fanā, the will of God alone remains as fons et origo of the will of the 'abd.

Fa il-i-harkat ast wu taskin ast Wahdahū la sharīka la aīn ast.

The agent in motion and in rest is He; This is the meaning of One without a partner.

Chapter XII

TASAWWUF IN THE MAKING

Mysticism in the world is as old as its hills. Adam was perhaps the first mystic who had direct illumination; and that without an effect on his part, (Zalik fauz lullahi yutihi man yashau wallahu zul fadlil-'azīm).¹ This is the grace of God, which He bestows on whomsoever He likes. There is a kind of mysticism, which is the result of acquisition (In Allaha la yuziu ajral muminīn).² By leading life in a particular way, you open up the channels through which the grace flows.

Pythagoras had prescribed a five years' course of silence on his disciples, before they were admitted to his mystic path. The word mystic is derived from mu, to close. The secret rites and lessons of the Greek mysteries were things about which the mouth was closed.

Jalāluddin Rūmī has also said:

Labi band o chashm band o gosh band Gur na bini sirri haq bar ma bi khand.

Close your lips, close your eyes and close your ears Laugh at me, if you do not see the secret of the Truth.

Man araf allaha, kala lisanalahu, says a Ḥadith (who knows God, his tongue is tied). The word was again applied to inner esoteric doctrines of a religion.

^{1.} Sūra Mā'idab, v: 43.

^{2.} Sura Al-i-'Imran, iii : 174-176.

The disciple admitted to these was a myst or mystic. The three mystic doctrines of Christianity are the Purification, Illumination, and Perfection, as materially illustrated by the Baptism, the Eucharist and the Unction. The Eucharist was transubstantiation, till Luther denuded it of its mystery, and converted it into consubstantiation. The mysteries were, on purpose, explained in parables and allegories, so that only those could hear that had ears to hear. The zest and relish of a doctrine is better realized, when it is presented in a foreign garb. The effort of the mind in realising it, brings its own reward.

Khush tar an bashad ki stiri dilbaran Gufta ayad dar hadith-i-digaran.

(Mathnawī)

The secret of the beloved is better relished, When explained in the language of others.

By closing every avenue of perception, one withdraws the mind from all external objects; and is able to concentrate it on a point within, when the heavenly light flashes on it. Behmen, the cobbler-mystic of Gorlitz, (in Germany) got into ecstacy, when in his presence a light flashed on a tin-jar. Inward contemplation solves the greater mysteries (Daqā'iq), while all other branches of knowledge (Ḥaqā'iq) depend on a process of ratiocination.

With the Catholic mystics of the medieval ages, mysticism, was the religion of the heart ('Ilmi ladunni), while knowledge obtained from observation and speculation was scholasticism ('Ilmi-kalām, knowledge on which disputation was carried on). When mysticism was applied to natural sciences amongst the Greeks, or when philosophy was correlated to mysticism among the Christians, it assumed the name of Theosophy, which is therefore a knowledge of the lesser mysteries. The word Theosophy cannot therefore be applied to Taṣawwuf or Ṣūfism, in its entirety.

The German mystics had two kinds of words in the realm of this knowledge—mystik and mysticismus. The Ṣūfīs too, have two words of similar import—the Ṣūfī and Sufistai. The Ṣūfī is the man who believes in the realities of things; his creed is Haqāyiqulashyā thābitatun wal 'ālamu ḥadīthun. (The realities of things are permanent, the world is transitory). The Sufistai is one who believes in the world being a delusion, a vanity. (Tasulluf).

"In the first year of the Hijra," says Ohsson in his Ottoman Empire, "forty-five citizens of Mecca joined themselves with as many of Al-Madina. They took an oath of fidelity to the doctrines of their Prophet and formed a sort of fraternity, the object of which was to establish among themselves a community of property, and to perform every day certain religious practices in a spirit of penitence and mortification. To distinguish themselves, they took the name of Ṣūfis. To the name of Ṣūfi, they added also that of faqīr, because the object was to renounce the goods of the world" "Al-faqqru fakhri" said a Hadīth (poverty is my pride).

Abul Fida, the famous Muslim historian of ancient days also traces their origin to Ashab-i-safa (sitters on the bench of the temple of Mecca). "They were poor strangers, without friends or place of abode, who claimed the promises of the apostle of God, and implored his protection. Thus the porch of the temple became their mansion; and thence they obtained their name. When Muhammad (peace be upon him) went to meals, be used to call some of them to partake with him, and selected others to eat with his companions."

No doubt the sect of the Ṣūſīs came into existence about this time; but they did not bear this name. The author of 'Awārif-ul-Ma'ārif (Shaykh Shahābuddīn Suharwardī, ob. 632 A.H.) thinks that this name did not come into existence for two hundred years after the Prophet's death. This statement is borne out by the fact that the word 'Taṣawwuf' does not find a place either in the Sittah compiled in 392 A.H. or even in the Qāmūs, the standard Arabic Dictionary compiled in 817 A.H.

These men are known in the Qur'an by the terms Muqarrabin (Friends of God), Ṣābirīn (Patient men), Abrār (Virtuous men), Zuhhāḍ (Pious men)—some of them were known as Muqarrabīn, for six hundred years in the region of Turkistān and Māvarā-un-Nahar (Mesopotamia).

The author of Ghiyāth-ul-Lughāt says, that Ṣuffā was the name of a tribe of Arabs, who in the time of Ignorance separated themselves from the world, and engaged themselves in the service of the Meccan temple—This Arab tribe of Suffā lived in Banī Muzar.

Thirdly, some say that they take their name not from Saf (bench), though they might have been bench-sitters as Abul Fidā says, but from sūf, wool; as they wore woollen garments; but this was repudiated, as wool is the garment of cattle (as soof libā-sul anam.)

A fourth sect derives it from suff, a row; (a farfetched idea); as these men will stand in the first row of men on the day of judgment.

A fifth derivation is from the Greek, Sophia, wisdom; in which case they become sophists—an origin and a significance which they emphatically repudiate.

Most probably the word comes from safā purity. These were men of pure hearts and pure lives like the hawārīs (apostles) of Jesus Christ. Baidāwī derives the word Ḥawārī from hawara, to be white (Syriac, hewara). They became hawaris, not because they wore white garments, but bacause of their pure lives; and so the Ṣūfīs were Ṣūfīs, because of their pure lives and pure hearts and spiritual elevation. No doubt they had their origin on the bench, but their appellation came to them on other considerations.

The Qur'an has defined 'Ubbād or the subsequent Sūss as 'the true servants of God who walk on the earth with polite and courteous bearing; and who when they address the ignorant people give reply to their salām (Wa 'ibadur Raḥmān illadhina yamshuna 'alal-ardi hawnan wa izā khātabahumul jāhiluna qālu salāma.)¹

A Sūsī has been defined in various ways.

Dhun Nün Misri says that a Süfi is one whose speech accords with his behaviour and whose silence indicates his state, and who discards worldly connexions. (As-sūfi iza nataqa biana nutuqihi min al ḥaqāyiqi wa an sakata nutqata anhul jawarih hiqatil alayiq).

Junayd of Baghdad defines Tasawwuf as an attribute in which the 'abd takes his stand, the substratum of which is an attribute of God, and the appearance, the attribute of the creature, i.e., in Tasawwuf, the attribute of the 'abd is annihilated and of God becomes everlasting, e.g., God has said: "Fasting is for me and I am its reward" (As-sawmu li wa ana ajzi bihi). The fast is for God, who neither eats nor drinks; and its appearance as a ceremony is for man. Abul Hasan-i-Nürī defines it as renunciation of all pleasures of nafs (At-Tasawwufu taraku kulli hazzin nafsi), thus emphasizing on asceticism. Further a Sufi is one who neither owns (property) nor is owned, s.e., one who is not in limitations (As-sūfi al ladhi la yamliku wa la yum/aku). Abū Bakr Shibli has said: Tasawwuff is renunciation, i.e., guarding one's self against seeing 'Other-than-God' in both the worlds." (As-sūfi la yara fid dārain ma Allah ghayrullah).

Khafif defines it as an Observance of the existence of God at the time of neglectfulness (Wajd Alla fi hin il-ghaflat).

Abū Sa'īd Fadlulla thinks that it is concentrating the mind on God (Al-Taṣawwufu qiyāmul qalb ma-Allah).

Taṣawwuf consists of two duties—action (formalism which consists in conforming to the lines of the Shari'at; and the thinking and feeling—(Tarīqat). There can be no correct feeling without correct thinking. First the idea that you form must be in the proper mould—before you can feel the existence of the idea in the correct way.

The mystical theology among the Catholic divines in Germany of the 14th century included Theopathetics (sulük) and Theurgy (mashaikhi).

"What saith History as to mysticism," asks Vaughan. "Very plainly she tells us that the mystics have been a power in the world, a power for good, in proportion as their teaching has been in accordance with the Bible: that the instances, wherein they have failed have been precisely those in which they have attempted (whether willingly or not) to substitute another and a private revelation for it." The first were ba-shara' (exoteric) mystics, i.e., those who observed the rules and regulations of the religon; and the others were bishara'—(esoteric). Anselm, Bernhard, Hugo and Wicliffe were of the first type; the German mystics generally were of the second type like Tauler, Prior Rusybroeck, Suso, Eckhart. A similar distinction existed among Muslim Mystics their names and doctrines will appear in detail later on. The lives of the general run of the Muslim Mystics were based on the teaching of the Prophet, for they maintained as Sa'dī expressed it in Bustān:

Dar-in rah juz mard i dai na raft Gum an shud ki dumbali-rai na raft Khilafi payambar kasi rah guzid Ki har giz bi manzil na khahad rasyd.

In this path none but the Dai entered;
Astray was he who left the trail of the shepherd.

^{1.} Hours with the Mystics-I, 207.

Who sought a path contrary to the Prophet's He will never reach the desired goal.

Those who gave up the path were those who had no liking for exertion, or those who were given to ecstacies. In a state of ecstacy, no blame attached to one's saying anything. The sayings were called Shathiyvat,-Mansur ibn Hallai said: Anal-Haggu' (I am the truth). Bāyazīd said: Subhāni ma azama shani (I am Holy, how great is my grandeur). The Prophet himself (peace be upon him) was in such a state and asked Hadrat 'Ay'esha: Man anti (who art thou)? She said: Ana 'Ay'esha. (I am 'Ay'esha); again asked: Man 'Ay'esha (who is 'Ay'esha)? the reply was Ibnnatus Siddia (Daughter of Siddia). Again, Manis Siddig? Sahūrul Muhammad (Father-inlaw of Muhammad) (peace be upon him). Again Man Muhammad (who is Muhammad)? Here Hadrat 'Av'esha stopped short; thinking that the Prophet was in another state.

In the beginning, the doctrines of Taṣawwuf were taught by signs, as even now the occult part of it is similarly dealt with. The adepts could talk with each other by signs, nay, without uttering a single word (clair-audience). Dhun-Nūn was the first to put the doctrines in words; Junayd of Baghdād systematized the same. Abū Bakr Shiblī was the first to preach them from the minbar of the mosque. He brought them out from the innermost recesses of the heart which is the throne of God (Qalb ul muminīna 'arsh-u!lah) to the rungs of the minbar, like Socrates who had brought down philosophy from the heaven to the earth. It was committed to writing by Abul Qāsim al Qushayrī, (437 A.H.) in his Risāla-i-Qushairiyah fil 'Ilm-ut-Taşawwuf.

^{1.} Preliminary Discourse to Kansul Asrar il Qidam by Mulla Mubarak 'Ali of Hyderabad, p. 5.

Feeling again is connected with speculation, i.e., getting above earthly things, and surveying them as if from a tower (Specula), flying to the dizzy heights of imagination, or it may be-being drawn up to the heights of illumination. It was on a mountain-height that Christ had his transfiguration. The schools of Muslim speculative philosophers or idealists have already been dealt with. The men of action were those mostly concerned with moral and spiritual regeneration. Of course, the two sets cannot be separated into watertight compartments. Those who speculated were also those who ascended the ladder of certain phases of moral conduct. Junayd, for example, based his Taşawwuf on eight different qualities of the heart, viz, submission, liberality, patience, silence, separation (from the world, woollen dress, travelling, poverty—as illustrated in the lives of Isaac, Abraham, Job, Zackariah, John the Baptist, Moses, Jesus, and the Seal of the Prophets (on whom all be peace). The Salik adopts any one of the paths chalked out for him; and thereby attains his station (Muqām), i.e., he stations himself on the attribute in which God manifests himself in him. He is a man of Mushāhada, e g , Hadrat 'Uthmān's station was Bash fulness; Hadrat 'Ali's, liberality of heart; Imam Hasan's, patience; Imam Husayn's steadfastness in truth, etc.

Hadrat Abū Bakr and Hadrat 'Ali founded their own orders. Three important orders trace their origin to the first, viz., Naqshbandiyyah, Baktashashiyyah and Bistāmiyyah; the remaining orders were the offshoots of the one founded by Ḥaḍrat 'Alī. On the demise of the former, his mantle descended on the shoulders of Salmān Fārsī; and on that of the latter, his mantle descended on Ḥasan al Baṣrī.

Uways-i-Qarnī (ob. 39 A.H.) who had no connection with the above two, founded his order of Uwaisīyyah. A Ṣūfī who has no Pīr is said to belong to the Uwaisīyyah Order, since Uways of Qarn (a village in Nejd) had none for his Pīr like the two founders, who had the Prophet for their Pīr. Uways-i-Qarnī is known only as 'Āshiq-i- Rasūl (Lover of the Prophet).

The Prophet (peace be upon him) has said: "The best of the times is my time, and then the one that succeeds it; and then the one that succeeds it" (Khayr-ul-quruni qarni, thummal ladhina yalunahum thummal ladhina yalunahum); and hence the three generations of the best Muslims are the Aṣhāb, Tabīs and Tabitabīs.

In the first generation connected with Aṣhāb-i-Suffā appear the names of Abū Bakr, 'Umar, 'Alī, Bifāl, Ibn Riyah, Abū 'Abdullah, Salmān-i-Fārsī, etc. In the second generation appear the names of Uways-i-Qarnī, Hiran ibn Heya, Abū 'Alī al-Ḥasan Baṣrī, etc; and in the third of Ḥabīb-i-'Ajmī (disciple of Ḥasan), Mālik ibn Dīnār, Abū Ḥanīfa, Dāwūd-i-Tāi, Bishr Ḥāfī, Dhun-Nūn Miṣrī, Ibrāhīm-i-Adham, Abū Yazīd Bisṭāmī, Sarrī Saqtī (Uncle of Junayd), Abū Ḥafa, Ma'rūf Karkhī, 'Abul Qāsim Junayd, etc.

After these arose different orders of Sūfis who ascended the ladder through their moral and spiritual exertions.

The following are some of the schools of ba-shara' Sūfis:

Muhāsabīyyah—founded by 'Abdullah Ḥārith Muhāsibī of Baṣra (ob. 243 A.H.). He distinguished Ḥāl (state of ecstacy) from Muqām (station). Ḥāl is secured by practice—(Mujāhada); and Muqām by the constant overshadowing of ḥal. Ḥāl is the gift of God, it is as fleeting as lightning. The beginning of Muqām is repentance. Ḥārith did not consider Raḍā (submission) as a maqām; Raḍā is the disappearance of other-than-God (Mā-siwāllah). According to him, knowledge is superior to action. We know God by knowledge and not by actions.

Knowledge is an attribute of God and action that of 'abd, Tafakkuru sā'tin khayrun min 'ibāditis thaqalayn (Contemplation of the moment is better than service in both the worlds). Sarrī Srqtī, the uncle of Junayd, arranged the system of Muqamāt and of Aḥwāl (plu. of Hāl).

Qayṣarīyyah—founded by Shaykh Qayṣarī ibn Hamdān. This sect was Malāmatī, i.e., they covered themselves with opprobrium and calumny, while inwardly at heart they were pure.

Tayfuriyyah—founded by Abû Yazid Tayfûri of Bistām (261 A.H.). He was styled Imām-ul-'Ulāmā. The doctrines of the sect consisted of Sukr and Saḥw. Sukr (intoxication) is a state of ecstacy—a dream-like state, only that in a dream the senses are closed; and in Sukr they are active, i.e., in Sukr, one enters the mithal world with his physical senses active and responsive to the Causal world, while in a true or veridical dream the avenues of his senses are closed. In Sukr of a lower kind again, one is lost in the observation of the manifestation of attributes and names, i.e., the attributes that he observes in and around himself, and also the dhats of self and others, he takes and feels to be attributes and Dhat of God in limitation, i.e., in manifestation; and thus loses the sense of materiality. In this state, Namaz is not incombent on him; which is the esoteric meaning of the Our'anic injunction La tagrabus salata wa antum sukara, "Do not approach Prayer, when you are in intoxication." In Sahw, he returns to the normal state with his experiences of sukr. Ordinarily, the Zāhir (the external) covers the Bātin (the internal). In Sukr, the Bātin overshadows the Zāhir; in Sahw both are equipoised—both are present to the mind's eye, at one and the same time, so that while continuing to have his beatific vision, the 'Abd serves God as His slave:

Gulshan-i-Rāz (line 347):

Kasi Mardai taman ust kuz tamami Kunad ba khwajagi kari ghulami.

He is a perfect man who in all his perfection

Does the work of a slave in spite of his lordliness. Junayd preferred Sahw to Sukr, as in the former, man is in a proper state. In Sukr, one is permanent in himself and annihilated in his sifat. When the Prophet (peace be upon him) threw a handful of dust at the enemy at the battle of Uhud, it was not he that threw it but God, (Mā ramayta iz ramayta wa lakin-allaha rama). In Sahw one is permanent in himself as well as in his sifāt. When David killed Goliath, it was said Qatala Dāwūdu Jāluta. The action of killing is referred to David himself.

^{1.} Bahr-ul-Ma'ni, Letter 15th,

Junaydiyyah—founded by Abi Qāsim Junayd of Baghdād (297 A.H.). He was given the title of Tāwūs-ul-'Ulāmā (the Peacok of Ulāmā). His Tasawwuf was based on Sahw and love, and his practice was contemplation (Murāqaba) He discarded Sukr, "for," he said, "we have no need of the company of those who are unsound." There is necessity for exertion, for the grace of God to flow towards us. This appears to be a doctrine of salvation by grace, as opposed to Luther's doctrine of justification by works. "A free gift is not based on works. He also said, if you discard Satan, you give him an independent existence, which he has not."

Nūrīyvah—founded by Abī Ḥasan ibn Muḥammad Nūrī (Born at Baghdād and lived at Bagsu between Hirāt and Merve, ob. 295). He said: "Know God through God." Solitariness is propinquity to Satan. He was called Nūrī (one of light), because he had the faculty of reading other people's thoughts, wherefore he was also called 'Jāsūs-ul-Qalb'' (spy of the heart); or because his proofs were clear; or, because, as some say, a dark room was illuminated, when he opened his lips. He was a disciple of Dhun-Nūn-i-Miṣrī. His principle was self-sacrifice. According to him, the world was a place for sacrifice;

"you cannot reach happiness, until you give up the best of what you have" (Lan tanālul-birra hatta tunfiqu mimmā tuhibbun). When the Khalifa ordered Nūrī, Ruqam and Abū Ḥamza to be beheaded, Nūrī stepped forward to be beheaded first.

Junayd and Nūrī, two old men could be seen. of an evening, wandering through the bazaars of Baghdad, taking away whatever they laid their hands upon; and delivering up, whatever was demanded of them. Like Socialists, they did not say "We are all here by the equal permission of the Creator, we are all here by the equal title to the enjoyment of His bounty, with an equal right to the use of all that nature so impartially offers." They felt that the property was God's, nobody has a title in it; let it change hands without a demur. Like Hobbes, they felt that property, rights and privilleges are the outcome of the artificial construction of Society. Their practice was neither utilitarianism nor Hedonism nor yet St. Simonism. It was "turn thy left cheek, whenever thy right one is slapped," for the abuser as well as the blesser are but the manifestation of God.

Suhayliyyah.—Founded by Suhayl ibn 'Abdulla Tastūrī. His sulūk consisted of Mujāhada. "Those who labour in God's ways, We guide them to the right path." "(Wal ladhina jāhadu finā lanhadiyannahum subulanā) His was the doctrine of salvation by work as opposed to Junayd's salvation by grace. The Prophet (peace be upon him) after a certain battle said: "We return from the lesser Jihad to the greater Jihad (Rajatu anā min al jihād il asghari il-al-jihād-il-akbar). Suhayl considered mujāhada as a high road to mushāhada. This is the way of shari'at. But Mujahada is a fight with nafs—which is a manifestation of God Man 'arafa nafsahu faqad 'arafa rabbahu. (He who understands his nafs, understands his God.) You cannot kill nafs; but you can divert it into other channels just like khatras, whose transmission can be diverted from one ism to another. He who understands his nafs as transitory, understands His God as eternal. He, who understands his nafs as 'abd, understands his God as rabb. He who understands his nafs as "Fed" (Marzūq), understands his God as the feeder (Rāziq). Suhayl was the man who correlated Sharī'at to Tariqat.

^{1.} Sura 'Al-i-'Imran, iii : 91.

^{2.} George's Progress and Poverty, p. 262.

^{3.} Sûra 'Ankabût, xxix, 69.

Vilāyatīyyah.—This sect was founded by Abī 'Abdulla ibn Hākim Tirmizī. "Vilāyat" is derived from vila "Victory," "greatness" (Alā inna auliyā allahi lā khawfun 'alayhim wa lā hum yaḥzunūn).¹ "Beware, there is no fear for the friends of God, and they shall not be sorry."

Walis are those who are annihilated in their selves, and are an eternal in the beatific vision. There are always 4000 auliyā' in the world, who keep it going; of these in the order of ascendency are 300 akhyār, and of these latter 40 are abrār, of these latter again, seven are abdāls. Then four autāds, three naqibs, and the head of them all is Quiub (the pole around which the existence turns), or Ghaus. These, in a way, correspond to the orders of spiritual existences explained by Iamblichus, the first Grecian theurgist (Mashāikh), and commented upon subsequently by Dionysius and St. Hugo, viz, gods, demons, heavens, principalities, angels, souls, also spoken of in Milton's Paralise Lost. The Mutazilites do not recognise the existence of these orders.

¹ Sūra Yūnus, x : 62.

Kunnazīyyah.—Founded by Abū Sa'īd Khunnaz. (ob. 890 A.D). He thought that Fanā and Baqā were attributes. This subject has already been dealt with, in a previous chapter. This is the doctrine of ascent which was in vogue for the first time amongst the Catholic monks, led by John Scotus Erigena during the Middle Ages of Europe.

Khafīfiyyah.—Founded by Abī 'Abdulla Khafīf. He was of royal blood, like Ibrāhīm-i-Adham, a wali of a former period. His doctorine was Ghibat and Hudur. This was to make the mind oblivious to Māsiwāllah (other-than-God); so much so that you become oblivious of your own existence, your own thoughts, and your own will; which in turn become, the existence and thought and will of God. When you disappear from yourself, (Ghayb), you appear before God (Hudur). In Eckhart's system, "separate personality is a sin—a sort of robbery of God; it resembles those spots on the moon which the angel describes to Adam 'as unpurged vapours, not yet into her substance turned'1—Eckhart would probably apply such expressions, not to actual self, for that he supposes non-existent and reduced to its true nothing; but to the Divine Nature which, as he thought, then superseded within him the annihilated personality."

^{1.} Vaughan's Hours with the Mystics, 11, 282.

Eckhart was irreverent; for with Khafifi, the vapours would remain as vapours on the Moon. The descendants of Adam were in ghayb from themselves while in the spine of Adam; and in this condition they were in hudur with God. The a'yan of the world which are the extremist realities of the world were similarly situated. Mulla Jamí has expressed this idea thus:

Hubbaza rozi ki pish az roz wa shab

Farigh az anduh wa āzad az taab

Muttafiq bu dim ha Shahi-i-Wujūd

Hukm-i-ghayriat bakulli mahu bud

Bud a'yāni-jahan bi chand wa chun

Zi imtiyazi ilmi wa ghari masun

Na gahan dar jumbish amad parhi-jud

Jumla raz khud bi khud zahir namud.

Excellent the time before day and night

Devoid of trouble and free from fatigue,

United were we with the King of Existence.

The rule of separation was wholly melt,

The a'yān of the world were without number and similarity

From distinction of knowledge and hiddenness protected.

Suddenly the ocean of existence broke into waves And manifested all in Himself and out of Himself.

The a'yan were thus in ghayb (absent) to themselves, but were in hudur (presence) in the knowledge of God. Husain ibn Mansur, Abu Bakr Shibli, etc. gave preference to Ghayb over Hudur; and so in their moments of ecstacy, they gave out such expressions as "I am the Truth", "(Anal-Ḥaqq)." "There is none under this cloak except God" (Laysa jubbati siwallah). Others and theirs is the vast majority—gave preference to ḥuḍūr over Ghayb, like Ḥārith Muhāsibī, Junayd, Suhayl and Muḥammad bin Khafīf. These latter are those who take care of this world as well as of the next.

Siyārīyyah.—Founded by Abī 'Abbās of Siyār (a village in Merv). They identified attributes with the Dhāt of God, and differentiated His actions from Him. This is known as the doctrine of Jama' and Tafrīqa—assimilation and differentiation. In the matter of differentiation (Tafrīqa), the Mutazilites differed from them, as they held that God sees by His own Dhāt, knows by His own Dhāt, hears by His own Dhāt, etc.

There are some sects, which are known as Suis: but which are removed from their inner court like the Mujassamiyyah (the Corporealists), the Hululis (Incarnationists), the Tanāsukhis (Transmigrationists), etc The first of these sects traces its origin to Abi Halman of Damascus; and the second, to Munsur Abul Ghayd Hallaj (who lived in Iraq and was a contemporary of Junayd). The latter is to be distinguished from Mansūr-i-Fārsī of Baghdad, who was considered to be a Mulhid (atheist). The first Munsur gave out Anal-Hagg (I am the Truth). He was not, however, a Hululi (Incarnationist) like the Phrygian mountaineer Montanus (the founder of the sect of Montanists) who gave out that he was a subject of Divine possession, and taught among the Protestant peasants of Cevennes. Hallaj simply meant that he was a manifestation of the Truth. For this very reason, he was supported by Junayd. Although the fatwa of the former's execution was also signed by him, out of regard for the exoteric Shari'at, Junayd said "Munşūr and I are one and the same thing, only that madness has saved me, and reason ruined him). (Ana wal Hullāju shayun wāḥidun fa khallasani jununi wa ahlakahu 'aqluhu).

Shaykh Abū Sa'id Abul Khayr (ob. 440 A.H. = 1040 AD), the Murshid of the famous Wali of Baghdad Shaykh 'Abdul Qadir Jilani (Pir Dastagir), considered him to be "a man of the secret." The doctrine of Tanasukh (Transmigration) was that the soul transmigrated into another body,—re-incarnation (Naskh); or into the bodies of animals (Maskh); or into vegetables (Faskh), or into minerals (Raskh). Ahmad ibn Thabit, and his disciples Ahmad ibn Yabus, 'Abū Mslim of Khurāssān, Shaykh-ul-Ishrāq, 'Umari-Khayyam were the exponents of the doctrine of reincarnation, basing their arguments on Sūra Bagara, (61:92), Sūra Mā'īda, 55. Druses, who were the followers of Darazi were also believers in it. They even went to the length of saying that Christ had reappeared in the person of Salman-i-Farsi; and that Hamza had reappeared in the person of a son of 'Ali 'Umar Khyyam even believed in Maskh. The following interesting story is reproduced in E.G. Browne's Literary History of Persia, (Vol. I, p. 254).

"It is related that there was in Nishāpūr, an old College, for the repairing of which donkeys were bringing bricks. One day, while the sage (Ḥakīm, i.e., 'Umar) was walking with a group of students, one of the donkeys would, on no account enter (the College). When 'Umar saw this, he smiled went up to the donkey and extemporised the following quatrain:

Ay rafta, wu baz amada bal hum gashta Namat zi miyan-i-namha gum gashta Nakhun hama jam amada, wa sum gashta Rish az pasi kun, amada wa dum gashta.

O lost and now returned 'yet more stray'
The name from men's remembrance passed away,
Thy nails have now combined to form the hoofs,
Thy tail's a beard turned round the other way.

The donkey then entered; and they asked 'Umar the reason of this. He replied the spirit which has now attached to the body of this ass [formerly] inhabited the body of a lecturer in the college; therefore it will not come in, until now when perceiving that its colleagues had recognized it, it was obliged to step inside.

Was this a hoax or a reductio at absurdum of the theory on the part of Khayyām?

The doctrine of transmigration was not however accepted by the Sūsī mystics, who held that "it was an abomination to all Muslims", as Dr. R A. Nicholson has put it. The doctrine of Baruz, in which the $r\bar{u}h$ of a departed saint could foster and cherish and guide the $r\bar{u}h$ of a living man was in favour with them. The $r\bar{u}h$ is neither within nor without the body; only its vision is on the body, the $r\bar{u}h$ of a departed "friend of God" could guide the $r\bar{u}h$ of a living man on whom it has fixed its vision.

The Sofis have a doctrine of their own which conflicts with the doctrine of transmigration, viz,

^{1.} Studies in Islamic Mysticism, p. 225.

Tajaddud-i-Amthāl (Revival of Similitudes). They hold that tajalli (illumination, epiphany) has no repetition, thus contradicting the statement that history repeats itself. God's power is infinite, and He is exhaling out of the deeps of His Existence ever new forms, and ever new lives; there is no scope for the repetition of the same tajalli. This doctrine may be traced to the Grecian philosophers, Leucippus and Democritus who maintained that Non-being exists as well as Being. "The Being is that which fills space the Full; Non-being is the Void." "All atoms from eternity move downward in the infinite space." There is ever a change in the atoms of the Cosmos there is no reappearance of the same atom in the same place. Balhum fi labsin min khalqin jadid (Sūra-Oahf: 15). God manifests Himself in ever changing garbs. Wataral jibala jamidathun wu hiva tamarru marras sahab. "You see the mountain as solid. although it runs like a cloud." This points to the modes of manifestation and not to metempsychosis.

Some others of the Bi-shara' orders are Madārīyyah of Zinda Shāh Madār of Syria (whose shrine is at Makanpur in Oudh), Rafā'yyah, Qalandarīyyah, etc.

^{1.} Zeller's Outline of Greek Philosophy, p. 78.

Chapter XIII

TASAWWUF AND THEOSOPHY

It would seem as if Sufism (Hybrid form of the word Tasawwuf) and Theosophy have had a common origin. The word Theosophy (Theos, sophia, Divine Wisdom) was originally used by the Grecian school of Porphyry. Amongst the earlier Germans, it meant mysticism as applied to natural sciences; and later on, in the medieval ages, when scholasticism prevailed, it came to mean mysticism as applied to philosophy. The present day theosophy is an exposition of the phenomena of the world on esoteric basis; in India in is applied to an exposition of the mysticism of the Hindu sacred books; and acting out the truths underlying that mysticism. The word Tasawwuf or Sūfism is variously derived (vide chapter on "Tasawwuf in the Making"). It was originally applied to Ahl-i-safa (men of the bench) a set of the holy men (Safa) of Mecca, who had given up the world and lived on the love of God and His Prophet (peace be upon him); in fact who having had a glimpse of the Divine truths, had become obvious to the cravings of their creaturecomforts.

At any rate, the two systems seems to take their source at the same fountain-head viz., the esoteric realization of religious truths, as Maulana Rūmī has, unceremoniously, put it:

Ma zi Quran maghs ra bar darteem Ustakhan pishi saghan andakhteem. We have taken the marrow from the Qur'an And cast the bones before the dogs.

Like two rivers from the same source, they converge and diverge at different points before they reach their final goal. The two having their origin at the same fountain, start with the same object—the realisation of an idea of God; but as they pursue their courses, they seem to fertilise different fields of thought. This chapter will set forth the points or divergence.

THE GOD IDEA

It is sometimes believed that Taṣawwuf or Sūfism inculcates Pantheism, that the world is the manifestation of God, and that there is no place for 'abd (creature) in it. If there is no 'abd, then the whole superstructure of Islam must come down; for the Prophet always preached and taught that "Muhammad was His 'abd and His Messenger."

Several Sūfī thinkers have no doubt given out in their moments of ecstacy: "I am the Truth," like Munsūr-i-Ḥallāj; "O Praised, how great is my Glory!" like Bāyazīd. That which cannot be traced to the Prophet, before whom these thinkers licked the dust, cannot be taken as the genuine teaching of Islam. Besides there might be a special sense in these sayings other than that implied in Pantheism Pantheism deals a direct blow to the extra-cosmic conception of God; but Sūfism is such that while it accepts the extra-cosmic conception, it also believes in His immanence. There are such verses in the Qur'ān: "Really God surrounds you"; "God is with you wherever you are"; "God is in the East and the West, so wherever thou turnest thy face, there is the face of God"; these show the extra cosmic conception. And again there are such verses as: "He is nearer to you than your jugular vein; "He is in your individuality, but you do not see", these show His immanence.

In Islam, the 'abd is always kept in the forefront; and the Founder of Islam never proclaimed Himself as the Truth, or as an Incarnation of God; the motto of His religion was: "There is no god but God: Muḥammad is His 'abd and messenger." On account of these conflicting conceptions, the idea of God is to be searched for in a deeper depth. To quote the following expressive lines of Mullā Jāmī to begin with:

Hubbaza rozi ki pish az roz wa shub,
Farigh az anduh wa azad az tzab,
Muttafiq budim ba Shah-i-Wujud.
Hukm-i-ghayriat ba kulli mahu bud
Bud ayan-i-jihan bay chund wa chun,
Zi imtiyaz it ilmi wa ghayri masun.
Na gahan dar jumbish amad bahri jud
Jumla raaz khud ba khud zahir namud.

Excellent the day before day and night,
Devoid of trouble and free from fatigue;
United were we with the King of Existence.
The rule of separation was wholly null.
The a'yān (or realities) of the world were without number and similarity,

^{1.} Sûrs Hadid 11.

^{3.} Sūra ccvi: 16 and 20.

^{2.} Sura Bagara 128.

^{4.} Sūra Dhāriyāt 19.

From distinction of knowledge and hiddenness protected

Suddenly the ocean of existence broke into waves

And manifested all in Himself and out of Himself.

Thus the realities of 'abd remain for ever in the knowledge of the Supreme, who is everlasting. The manifestations are ever changing, the a'yan remain the same.

The Dhat of God is ever the same; then come His four primary attributes: Knowledge, Light, Existence and Manifestation; to these are added three more: Speech, Hearing and Sight. These are what are called the seven primary attributes (the Ummahatus Sifat, the mothers of attributes); and then are evolved the other innumerable attributes. The attributes subsist on the Dhat, the one ever the same; and the other at no two moments the same. The Mutazilites and the Shi'ahs do not believe in the attributes as subsisting on the Dhat. Their God is without His separate attributes. From the attributes come the names (asma'). If speech is an attribute, speaker is a name (ism); for there can be no manifestation of an attribute (Sifat) without the manifestation of action (fa'il) first; and there are four primary names (Ummahātul-Asmā', the mothers of names): "The first and the last—the apparent and the real":1 and out of these are evolved the other innumerable asma'. The world is said to be a manifestation of asma' of the Supreme; but an ism (name) cannot be manifest ewithout a rasm (its counterpart). And this rasm is the reality of 'abd, which is its form in the knowledge of God. When He looked at Himself as Rahim (merciful), there was simultaneously in His knowledge the reality of murhum (one on whom mercy is bestowed.) There was no duration of time between the two. When a seal is set, the words on the seal may be read one after the other; but in the setting of the words on the wax, there is no lapse of time. When He saw His own names as rabb. He saw the realities of the forms as murbūb. At this, the very first stage, the realities of 'abd became separate. Before that, there was no ism and there was no rasm; "they were not separate from Truth or from each other": but when these were there, they were separate in His knowledge. Thus began separation; the attributes of Dhat (of God) are positive the attributes, and the attributes of the dhat (form) of 'abd are negative attributes. Whatever one possesses, the other does not. The one possesses His attribute of existence, the other is devoid of existence. Then the forms take their shape by, as it were, borrowing the attributes of the rabb. He manifests in them His own attributes. Now it must be remembered that no attribute exists without Dhat; the attribute is only a manifestation of the Dhat. So the manifestations of the attributes in the 'abd are the manifestation of the attributes (behind which is the Dhat) of the rabb. Where therefore the world is a manifestation of the names of God. (Dhat plus sifat), the unchangeable from

^{1.} Sura Rahman, 26.

'ayn is still there in His knowledge. The 'abd is there for ever. And hence the Prophet, the first 'abd, always gave himself out as His "'Abd and Rasūl". There is, however, the stage of fanā; the manifested 'abd annihilates himself in his thought, his own attributes and then his own Dhāt; and begins to ascend and ascend the ladder till he reaches the very form in the knowledge of God and annihilates his own form also in his own thought. From his own side, he annihilates his own form (his 'ayn); but from the side of the Supreme, the forms remain. When he annihilated his own 'ayn from his side, his form from the side of the Supreme remains as it was; and thus the 'abd sometimes gives himself out: "I am the Truth."

Maulānāī Rūm says:

Chun pari ghalib shawad var admin, Gum shawad az mard wasfi murdumi Her chi guyad aan pari gufta buad Zin saray nay zan saray gufta buad. Ruay ou rafta pari khud wu shuda Turk bay ilham tazi gu shuda. Gum ba khud ayad na danad ek lughat. Chun pari ra hast aen dhāt wa sifāt, Pus khudawand pari wa admi Az pari khi bashad dash akhar kami Chun pari ra ain dam wa qanoon buad Kirdagar-i-aan pari khud chun buad.

When a fairy overpowers a man, Vanishes from that man the attribute of manhood.

Then what that man says becomes the saying of the fairy.

Neither from this side nor from that is said. His nature gone, he becomes the fairy itself, The Turk without inspiration talks Persian When he recovers, he does not know one word of that language.

When the fairy has thus its dhat and its attribute. Well the Lord of the fairy and man, Why will He have any the less? When the fairy has this faculty, How will the Creator of that fairy Himself be?

The question has often been asked whether the God of the Qur'ān is a personal God. He is not a personal God in a material or anthropomorphic sense, that He is a big man sitting on His 'Arsh, surrounded by His angels, and regulating the affairs of the world; for He then becomes an idol. But He is a personal God in the sense that He has attributes. But these attributes are not like our attributes. We speak with our tongue, hear with our ears and see with our eyes.

In our case:

Na budi chun ki fi at afaridund Tura az bahr-i-kari afaridund

(Gulshan-i-Raz, line 542.)

You existed not when your actions were originated.

You were appointed to fulfil a certain purpose.

The faculties manifested themselves through organs; but the faculties are not, or are not like, the organs themselves.

INCARNATION

The manifestation of God in flesh and blood for the salvation of humanity. The Eastern Dispensation-whose apex Islam claims to be-was free from a working hypothesis of incarnation. The idea that the paschal lamb referred to the crucifixion of Christ was not accepted as a working hypothesis till the advent of St. Paul. Moses had his talk with God on Mount Sina'i; Christ underwent transfiguration on the mount: and Muhammad had his mi'rāj, or elevation, or, as it is called, the night journey. Muhammad (peace he upon him) ascended from heaven to heaven, and saw the previous Prophets, till he was admitted into the audience hall of God. He is reported to have beheld God in the shape of a 'young beardless youth'. Thus the purdah still hung; the limitation still existed.

The 'ayn of Muḥammad (peace be upon him) was the last point reached by him. Some men like Muḥiyuddin ibn 'Arabī, however, consider that the Ḥaqī-qat-i-Muḥammadī was the name of a rank. Viceroy is the name of a rank, irrespective of the individual who happens to hold that rank. So is the stage called Ḥaqīqat-i-Muḥammadī. That stage was fully manifested in Muḥammad. It had manifested itself in different and lesser degrees in preceding prophets, like Adam, Moses, David, Jesus. In that particular ism each individual had annihilated his 'ayn, and God alone was manifest, for the time being. This fanā or annihilation results in everlastingness or baqā. The martyrs in jihād are said to have attained everlasting life. When the soldiers in Badr had slain their enemies, it was said: "They have not slain them, but it is God who slew them." When Muḥammad (peace be upon him) shot his arrows in the same battle: "Thou hast not shot (arrows), but it was God that had shot." The individuals had annihilated themselves, and had reached their 'ayn in the ecstatic condition in which they were, when they fought fi sabilillah (in the way of God). The actions done by them were not their actions, they were not held responsible.

REINCARNATION

If there is no incarnation there is no transmigration or reincarnation either, i.e., the individual souls taking different shapes, till they have exhausted their karma. Reincarnation appears to be a sound enough doctrine to explain the unevenness and aberrations and apparent injustices in the lot of people on this earth. Why is one man doomed to perpetual suffering and another destined to everlasting sunshine and happiness? But it does not strike at the very root. It takes for granted that all souls must have started with the same capacity, and that they increased that capacities by reincarnating from time to time, till they obtained the full benefit of their earthly experience. They start as germs and by constant migrations attain their perfection; but their different conditions have been brought about by inequalities in their worldly careers; so that their different conditions are the outcome of their different careers; and hence the question of justice remains as much unsolved as before. They had no power over the inequalities of the mundane sphere; and therefore why the suffering kept in store for them? They begin their careers in the same conditions. A savage lives and dies, and the experience gained on the savage plane helps him to be born as a semi-savage, and additional experience in that life help him to the ladder of the civilised man. It is, as if he is destined to suffer to gain more knowledge till losing his interest in the fruition of his endeavours, he obtains Nirvāna. Here will—an attribute of God given as a loan to this 'abd—clashes with necessity.

He is led to be born in a particular family or tribe according to his development; and that development could not accord with his environment, or he has to wait endlessly; he is thus helpless and shorn of freedom. Cannot this reincarnation be believed to be merely "The progress of the soul from one stage of existence to another, symbolised and vulgarly believed to be rebirths in animal bodies?" 1

"The metempsycho is must only be regarded as a supplementary doctrine, disfigured by theological sophistry with the object of getting a firmer hold upon believers through a popular superstition. Esoterically it is explained in the mystery of the Kounboum, and relates to the purely spiritual peregrinations of the human soul?"²

Cannot therefore the different peregrinations merely be in the region of the lokas? After its disappearance from the world, the soul appears in the different lokas, and gradually passes on to svarga, where he has the beatific vision. These lokas are the seven heavens of the Muslims; and the wheel of karma merely refers to its peregrination in the lokas.

^{1.} The Isis Unveiled, i p. xxxvi.

^{2.} Ibid . p. 289.

"As the dweller in the body experienceth in the body, childhood, youth and old age, so passeth he on to another body; the steadfast one grieveth not thereat." 1

Thus says Shri Krishna. This obviously refers to the future condition. Just as there are several stages in the development of the body in this world, so there are several stages in its development in the next. The man who has eaten something disagreeable has not to take out his stomach to purify himself and get better. He sends down a bitter pill on the top, and thus cures his internal disorder. "As you sow, so you reap" forms the formula of all religions. A Muslim tradition has it, that "this world is the harvest-field of the next." After he has reaped the fruits of his actions, he passes on to the next higher stage. The hell is not a place of punishment but of correction. If the inequalities of life cannot be explained away by a doctrine of reincarnation—how else can they be and still establish the justice of God?

Before the creation of the world, it is said God brought together all the souls that were to find manifestation, and enquired: "Am I not your Lord (Rabb)?" The chorus went forth: "Yes, Thou art our Lord God." This is what is called the Roz-i-mithaq (the day of promise). Esoterically speaking, when the ism found itself-it found itself with its corresponding rasm, as given in the simile of the seal (supra); the ism was the rabb (the ruler) and the rasm was its murbab (the ruled). In a higher plane the plane of the three Logoi, (or as they are called ahdivat, wahdat, and wahidiyat by the Sulis), the ism and rasm are the same; in the lower plane, the one is the counterpart of the other. Each ism was the 'ayn of each rasm, which was a centre in Divine Consciousness; and that centre had to find its manifestation by externalisation. Each 'ayn-i thabita had to become an 'ayn-izāhira. When the ism Providence found its local habitation, so to speak, in the Divine consciousness, its rasm (i.e. one who would be provided with) was there in Divine Knowledge, and of its own free-will and accord (in other words, of its own tendency) prayed to its rabb for its manifestation. There was no compulsion. It was perfect willingness to please its Lord. When the differentiation between rabb and murbub occurred, the murbub, as the servitor of its rabb deliberately chose its role to please its rabb. If the leper (the mughur, i.e., one on whom wrath falls), chose its own role on that day to please its rabb, the gahir (i.e., the wrathful), he is not to blame his rabb for being His mughur in manifestation, though he might blame Him in his manifestation, forgetting his previous history. The Prophet Job suffered without complaint, because he had reached his 'ayn in his suffering. The distress, the agony, are past and gone, when once the true origin is realised. The merest beggar on the roadside with festering sores becomes as contented and happy as the veriest Cæsar in his palace. He submits to the will of his rabb, submission being the key-note of Muslim theology, which of course, is the exoteric form of Muslim philosophy.

Further the hope lies in the changing manifestation: "Verily after sorrow, there cometh joy," says the Qur'ān. The leper has had this suffering in this world; and he enters upon the next, better equipped to travel higher up. This is why people who die from lingering painful diseases are called martyrs.

The following verses from the Que'an are quoted to give a denial to transmigration.

When death comes to any one of them, he says: "O Preserver, send me back that I may do good works in the world that I am leaving—the answer will be 'never'.1

There will be barzakh in their front, till they are raised again."

"When the trumpet will be blown, then there will be no relationship between them. Nobody will care for another; whosoever has his scale heavier will have good reward, and those whose scales are light are those who have ruined themselves, and they will be ever in Jehannum (gehanna)."²

Curiously enough, there have been people, though very few and far between, who think that reincarnation can be traced in the Qur'ān.

"What are we tired and fatigued after first creation? But they (the unbelievers) are in doubt and error as regards new creation?"

"Tell. O Muhammad, all praise to God, but

^{1.} Sura Mumin, 11.

^{2.} Sura Ma'ida, 112 and 114.

^{3.} Sura Kahf 50.

many of them do not understand it. The life in this world is play. The home of the future is real living. They do not understand it."

"We created man in trouble."2

"We swear by the declining day (afternoon), man is in similar decline."

"Say, O Muhammad, He who created them first, will revive them. He knows about all creation." 4

Muḥammad's dispensation, (peace be upon him) like the dispensations which had preceded it, included the doctrine of the resurrection of bodies on the day of judgment. References appear to be made to this throughout the above verses.

Authority is again quoted from the Mathnawi of Jalaluddin Rumi:

We have grown like grass often,

Seven hundred and seventy bodies have we taken. From the inorganic, we developed into the vegetable;

Dying from the vegetable we rose to animal;
And leaving the animal we became man.
Then what fear that death will lower us?
The next transition will make us an angel,
Then shall we rise from angels and merge in Infinity

Have we not been told All of us will return.

The first part refers to material evolution, on

¹ Súra Ankabút 29.

^{2.} Sûra Balad 34.

³ Süra Asr 20

^{4.} Sura Yasin 23

this side the grave; the second part to evolution beyond the grave, through the different spiritual planes.

The third point at which Taşawwuf parts company with Theosophy is

SYMBOLISM

The Muslim mosque is a vacant space—nothing to touch or see—a symbol of the house of the Supreme. The Muslim fixes his eyes on the point of space in front of him, at which he performs his sajdah (prostration); and thus concentrates his attention at that point, according to Baiḍāwī who was a Shāſī'. When he prays, he is ordered to assume an attitude as if he sees God; and if he cannot do this, to imagine that God sees him. There is no symbol required to attract and concentrate his attention.

It may be remembered that the Arabs had worshipped gods and goddesses in the temple of Mecca. There were 360 of them. They were the embodiments of the different asmā, (names) of God. Muhammad (peace be upon him) emptied the temple of those graven images. Though the asma' of God are recognised, the Dhat or individuality of God is not to be ignored and hidden behind the asma". The extinction of the deities as intermediaries in the temple was the extinction of the embodiment of names in worship. The worshipper always stood face to face with the Supreme. Each ism-i kiyani is directly under the influence of its own ism-i-ilahi and indirectly of the other asma' (vide diagram on page 54. Wa ma min dabbatin fil ardi illa hua akhizun bi nasiyatiha, hazi rabbi ala siratin mustaqim (Every creeping creature on the earth has its forelock in hand of the its rabb, and that rabb is in the right path), vide page 57-58 ante. Each ism-i-kivānī is guided by its rabb in other words, each marbub seeks the help of and worships its rabb whose form it is: Iyyaka nabudu wa iyyaka nastayin1 (Thee do we worship, and of Thee we seek help) This is the prayer of each murbub to its rabb; and this is the line of barzakh between the two sets of names, according to Mir'at-ul-'Ārifin-a treatise written at the dictation of Imam Husayn. Man is a conglomeration of all the conceivable asmā'-i-kivānī; and he is to seek the help of, and worship the Being, whose form or "own image" he is, (vide pp. 70 and 76 ante), and who is the possessor of all the conceivable asmā'-i-ilāhi, ie, who is the Rabb-ul-Arbab—God; and he is to worship none else. This is his prayer of Iyyaka nabudu. Man is not to confine himself to the worship of one particular ism. This particularization of one name to the exclusion of other names. (for the name Allah is ism-i-jāmi-it comprises all names) militates against and mars the perfection, which should be characteristic of a perfect being like man—the vicegerent of God on earth, and is a source of his degradation; and is a shirk and therefore a sin.

In the case of auliya, it is different; they realize the named, through the name—look through Nature up to Nature's God,—drop materiality altogether in their outlook of life, according to the advice of Rum:

Dar guzar kun jumla tan ra dar nazar Dar nazar rau dar nazar rau, dar nazar

^{1.} Sára, Fátiha : 3.

Drop the material body out of sight, Go into sight, go into sight and go into sight.

No doubt, there are intermediaries working in this mundane sphere, e.g., if there were not the forces called gravitation and cohesion, the existence of the world would have been impossible. These could be symbolised and embodied in figures. Man lives and works under the natural forces, and he does not thank them; he thanks only the Supreme Power who keeps them going. There are archangels and angels for the administration of the world; but no Muslim worships any one of them. They have their own functions and duties, as we have our functions and duties. Besides the angels, there are functionaries on the material plane, through whom and by whom the affairs of the world are regulated. (For an account of these see page 161-162 ante.)

Their administration is said to be carried on, on the same lines as the administration of worldly Kings and Governors. With all that, there is no worship for them from any body. The Muslim has not got his household deity. A hadith runs as follows:

When the latchet of your shoe is lost, ask it of God.

Mediation in this world cannot, altogether, be done away with; but the thought should always be directed to the moving spring of all actions, as the poet Sa'dī says:

Dar ain noul az shirk poshida ast
Ki Zaydam bi azurd wa Amrum bi kast
There is a sort of shirk hidden in this:
That Zayd has injured me, and 'Amr has ruined me.

This is shirk fil-af'āl. Shirk also consists in giving the attributes of God to other-than-God. Mā-siwālla), which is shirk fis Ṣifāt.

An attack is, however, levelled at the Muslims that there is a stone in the temple of Mecca. It must be remembered that this is not a graven stone. It is there as a historical monument, and to commemorate a historical event. It is said to have been placed there by the Patriarch Abraham; and revolutions that are made around it commemorate the form of prayer that was practised by Abraham and his followers. Since Muhammad was a descendant of the great unitarian Patriarch, he wished to keep green the holy practices of his forefather. Besides he wanted to congregate his followers in one and the same place at least once a year, for social and religious intercourse. The stone of Ka'ba is after all a stone, regarding which 'Umar said:

"I know that it is a mere stone, but I kiss it, as it was kissed by the Prophet" (peace be upon him).

(For an esoteric explanation see pages 132-133 ante.)

There is no doubt that the human mind takes all means to be ends themselves; and hence the religion and philosophy of Islam have eschewed the worship of means altogether.

APPENDIX I

SUFI ORDERS IN THE DECCANI

The Fagir is not such a simple individual as he appears to be at first sight. At first blush, it would appear that one has to take a bowl of clay or wooden tray to play the role of a fagir; but the history of the individual would reveal that he is the product of a well-organized machinery, a member of a society, a Monastic society with regular rules and regulations. the breach of which involves his being "drummed out"-a way of ostracism that appears to be popular amongst them as in the army. According to some iurists, every Maussalman, man or woman is bound to follow the lead of a spiritual director—a Pir answering to a guru amongst the Hindus. There is no direct authority in the Qur'an enjoining the following of a Pir. In fact, the democratic spirit of Islam would appear to be against all confessional and guruworship; but texts are quoted as supporting the ceremonials connected with the bay't such as "Obey God and obey His Prophet, and such as those placed in authority over you." 2 (Atr'ullaha wa ati'ur-Rasūla wa ülıl-anıri minkum.)

- "O believers, fear God and seek a means to approach Him (Yā ayyuhal-ladhīna amanu-atqullaha wabtaghu ilayhil-wasīlata.)"
 - "Whoever did bay't to you (O Prophet) has
 - 1. Reprinted from the Author's book The Philosophy of Islam.
 - 2 Sūra Nisā, iv : 59.
 - 3. Sūra Mái'da ,v : 35.

verily done bay't to God, for verily God's hand is on their hand." (Innal ladhīna yubāyi'unaka innamā yubāyi'unallaha, Yadullahi fawqa aydihim.) 1

"O believers who have brought faith in God, bring faith in God (once again) and in His Prophet and the Book He sent down to His Prophet." Yā ayyukal ladhīna āmanu, aminu billahi wa rasūlihi, wal hitābil-ladhi nuzzila 'ala rasūlhi.)²

The ceremony of bay't (i.e.) placing the palm of one's hand on that of another person appears merely to have been the sign of sealing an agreement. The Prophet took under a tree the allegiance of some of the people of Madina, who had invited him to their city; and performed this ceremony.

He had the ceremony of bay't performed for the following purposes: 3 When people adopted Islam, they had to perform bay't to the commander of an army. When jihād or the holy war of Islam was undertaken, the people performed bay't, to the effect that they would risk their lives. When a Caliph was elected, they performed bay't or took the oath of allegiance. Lastly, when a man repented of his sins, and had made up his mind to lead a life of righteousness and piety, according to the Sharl'at of the Prophet, he had to perform bay't or take an oath before a holy man who is walking according to the Sharl'at, that he would not go back on his promise. No bay't was ever performed with the object of learning occult knowledge or seeking intercession.

However, the bay't in vogue in Islam is based on the bay't mentioned last.

¹ Sura Fath, xlviii: 10

² Súra Nisă iv:13.

^{3.} Taṣānif-i-dhmadiyyah pp. 84, 85, 86.

The spirit of Islam seems to be for man to have direct communion with God, so much so that all the intermediaries whose existence is acknowledged are lost sight of, in the communion of man with God. There is no angel-worship in Islam, otherwise Islam, like Hinduism, would have its 33 crores of gods (or devas or the intermediary beings who manage the affairs of the world). Such being the case it would seem incredible that Islam should enjoin saint-worship. The Ghayri muqallidin do not believe in the bay't, if it means more than the making of a promise to a saintly person, to keep away from the ways of sin. However, most Muslims perform this ceremony and attach themselves to some one Pir or other.

The ways in which a man performs the bay't are different. The murid performs two rak'at namāz.¹ If he is illiterate, the Pīr leads in the namāz, and the candidate simply follows him. Then he sits before his Pīr four-square, and they join hands. If a woman is to become a murid, she takes hold of one end of a turban-cloth, while the Pīr takes the other end; or a basin of water is put in front of them and they dip their hands at the same time and say the same prayers. The Pīr says: "I take you as brother or sister in religion and ask you to accept the allegiance of all the Pīrs up to the Prophet." Then he reads the Fātiḥa and concludes the ceremony. Then again there is a stage at which a man renounces the world and joins some order of Dervishes or faqīrs.

Asceticism is foreign to the teaching of Islam

^{1.} Murid is one who has attraction towards God; and Murad is one whom God attracts towards Himself.

which openly proclaims that "there is no asceticism in Islam." Still several orders of faqirs have arisen. There are people who have honestly given up the world; and there are people who have made a show of doing it, with the object of gaining more of it:

Ay basa Iblis ādam ruya ast, Pus bihar dusti na bayad dad dust.

(Mathnawi)

O, there are many an Iblis in the form of man Do not strike the palm (of hand) on that of everybody.

When a person wishes to become a faqīr, he must become a murid (seeker after God) first, and then present himself before the chief of some Order, called sirguru. He has first to prove that he is circumcised. The Pir takes a pair of scissors and cuts off three hairs from his forehead. This is cutting of the three vices of ignorance, pride and selfishness. The latter then gets himself completely shaved and has a bath. The Pir then gives him a strap of leather-21 hands long, also a lungulee (3½ hands by 1½ hands), and a lungi (lower garment) and a long cloth like a shroud and a cap for the head. If all these latter are not within his means, he merely gives him a lungutee. The ceremony is then performed before the assembled fagirs The murid is then clad in these garments, while the necessary texts are chanted aloud. A cup of sharbat already partaken of by the Pir is then given to the murid to drink. A dinner is to be given to the assembly by the candidate or the Pir; if this is not possible, they are satisfied with a mere cup of sharbat each. After this, the candidate becomes a regular faqīr. The Pīr then teaches him the names of the four Pīrs and fourteen Khānwadas, and how the different ceremonies connected with the initiation arose and on what authority they are based. The shaving of the eye-brows originated with Jamāluddīn Sawochi and is based on the text "Am I not your Creator, they all said 'Thou art our Creator.'" (Alastu birabbikum, Qalu balu).¹ The binding of the strap originated with either Belool or Merān Khīl or Hadrat 'Alī. The lungutee arose with 'Abdulla, the standard-bearer, and is based on the text, Al-ladhina āmann wa 'amilus salihati sanadkhiluhum jannatin tajri min tahtihal anharu).² "They shall enter into it (the Heaven) for ever, etc.

The 'lūng' arose with Khwāja Uwais-i-Qarnī and is based on the text, "You will never reach virtue, unless you spend all of what you love." (Lan tanā/ul-birra ḥatta tunfiqu mimma tuhībbun). The ceremony of bathing arose with Khwāja Ḥasan Baṣtī, and is based on the text, "Thou art to die and they are to die And verily on the day of judgment, you will not quarrel before your Lord." (Innaka mayyatun wa innahum lamayyitun, wa innahum yawmal-qiyamati inda rabbikum la takhlasimun). The ceremony of wearing the cap and giving sharbat arose with the Prophet, and they are based on the text, "God is the light of the heavens and the earth," (Allahu nūrus samawāti wal arḍi) and "Then gave them their Creator the purest wine" (Saqahum rabbuhum sharaban tahura)

^{1.} Sūra A'rāf, 9:17.

^{2.} Sūra-Niā, iv: 47.

^{3.} Sūra Āli-'Imrān, iii : 85.

^{4.} Süra Zamar, xxiv.

^{5.} Sura Nür 35.

and so on. Every ceremony is traced to some saint and is supposed to be based on some text of the Qur'an.

The chief seat in this Presidency where the several bands of fagirs are organised is Penukondah, a Oasba town in the Anantapur District. Each year on the 1st day of Jamadi-ul-Akhar, the fagirs of all orders Banava, Rafa'i, Madari, Malang, and Shah Talal congregrate at this place and select their officebearers to go on a two-year pilgrimage to the tombs of the saints in the Presidency. The Banava order was founded by Ghulam 'Ali Shah of Delhi, and is traced to the Saint 'Abdul Oadir Jilani. The Rafa'i order was founded by Saivid Ahmad Kabir Rafa'i (ob. 756 A.H.) and is traced to Khwaja Junayd of Baghdad. The Madari Order was founded by Shah Budruddin Outub-ul-Madar. He seems to have come from Syria and to have travelled over a large part of North India and made thousands of converts to Islam, (ob. 840 A.H.) His shrine is in Makanpur in Oudh. His order is traced to Tyfur of Syria—said to have been a disciple of Jesus Christ. The Jalali Order was founded by Saiyid Jalal Bokhari (ob. 699 A H.) They wear a sash and bear a horn of deer, and the seal of Nabuwat on their shoulders. The selection of the chief of each of these orders was so. long in the hands of the faqirs themselves. Now it appears that the Sajjada of Penukondah has this selection taken into his own hands. The latter is said to be descended from a brother of the local saint Bābā Fakhruddīn and has got nine villages attached to the tomb Out of the proceeds of two of these, he has to celebrate the annual festival. The Sirguru is the ruler of each Order, and has dominion over all faqIrs of his Order in whatever part of the Presidency. The Sirguru of Banavas must be a bachelor, and must have some knowledge of Taṣawwuf; but as often as not, he is a mere ignoramus. He has the power of drumming out or excommunicating a faqīr from his Order, for breach of discipline.

Next in rank to Sirguru is the Bhandari. He is the Prime Minister of the Order, collects and spends money in behalf of the band. He is the money-bag man and distributes the money-share of each faqir to him. Then comes the Upkari. He looks after the cooking and meals; the Kotwāl has to look after discipline and to accompany the Sirguru in his itinerations. The Nakqib has also to accompany and chant verses all along. Out of a collection of Rs. 100 (say), the Singuru takes Rs. 5 and two shares; the Bhandari has no commission, but is entitled to 11 shares, the Upkari, Kotwāl, and Nakgib each take 13 shares; and one share is allotted to each fagir in rank and file. These bands go on their two-year round in the Southern Presidency starting from Penukondah. The Sirguru holds four chouks or darbars, viz., at Penukondah, Matarwangal, Trichinoply, and Nagore.

At Penukondah there is the tomb of Bābā Fakhruddin. He is said to have been a king of Sīstān, a province of Persia, and a disciple of Nathar Auliyā (Mazharuddin), the saint of Trichinopoly. He is the saint of cotton-carders (Panjaris).

On the 11th Jamadi-ul-Akhar, the sandal ceremony is performed at Penukondah; on the 12th, the urs: and on the 13th the asas (staves) are taken round. From Penukondah, visiting small tombs en route and collecting their fixed mamools, the fagirs go to Matarwangal, 22 miles from Kolar. Here is the tomb of Hayder Safdar, another disciple of Nathar Auliva of Trichinopoly. Some of the Orders fall off from this place, the Banava fagirs, however, proceed further. A times some of the fagirs of the remaining Orders select their own chiefs for the remaining iourney. At Trichinopoly there are the tombs of Nathar Auliya and his two disciples Shumspurran and Shumsgoyan; Nathar Aulivā is also said to have been a king who became a saint. From Trichinopoly they go to Nagore, where there is the tomb of Qadir Wali. The last stage of the journey is the tomb of Buddū Shahid, near Pallavaram. The fagirs have their mamools in each place, e.g., at Dindigul (at the tomb of Saidaui Bi), the mamool is one dinner and Rs. 10. At the mosque of Tirumangalam, they get Rs. 5; at the Sivaganga mosque Rs. 30; at Tinnevelly, 5 day's meals and Rs. 150 and so on. A curious ceremony in connection with the four chouks mentioned above is that they make the Malang Sirguru sit fours-quare, and tie raw thread round his toes, so that he is not to go even for the calls of nature for five days at Penukondah and Matarwangal; and three days at Trichinopoly and Nagore: and then the fagirs tread on fire in his presence. The practice of the visit from Penukondah to Trichinopoly appears to have arisen out of the custom of Bābā Fakhruddin paying an annual vist to Nathar Auilyā his Pir, during his life-time.

The salam amongst these bands is not the ordinary Mussalman salam. Amongst Banavas, it is "Love of God." Answer "Love to all." Amongst Malang and Madaris, it is "Ḥuqq-Allah Muḥammad Madar'' Answer "Dum Peer Shah Madar." Amongst the Rafa'is "Love of God." Answer-"Love of Muhammad, the Prophet." When an order is on the move, the Naqib leads the band and calls out "Hush bar Dum." "Nazarbar-Qadam" (i.e., wakefulness on breath and eve on foot). 1 These two are the terms of the Nagshbandiyyah Order. "Wakefulness on the breath" is akin to the Hindu Pranamaya. Each breath that goes up is said to voice forth, "Laillaha" and the one that goes in "Illallah," "No god, except God," ie., in breathing out they negative all existences, and in breathing in, they acknowledge the only existence of God. "Eve on the foot," appears to be a fitting watchword in marching, and has for its objective the concentration of attention. Esoterically it is intended to put each man on his guard regarding the observance of the footsteps of the particular prophet, he may have chosen for his model.

APPENDIX II

GHAZZALI "ON THE SOUL" 1

"We equalised and breathed into it with our Breath."

The action that produces the highest degree of purification and moderation of temperament that is possible for the soul is called equalisation; the place of lodgment of the soul of Adam was moist clay, with which his skeleton was built: that of his descendants is the germ of life within the man. In the world, there are solid substances like mud and stone, or liquids like water. Fire does not kindle either of these or the compounds of these. Fire has no effect on mud, till it undergoes modification, and becomes by natural process a regular vegetable. Man eats and assimilates the vegetable; it becomes his blood and humours. By a process of extraction, the essence of that blood becomes the germ within man. Within the womb of the future mother, the constitution of this germ is still further tempered, so that it becomes suitable to be the habitat of the soul. This process is very like the ignition of the wick of a lamp, which when soaked sufficiently well in oil, becomes fit to hold a flame. In short, when the germ attains its highest perfection and equalisation of temperament, it becomes deserving of a soul that might take possession of it. Then what is lacking that the great Benefactor and Giver who gives to every one his due, should not give to the embryo the soul that it is fit to hold? By equalisation is thus meant the process that the germ undergoes, till it becomes fit to hold the soul.

^{1.} A free rendering from Hagigat-i-Run-i-Insani.

The Breathing.—This refers to the cause by which the wick (embryo) becomes lighted with the flame of the soul. When a blower blows on a burning piece of tinder, it bursts into flame. Breathing therefore is the cause of the flame. The cause that is thus fixed is an unsuitable expression in the case of God, and therefore the effect is here taken for the cause

The Qur'ān says: "God became wrath with them and thus took vengeance." Now anger is an emotion that affects the temperament of the angry person, so much so that he feels distressed at it. This is impossible in the case of God. Here therefore the effect of anger is meant; the person who is the subject on whom the anger is vented is annihilated. Thus the effect of anger is taken for the cause, Similary the cause from which the effect (breathing) is brought about is taken for the breathing itself. There is no actual blowing in of breath.

The Wick and the Flame.—This is the conjunction of two attributes. One attribute is that of real acting or creating, and the other the existence of a temperament fit to receive the soul. The name of the Actor is the Great Bestower; and He bestows things on those who really require them and are fit to receive them. He gives existence to that which has the fitness to receive existence. He has another attribute called the Power. He is like the sun which lights up things which have the fitness to show themselves off, when there is nothing between them and the sun. The attribute to receive is thus the transparency of the thing itself. A mirror is tarnished. There may be faces in front of it, but they are not reflected in it. The furbisher begins to furbish the mirror and removes the tarnish. As the tarnish disappears, the faces opposite to it gradually appear in it; in fact, the faces are created in the mirror. Similarly, as the germ develops into an embryo and the embryo attains its equalisation of temperament and perfection, the soul too appears in it from the Creator of the soul. There is no change in the Creator, just as there was no change in the face that was reflected in the mirror, immediately the mirror became bright. To say that the soul was created then only, and did not exist before, is a mistake. The non-reflexion of a face in a mirror does not point to its non-existence before the mirror became bright.

The Great Beneficence.—When water falls on the hand from a vassel, the particles of water separate themselves from the vessel and fall on the hand. This is not an apt illustration of God's beneficence. It is however comparable to the sun, which lights the walls of a house. People incorrectly assume that the rays separate themselves from the sun, and attach themselves to things or spread themselves on the walls. The light of the sun is the cause of the appearance of a thing which is a fit receptacle for the sun's rays, though it might be less reflected on a wall. It is like the reflexion of a face in the mirror. The face does not detach itself from the person, and attach itself to the mirror. The face of a man becomes the cause of existence of the face in the mirror, which is fit to reflect it. There is no detachment on one hand, and attachment on the other. In things that have aptitude to assume existence, the cause of their existence is the beneficence of God.

What is the Soul?—This is a question, the answer to which the Prophet was prohibited from giving in the case of unfit persons. To those that are fit to understand, there is no prohibition. The soul is not a substance that has been poured into the body, like water into a vessel. It is not an extension that exists in the heart and brain of man like blackness in a black thing or knowledge in the knower. It is, on the other hand, an essence that knows itself and its Creator, and enquires into causes and effects.

Knowledge is extension. If the soul were extension, then the existence of extension upon extension would become possible. This, however, is an impossibility in the view of philosophers. There is another proof that it is an essence and not an extension. An extension possesses one attribute, being one dimension of a thing; but the soul has two opposite attributes; while it knows itself, it knows its Maker also. It is not a body. A body is capable of being divided. If soul were capable of division or breaking up, there would be knowledge in one part of it, and ignorance in another. It would thus be cognizant and ignorant of the same thing at the same time. Knowledge and ignorance of one and the same thing at one and the same time is impossible.

Thus it is one; it has no parts, and it is a thing that cannot be divided. The word part is unsuitable, for part implies a whole, and no whole exists here. It may be a part in the sense that one is a part of ten; for when all parts are taken which exist in ten, then one will be one of the parts. Take the whole creation, or those things that constitute the existence of men; their soul will be one of them.

How it exists.—It is neither within or without the body; it is neither separate from it nor connected with it. It has been proved that soul is neither corporeal nor spatial. When it is neither of these, then the question of its connexion or separateness is as much unconnected with it as the question of ignorance or knowledge with a mineral. A mineral is neither cognizant nor ignorant; for knowledge and ignorance, life is a condition; and when life itself is denied to a mineral, then whatever is dependent on life should also be denied.

The Soul's Direction.—It is free from all the qualities of being contained in a space, connected with a body or particularised in a direction. These are the attributes or dimensions of a body; and when it is proved that soul is neither a body nor an extension of a body, then it is free from all those attributes.

The Forbidden Explanation.—Common people cannot have the understanding of this. There are two sets of people—the common and the elect. The former cannot understand the attributes of God; how then can they understand the attributes of the soul? The Karāmatians and the Ḥanbalīs who are overshadowed by materiality have become Corporealists, have denied the attributes of God Himself, and cannot understand how God can have no body. Those—advanced a stage further—have no doubt denied corporeality; but could not deny the attributes dependent on corporeality. They have fixed a direction. Then come the last—the 'Asharīs and Mutazilites, who have advanced the furthest, and believe Him to be existence free from direction and dependence.

Why Mysteries are not for the Common People.— An impression has gained ground amongst them, that the attributes ascribed to the soul are impossible except in the case of God. One runs the risk of being labelled heterodox, if he ascribes these attributes to the soul. They would think that the attributes peculiar to God are assumed not only for the soul, but for the personal self.

How the attributes are common to God, and others than God.—They think it impossible that two things in space can occupy one and the same place at one and the same time. Similarly they think it impossible that two things can do so in non-space. In the first case (of two things in space), they think that their distinction would disappear, and they would coalesce into one. In the second case, they think that if one of the two things in non-space requires no space, their distinction would disappear. Two dimensions cannot occupy the same space. The objection is seemingly valid. It is a palpable mistake to suppose that distinction between two objects is made known on account of space. The distinction may be from three sources: from space—two things in two places are distinguishable; from time—two extensions in one essence in two different times are distinguishable; and the third from definition. Different extensions of one and the same object are distinguishable at one and the same time by mere description or definition. as, for example, saltness and moisture in a particular object. Time and space are one; but by mere description they are distinguishable. Knowledge and intention (Divine)—these are distinguishable by themselves by mere description or definition; otherwise the whole is one only. When extension of objects is imagined and distinguished, different objects, though they may not be in space, can be imagined and distinguished. It would appear that to give such attributes to soul is to bestow the attributes of God on it, and to make the two similar. This is not so; no similarity is established between man and God, when we speak of man as living, knowing, powerful, hearing, speaking, although those attributes belong to God also. Similarly to be non-spitial is not a peculiar attribute of God. The special attribute of God in which no one partakes is His Everlastingness. He is, by His essence, everlasting—by His essence, living, and so on. The essence of all things is nothingness: their existence is borrowed from God God's existence is His essence and is not borrowed; everlastingness is the special attribute of God.

Breathed with our Breath.—The question arises: "Why with our breath? and why is the breathing specified?" All things owe their existence to God; why this particularity in regard to soul?

In one place God has said: "I created man out of putrid mud, and told the angels 'I am going to create man out of mud,; and then again He said: "When I properly tempered it, I breathed my spirit into it." What then is the meaning of this breathing? If it means that breath left God and joined man, then division in the nature of God becomes possible; but this cannot be. The answer to this question may be illustrated from the sun. If the sun says, "I have given light to the earth," this will be correct. The earth, although there might have been little light, in it, was not like the atmosphere. Thus Soul was free from space and dimensions; to become cognizant of everything was potential in it, although it has no comparison with God; but in other bodies there was nothing of the sort, and hence the particularity.

Spirit, the Command of God.—The "world of command" is simply the world in which there is no measurement, estimate or delineation; and the world of creation is the world in which these qualities exist. It does not necessarily mean invention. The "world of command" is therefore the world which is above sense, thought, direction and space. There is no quantity in it, it does not come within the purview of measurement; but the world of creation is just the opposite of this. The souls of men and angels belong to the world of command.

Whether Soul is Created.—Although a set of people believe that the soul is uncreated, I do not believe it. We say "the soul is not created" in the sense that it is not subject to measurement or division. But all the same, it is created in the sense that it is not original and not everlasting. When the embryo becomes fit and suitable enough, the Spirit manifests itself in it; just as in the mirror, a face manifests itself immediately the mirror acquires sufficient brilliancy.

A face may be existent previously, but it does not appear in the mirror till the latter becomes fit for it. Immediately the mirror is burnished, it reflects the face.

After Separation.—In virtue of connexion with bodies, souls acquire certain qualities, such as knowledge, ignorance, purity, impurity, good morals and the reverse. On account of the acquisition of these, their separateness will remain, which was not the case before their connexion.

The Image of God.—The word surat (image or face.) has different meanings in Arabic. It means shape or combination of shapes, as of bodies which we sense. Sometimes it means proposition; one might speak of the sūrat or shape of a problem in Euclid. It may mean the image of a combination of circumstances. Here shape or sūrat is the metaphorical shape of the thing. It means the connexion between essence and attributes and actions. We have explained that soul is an essence; it is neither a body nor an extension. It is not an essence contained in space or direction: it is neither connected with nor detached from body; is neither within nor without the body. These things are in God also. Consider the attributes of God. The soul is living, knowing, powerful, willing, hearing, seeing, speaking. These are God's attributes also.

The Source of Man's Actions.—It is will or intention. It manifests itself in mind, and then with the aid of the animal soul (which is a term for ethereal vapour), it circulates through the system and rises to the brain. From there it acts on the nerves which emanate from it, and reaches the arteries, veins and muscles. When the nerve absorbs it, the finger moves, and through the finger, the pen; then there is motion in ink, and then a form appears which originally was in will or intention. This form is according to the form in the treasure-house of our thought. Whoever has dived into the actions of God, and pondered over them and considered the skies and stars and their influences, cannot but be struck with the thought that angels play the same part in the macrocosm as do our faculties in our microcosm; and that man's control over his body is very like God's control over the world.

Man has the same control over his qalb (mind), as God has over his 'arsh; the brain corresponding to kursi and the senses to the angels, who by nature are obedient to the Owner and do not disobey Him, just as our senses do not disobey us. The organs and the muscles correspond to the skies; the power in the fingers corresponds to the nature with which the Creator has endowed every living creature. The paper, pen and ink (in our simile) are the element through which combinations and dispersions manifest themselves. The mirror of our thought corresponds to the Lauh-i-mahfūz (the preserved Tablet).

He who has understood this will grasp the meaning of the tradition: "God created man in His own image". "He who understands his nafs (soul) understands his God." If the relations and correspondences, described above, are not understood, man cannot, from a knowledge of his nafs, understand his God. If God had not concentrated in man all the things that are in the world, and had not made him a small model (microcosm) and had not made him the rabb (the ruler) of this microcosm, he would not have understood the great world and its Rabb (ruler) who controls it with knowledge, power and wisdom; and would not have become cognizant of any of the attributes of God. By such a relation, nafs becomes one of the rungs of the ladder to the knowledge of the Maker of the nafs.

The reaction of the Prophet.—The Prophet has said: "God created souls two thousand years before the bodies." "I was before all the Prophets, but in mission the last of them all." "I was a Prophet when Adam was in clay and water." The first Hadith clearly shows that the soul is non-eternal and is a created object. At first blush, it would appear as if the souls were created before the bodies, and they existed before them. It is however possible that the souls of angels are meant, and that the bodies referred to are 'arsh, kursi, the heavens, stars, mud and water. Remember that the bodies of men en masse are insignificantly small in comparison with the body of the sun. The body of the sun small beyond comparison with that of its heaven and with the heaven about it: and so on until finally we reach the kursi in which all are contained. This latter is so small in comparison with the 'arsh of God, that there can be no comparison between the two. When all these are considered, the bodies of men en masse are so insignificantly small that they cannot be thought of. Remember also that the souls of men en masse are also as small, in comparison with the body of the 'alam (from man to 'arsh). Their appearance would manifest to one endowed with the light of illumination as the flame of a wick in comparison with the fire that has enshrouded the whole 'alam. That fire is the souls of angels. There is a gradation amongst the angels. They are separate, and no two of them are in one rank, as in opposition to the souls of men; which in spite of their multiplicity are all one in kind and rank. Each angel is sui generis. God has made the angels say (in the Qur'an): "There is no one of us but hath his known place." "We are those having purity." The Prophet has said that none of those who are in ruku' perform the sajdah: and none of those who are in qiyam perform their rukū'. Verily there is none amongst them, who hath not his appointed place. Thus the souls and the bodies mentioned in the hadith are the angels and the bodies in the creation As for the second hadith. "I am the first, in creation, of the Prophets: but the last of them all," here by creation is meant the same estimate, plan or forecast which I have mentioned above. It does not mean "the bringing into existence"; for the Prophet never existed till he was born. The excellences and perfections that manifested themselves in him were first in the forecast of God. though last in point of manifestation, amongst the Prophets. This is the same as the Arabic saying: "First thought, then action." An engineer thinks of constructing a building. In the plan in his mind. there exists a fully constructed and finished building; but it is only then that actual construction begins. So far as he is concerned, the fully-constructed house already exists in his thought; although material construction is his last act, there have been many stages from start to finish—the digging of foundations, the collection of materials, the raising of the walls, the putting up of the roof. These are mere intermediaries to bring his thought into full material existence.

What is the Object of Man's Existence?—To know the excellence of proximity to God. This becomes known to us from the teaching of the Prophets. The foundation-stone is first to be laid; when this is done. the construction progresses upon it from stage to stage, till the building is complete. In Adam, the foundation was laid, and the finishing touch was given in the Prophet (peace be upon him). This is the meaning of the saying, "he is the seal of the Prophets"; for an addition to perfection is a defect. The perfection of our hand consists in one palm and five fingers. Just as a four-fingered man is defective. so is a six-fingered man. Perfection consists in five fingers and five alone; the sixth is an additional appendage and a defect. The Prophet has compared Prophetship to a building, which is all but complete for want of one brick. He was the last brick to give perfection to the building. Thus we see there cannot be an addition to a complete building, and that (if there were) such an addition would be a defect. These things were in the forecast of God first, although they came last in the order of existence. As for the third hadith: "I was a Prophet while Adam was in mud and water." the explanation of this in the same strain

The creation of the children of Adam could not be complete, until a perfect man was born amongst them—one who perfected the object of creation. In him, we believe creation reached its perfection, when it accepted the blessed soul of the Prophet. God first makes an estimate, and then brings it into objective existence; just as an engineer draws up a plan on paper or on slate. The engineer draws up the plan with his pen; but it is the knowledge of the engineer that sets the pen in motion. Similarly God draws up his plans with the pen of His Power on the tablet of His knowledge. Remember that a tablet is simply an object, which has the aptitude of being engraved upon: and a pen is the object which draws up figures on this tablet. This pen and tablet are not a reed and an oblong board. Materiality is not a condition of their existence. The pen and tablet of God must be suitable to His hand; they are free from material existence. The truth is they are spiritual essences.

APPENDIX III

TECHNICAL TERMS IN TASAWWUF

'Ārif; One who observes the Dhāt and attributes and actions separately, and in conjunction with each other in his state (ħāl); and not merely talks of these. One who has lost consciousness of these himself in the 'irfān or knowledge of God.

'Abd: That which is manifest. The first 'abd is "I"—the stage of Muhummad (peace be upon him). With one Rabb (God), there is one 'Abd (the Prophet); and from this first 'abd other 'abds are manifested; the first 'abd is, therefore, a barzakh between God and the creation. Tauhid therefore is a reality, in which there is no rabb and no 'abd (Tauḥīdu ḥaqīqatun lā rabba wu la 'abda).

Abdāl: These are the seven auliyā who guard the seven continents. They are called abdāl (those who change), because they can change into any form they please. They can be present in one place, and show themselves in their causal bodies in different places.

'Adam: Nothingness. This is of two kinds: Real and Relational. Real 'adam does not exist; for if it did, it would be the opposite of God and would no longer be 'adam. Thus its existence is impossible. Excepting the letters A. D. A. M. nothing exists in externality. It has no Dnāt behind it; it is only an 'adam in words ('adam-i-malfūzī). It is a name without the named; merely for the purpose of argument, a name is given to it.

Relational 'adam ('adam-i-iḍāfī); this is the reality of a'yān—which are clothed in the existence of God (according to the Shuhūdīyyah School); or according to which God manifests Himself (according to the Wajūdīyyah), i.e., the relation that exists between God and forms of 'abd in His knowledge is God's own existence. The a'yān are forms which are not differentiated from Him in the very first stage of Tanazzulāt.

Aḥwāl: (sing. Ḥāl), conditions to which the 'abd is transferred by purifying his nafs; conditions that overshadow one's being spontaneously like fear, happiness, zest, love, etc.

Allah: Al-Ila (Ar. and Sanskrit. El. Hebrew, Eel "the worshipped") One who is worthy of worship; one before whom we humiliate ourselves. Name applied to God, implying all the attributes of perfection (the attributes of imperfection and defect being applicable to the Dhāt of 'abd, nothingness ('adam). Shāh Kamāl of Cuddapah has said:

Mayn hun asam, shunwa hay haq, mayn bey basar bina hay haq

Mayn gung hun, goya hay haq, mayn nay hun, haq mawjud hay.

I am deaf, the Truth is Hearing
I am blind, the Truth is seeing
I am dumb, the Truth is speaking
I am nothing, the Truth is existing.

The word is used in the first stage of Infinity where all indications are dropped (Al-Tauḥīdu is-qātul-ishārāt); in the second stage the attributes of perfection are predicated, and in the third, where such attributes become detailed, they indicate the named (musammā).

'Anānīyai: The ego of God. Gulshan-i-Rāz says:

Ḥaqīqat kaz taiyyun shud muiyyan Tu wu ra dar ibarat guftai man.

Truth by limitation, became limited You call it "I" in your common parlance.

In the lower creation, it is limited; in man it is unlimited. When a man is conscious of his unlimitedness and infinity, he becomes Insān-i-Kāmil (the Perfect Man). If he does not, he is zālim and jāhil. The 'anānīyat of 'abd is the 'anānīyat of God in limitation. An Apostalic Hadīth says: Inna fi jasadi adama la-muzghalun wa fi muzghalin fawadun, wa fil fuwad ruhun wa fir-ruhin sirrun wa fi sirri kafi, wa fil kafi akfa wa fil akfa ana The 'anānīyat is thus hidden under seven sheaths, akfā (most secret) kafī, (secret), sirr, rūḥ (soul), suwad, muzga (lump) jasad (body). Shaykh Aḥmad Sarhindī has located his six subtlies (Laṭāyef) thus; akfā in the head-plate, kafī in the forehead, rūḥ in the right side, qalb in the lest, sirr above the navel, and nass in the navel.

Asinā': (sing. 1sm), An Ism is the Dhāt looked at from a particular view-point; which view-point becomes a shan and then a sifat. This aspect or sifat of the Dhāt comes into operation (fa'il) and appears in form, and the form is that by which it is sensed.—
The form of ism-i-kiyānī, ergo of ism-i-ilāhī, i.e., an aspect of the Dhāt is just what is sensed; or as Ibn 'Arabī has put it, Al-Ḥaqqu maḥsūsun wal khalaqu ma'qūlun (the Truth is sensed and the creation inferred). Imām Ghazzālī in his "Asmā'-i-Ḥusna" (the Beautiful Names) gives the illustration of water and its thirst-quenching quality (attribute). This shān is inherent in water, becomes potential in your imagination, before it becomes kinetic in its proper place (the animal system). It manifests itself in operation, but it is the eternal aspect of water. God is creator and rabb, whether or not there is the creation or marbūb. The Names are applicable, when their counter-aspects are in manifestation, and are sensed in their aspects of forms.

The Ism-i-ā'zam (the Great name) of God is Allah. Some consider it to be Rahman; and some consider it to be either Rahim or Havy (the Living one) or Qayyum (the eternal one). It is the Shemhamphorash of Talmud. The asma' are either of Dhat like Quddus (Holy), Salam (everlasting or of sifat, which are of limited aspect, like 'Alim (allknowning), Murid (the willer). To remember God (in dhikr) by the Dhat name is to show honour to all His other names; whereas to remember him by the sifat name is to limit Him to that name. When you remember Him by a particular name that name must manifest itself, e.g., if a sick man calls out "Yā Shāfi" (O Healer) he must get well at once; but in most cases this does not happen, because, says Ghazzālī (in his Asmā'-i-Husna), he does not know the exact name and the exact way and circumstance in which he has to call out that name, e.g. a healthy man calling out "yā shāfi," must become sick before that name manifests itself. Hence it is safer to call Him by His personal names than by His sifatinames.

Auliyā: (sing. Walī). Those who have obtained proximity to God. They are those who have ascended from the lowest to the highest rung of the ladder. Some like Ibn 'Arabi, consider that the state of wall is higher than that of prophet in the Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him); because Wilayat is proximity to God and Prophetship is proximity to the Creation. A wali is an Abul-Waqt (father or controller of the time) as opposed to an Ibn-ul-Waqt (son of the time—one who swims with the current of time). An Abul-Waqt is one who has annihilated his will in the Will of God; and in him the Will of God alone manifests itself: and he does what God wills—he works wonders and miracles. An Ibn-ul-Waqt is one who observes the manifestations of asma', and adjusts himself to the requirement of those asmā'.

A'yān: Thought-forms of the Dhāt. Forms of jug, saucer, etc., are the bodies in which clay appears; and these exist only in imagination; their peculiarities come into display by means of clay. A'yān are similarly the outlines in which the existence appears. Hence it is said that a'yān never smelt the smell of existence (ma shummut rahiyatul wa-jūd). They are realities, so far as God's knowledge is concerned; they are unrealities, so far as their externality is concerned. They are called Thābitah as they are permanent unrealities externally Philosophers, call them non-existent shay (thing desired) and māhiyyat. Since they are permanent in God's knowledge as ada n-i-malfūzī, they are called A'yān-i-Thābita. They are thus eternal in God's knowledge; in externality their manifestation is fleeting. They cannot be said to be non-eternal in their inward aspect; for then God's knowledge will have to be considered non-eternal, which is impossible. A'yān begin after the stage of Wāḥidīyat, where their manifestation begins, and when they are called A'yān-i-Khārija which are subject to annihilation.

'Aynīyat: Sameness. When two things are identical it is 'Aynīyat, like ice and water, wave and sea. This 'aynīyat holds good in the case of the Dhāt and sifāt of God and servant. This is a real identification, as in the identity of words and ink: the number one and ten, etc. The 'aynīyat is real (haqīqī) as is proved by such verses as "I am in your nafs, you do not see me" (wa fi anfusikum afala tubsirūn).\frac{1}{2}"We are near you, but you do not see" (wa nahnu aqrabu ilayhi minkum wa lakın la tubsirūn).\frac{2}{2} As opposed to 'Aynīyat, there is Ghayrīyat, which is suppositional or in fancy. This is owing to i'tibārāt in existence. God is independent in the worlds. (Inn Allaha lā ghanīyyun anil 'ālamīn.)

Burûz: The influence of one soul on another, both being where they are. The soul is neither within the body nor without it. Its sight is on the physical body. When it sees 'Izrā'īl, the Angel of Death, it is so enamoured of him that it shifts its sight to the mithāl body; and the physical body dies. When it shifts its sight to the body of rūḥ, the mithal body also disintegrates. In Burūz, the soul of one individual influences the soul of another (and consequently the physical body of the latter), both being where they are, (there being no change in the influencing soul).

^{1.} Sūra li : 22.

^{2.} Sūra lvi : 27,

The soul of Sanā'i influenced the soul of Rūmi in this way; or the soul of Abū Sa'īd Abul Khayr influenced the soul of Ibn 'Arabī. This is different from Tanāsukh (metempsychosis), in which one soul peregrintates from body to body; which doctrine is "abominable to the Muslim." This is the same as Tamassul, (spiritual resemblance) in which angels or saints take shape in different places, being where they are in their original places, e.g., the angel Gabriel appeared before the Prophet (peace by upon him) in the form of Dihyā Kalbī, or a ṣaḥābī, or in that of an Arab of the Desert being in his own sphere. God appeared to Moses in a burning bush or to the Prophet (peace be upon him) in the shape of a "beardless youth" amrudin khatat).

Barzakh: A barrier of separation between two things or states, whether allied to each other, or not; as anthropoid ape is barzakh between man and beast; coral is barzakh between the vegetable and mineral kingdoms, the date tree is barzakh between the vegetable and animal kingdom; mithal is barzakh between the causal and soul worlds.

Shah Waliyullah Sahib has used the term Barzakh for the state after the earthly life, confining the term mithal to pre-natal condition, although the two terms are promiscuously used ordinarily. In barzakh, one assumes a garb befitting the character that had predominated him in the earthly life, e.g. If one had the character of using a sharp and stinging tongue (or a similar quality) in this life, he assumes the form of a scorpion, while he still retains his earthly self-consciousness (vide p. 108 ante). This prevents him from disclosing himself to his former earthly relatives and acquaintances already living in the barzakh world, who have retained or regained their earthly form, or who have acquired a luminous form or body there. If one assumes a particular unhuman form, he draws to himself similar forms already existing there, for according to the Mathnawi:

Nāriyan mur nāriyan ra jazīband Nūriyan mur nuriyan ra talīband. Ahl-i-bāṭil bāṭilan ra mi kashund Bāqiyan ba bāqiyan hum sur khusand.

The people of fire absorb the people of fire,
The people of light draw the people of light.
Pepole who are in darkness draw similar people towards them

Those who are saved are happy in the company of the saved.

If one is transformed into a scorpion in the barzakh, the other scorpions of that region or even his own verdical thought forms so transformed, draw or are drawn towards him and ply their stings on him that being their character, and he bing a new arrival in that region.

Similarly, if he has assumed the form of a dog (retaining his former identity), the other dogs of that region bark at him and bite him. This is the treatment accorded to a new arrival in the barzakh: and this is why a burial in the vicinity of the tomb of an auliva or in the compound of a mosque is much preferred by Muslims to burial elsewhere; the influence of the auliya or the holy magnetic atmosphere of the place serves to keep these old K.D's. of this region at a distance from the new arrival. The auliya's holy influence transforms the mithal body of the new arrival into a luminous body. The Qur'an says: Khalaqal insāna fi aḥsani tqawīm summa raddad nahu asfaha sāfilīn. "We created man in the best of forms, and sent him down to the worst plane." In the mithal world (prenatal), he had a heavenly form; having appeared in this world, he by his behaviour made himself eligible for another form (suitable or unsuitable as the case may be to his dignity as man). Ad-dunyā mazratul akhira. This world is the harvest-ground of the next. H he assumes an unsuitable form in the barzakh, a form unbefitting his humanity, he remains in it till the day of judgment. It is only the luminous bodies that hear calls and prayers; and the dark bodies engrossed in their own character do not.

^{1.} Shari-Barzahh of Abû Sa'îd Salami (translated by Maulavî 'Abdul Ghaffar Sahib of Bangalore), Chap. 58.

Bay't: Paying homage by laying the palm of one's hand on that of another—a Pir by preference. In the beginning, the Prophet used to receive homage from the people accepting Islam The homage that was received from some people of Tā'if near Madīna is called Bay't-ul-Ridwān. Secondly, it was a promise taken from those who volunteered for Jihād; and thirdly it was taken from searchers after truth. It was, however, a question whether it is sunnat or mustahab or wājib or fard. Those who consider it fard bring in the hadith, "Search after knowledge is fard on all Muslims, male or female." Talabul 'ilmi farīdatun 'ala kulli Muslimīn wa Muslimātun.

Baqā: A condition in which the 'abd is not hindered from seeing God on account of materiality, which is only 'adam.

Bāṭin: The interior of every from or world, e.g., the bāṭin of 'ālam-i-nāsūt (the material world) is 'ālam-i-mithāļ (the world of similitudes), the bāṭin of 'ālam-i-mithāl is 'ālam-i-arwāḥ (the soul-world), the bāṭin of 'ālam-i-arwāḥ is 'ālam-i-a'yān (which is Wāḥidīyat); and Dhāt or Aḥdīyat is the bāṭin of 'Ālam-i-a'yān

Haq bi jan andar nihan, o jan bi tan andar nihan, Ay nihan, andar nihan, andar nihan, andar nihan. Ain chuni ramzi ayan khud bi nishān o' bi guman Ay jahan, andar jihan, andar jihan

The truth is hidden in life and life is hiddenin body,

O hidden, within hidden, within hidden, within hidden.

This is a mystery—obvious without doubt and sign,

O world, within world, within world, within world.

Sometimes bāṭin is applied to all the worlds from mithāl upwards and zāhir only to the causal world.

Durratul-Bayda, or Yākūt-ul-Abyad.: The first Intelligence; a Hadīth says: Awwala ma khalaquilahu Durratul-Bayda; the next name is Nass-i-Kul, which is called Durratul-Ahmar (the Red Chrysolite).

Dhāt: The Wujūdīyyah school considers the Dhāt (Reality) itself is wujūd (existence); so also do the Ash'arīs (which include the Sunnis), the followers of Abul Ḥasan al-Ash'arī. The Shuhūdīyyah school considers that it is separate from Wujūd, i.e., Dhāt in the first stage is without "be-ness" i.e., without any indication (ishāra) whatever. The Dhāt of Wujūdīyyah appears to be wujūd-i-idāfi (the additional existence), which comes within cognizance and which is a reflection of the Dhāt of Shuhūdīyyah; for in Tauhīd there is no indication (at Tauhīdu isqāt-ul-ishārūt).

Dhikr: Repetition of God's name or names. It may be vociferous, as in the case of a beginner (Dhikr-i-Jail); it may be silent, in which the Dhākir forgets the words, and thinks only of the named. In another kind, both the Dhākir and Dhikr disappear, and the relish of Dhikr alone remains (Dhīkr Rūḥī).

In Dhikr-i-Qalbī, the sālik disappears by himself and fancies God to be in his form. "I am not and God is." In Dhikr-i-Rūḥī the sālik sees his Dhāt, sifāt and af'āl, as the Dhāt, sifāt and af'āl of God.

Didar: (The Vision Beatific). When the 'abd reaches his 'ayn, he loses his egoism and then his vision becomes God's vision of himself. He becomes Hū Hū (He, without attributes) in the highest stage; in the lower stages, he has illuminations like lightning, etc. The 'abd cannot vision the absolute; the finite cannot realize the infinite except through the screen of sifāt; but in his journey on the upward are, the sālik travels towards the absolute and infinite; one who ascends the successive stages of the absolute by Mujāhada, has vision according to that stage. In the limited, the vision is of the limited; in arwāḥ, the vision of arwāḥ. While the absolute sees the limited, the limited cannot see the absolute, or to put it in the profane words of Prof. Huxley, you cannot feel how a cray-fish feels, until you become the cray-fish itself. To see the absolute, one must merge in the absolute itself.

But this is a matter to be felt and realized and not talked of:

Dhawq-i-aein bada na dani Bi-khuda ta na chashi.

This intoxication is not realized Till you have tasted of the wine.

This part of the esoteric doctrine of Taṣawwuf is inculcated by means of signs and symbols and not by words. The limited can see only the limited; the figures of our friends in 'ālam-i-mithāl are seen by us in real dreams. If they have progressed upwards to 'ālam-i-arwāḥ, they are not seen, unless we in ajsām have also progressed to a higher stage by Mujāhada or by the special grace of God. A Yogi in his physical body who has attained to a higher state of consciousness can see in his Samathi what another in his ordinary physical body cannot; what wonder then that the Prophet (peace be upon him) being in his physical body had his mi'rāj.

The Didar of Dhat in this life, however, lasts for an infinitesimal part of a minute in the case of ordinary salik, and a little longer in the case of auliya. It flashes on mind like lightning (vide p. 99-100 ante). A Persian poet says:

Hayf dar chushm zadan suhbat-i-yar akhar shud Ruyi gul sayr na didim wu bahar akhar shud.

Alas thy companionship departed in an eye's twinkling.

The beauty of the flower was hardly seen when the spring departed.

Dīdār is the special privilege of man, as the Khalifa of God on the earth (Innī ja'lnaka khalīfatun fil arḍi); for even angels of the Malā-i-a'lā', who support the 'Arsh (throne) of God are still in search of Dīdār. A hadīth of the Prophet (peace be upon him) quoted by Ibu 'Arabī' says: Innallaha ihtajaba anil absari wu annal mala il a'lā' yātlumu nahu kama tatlubunahu antum. God is Hidden from the Intelligences (angels) as He is hidden from our eyes. The angels are in search of Him, as you are in search of Him.

It is only the man who searches for locality in the Total, the All in the all, that has the vision; and this is to be in this world only, for, as the Qur'an says, he who is blind in this world is also blind in the next. Man kana fi hazi hil ama fa hua fil akhirati ama wa azullu sabila.²

This eye is, however, the mind's eye: La tudrikuhul absar wa hua yudrikul absar wa hua lateefun khabir. The sight does not see Him, He sees the sight.

^{1.} Futûhat-i-Makkiyah, Vol. I, Chap. III, Sec. 5.

^{2,} Sūra Banī Isrā'īl, xvii: 72.

He is the subtle and nice-discerning. The bodily eye becomes the mind's eye.

Emān: The Qur'an says: Yā ayynhal ladhīna amanu, aminu billahi wa Rasūlihi wa kitabil ladhī nuzzila 'ala Rasūlihi.'

"O believers who have brought faith, bring taith in God and in His Prophet and in the Book that He has sent down to His Prophet." The bringing in of the first faith is Islam; and that of the second is Emān. In the first, it is simply making a profession of the Creed (Emān-i-Taglīdī); and the second is making a profession after investigation (Emān-i-Tahaiai). In what is known as the Hadith-i-Gabriel, whi h is the opening Hadith of Mishkat-ul-Masabih. it is stated that a stranger made his appearance before the Prophet (peace be upon him) and asked him some four questions. What is Islam? What is Eman? What is Ihsan? and when is the Oivamat. "Ihsan", the Prophet said, "is worshipping God as if you see Him or if this cannot be done, it is worshipping Him as if He sees you." This is Eman-i-Haqiqi, in which the devotee worships Him as if he sees Him, i.e., his mind's eye is opened, and he sees the 'ālam-i-mithāl and 'ālam-i-arwāh, and even penetrates as far as the Haqiqat-i-Muhammadi. The certainty obtained is Real Faith (Eman-i-Haqiqi). Hence the injunctions of the Qur'an to bring faith once again. The Eman of the Muslim is concerned with his sight, and not with his hearing, such as it was in the case of the Israelites who had the injunction to hear, "Hear, O Israel, Jehovah our

^{1.} Sūra Nisā', iv: 13.

Elohim is one Jehovah" A Muslim advances up to the soul-stage, the characteristic of which is sight, while audition is perceptible and that feebly in the mithal stage only.

Imam Ghazzali has given three stages of the progress of certainty or knowledge. First 'Ilm-ul-Yaqin (knowing certainty). This is like your seeing smoke and inferring the existence fire. It is the lowest kind of Emān. The second is 'Ayn-ul-yaqın (ocular certainty) when you actually see the fire and believe in its existence. The sight is at times delusive, as in the case of a mirage; and hence the third is Hagg-ul-Yaqin, (certainty of certainty), when you approach the fire and experience its warmth. This precludes all doubt. The Our'an invites the believer not only to experience the faith of the second kind (to see 'alam-i-mithal and 'alam-i-arwah, etc.,) but also to travel through these regions by suluk and mujahada and thus bring in a faith founded on the bed-rock of personal experience. (Emān-i-Haqīqī).

Fanā (fis-Shaykh): To consider one's self as existing in the form of one's Pīr; and to annihilate one's self in him. Fanā fil-Rasūl, to do the same in the case of the Prophet. Fanā-fillāh, the same in God. 'Abd is 'adam and does not exist; for non exists but God. The existence of 'abd is only the manifestation of the sifāt of God. In fanā, the Sālik loses consciousness of himself; hence here is the 'adam of cognition, and not the cognition of 'adam.

Farq-ma'al-Jam; To differentiate 'abd from rabb is Farq; and to identity 'abd with rabb in existence is jam, To see 'abd in Rabb and Rabb is 'abd is Farq·ma'al-Jam.

Fayd-i-Aqdas: Manifestation of a'yān in Dhāt, before external manifestation; and Fayd-i-Muqaddas is manifestation of asmā' externally, according to forms in God's knowledge.

Faqīr: A person who has subsistence for self and family for sometime; and Miskin is one who has no subsistance even for one time. In Taṣawwuf, a faqīr is one who has lost his self. An Apostolic ḥadīth says: "I take pride in faqīrī and faqīrī is from me' (Al-faqru fakhrī wal faqru minni). Another ḥadīth says: "Faqr is the blackening of the face in the two worlds" (Al-faqru sawādul wajhi fid-dārayn). When the face is blackened, it disappears. Hence a faqīr is one who is self annihilated, even in this case.

Fikr: To think on the attributes of God and the identification of Rabb and 'abd. "Do not think on the Dhāt of God, but think on His attributes and His blessings." Lā tafakkaru fi dhātitlah, wa tafakuru fi ṣifātillah wa fi nuama'illahi. "To think for a moment is better than service in both the worlds" (Tafakkuru sā'tin khairun min 'ibādati-th-thaqalayn).

Ghayrīyat: Being of different sort. The Ghayrīyat between Rabb and 'abd is only suppositional, and is brought about by I'tibārāt. God is the "worshipped" in every limitation. Hence drop off the worship of the "limited"; and worship only Him who is manifest in it. Lā-ilaha illallah. In this, the gharīyat between idols and God is dropped off. The idols are the limitations of God. If one could overlook the "limited" for the time being, he worships the unlimited God through His manifestation. Once in a way only, worship through (and not of) "the limited" is permitted, as in the case of circumambulations around the Ka'ba. Here it is not to be lost sight of, that this is the worship of the Rabb-i-Ka'ba and not of the Ka'ba itself.

Ghauth: The axis around which the world turns. He is the chief functionary of the hierarchy which controls and manages the world.

Hama-bi-ūst: This is the tauhid of sifat (Tauhid-i-Sifātī). No sifat can exist without the Dhāt, since all sifāt inhere in Dhāt. "He is with you wherever you are" (wa Hua ma'kum ayna mā kuntum). The giver and the taker are one and the same in different, and sometimes in contrary manifestations.

Hama-az-ūst: This is the tauhid of af'āl. (Tauhidi-af ālī). In actions also tauhīd underlies; good and evil, profit and loss proceed from God (wal qadri khayrihi wa sharri minailahi taala). If evil and good are from God, to whom will the punishment be meted out, and where is the necessity for heaven and hell? The Qur'ān has verses, showing that man's evil actions proceed from himself. Mā aṣābaka min ḥasanatin famin allahi taala wa ma aṣābeka min sayyatin famin nafsika.² (Whatever you have got out of goodness is from God; and whatever you have got out of evil is from yourselves). So long as Ghayriyat-i-I'tabārī remains, the distinction between good and evil must remain; when it disappears as in the case of Fanā, the distinction also disappears.

^{1.} Qur'an, ivii : 4.

^{2.} Qur'an, iv: 79.

Ilama-ūst: (Tauhīd-i-Dhāṭī): The manifestations of ṣifāt (attributes) and af'āl (actions) of God are not separate from God. God is present in every ṣifat and fa'il. Hence the existence of every ṣifat and fa'il is the existence of God. He is manifest in all, but each object is not to be considered as God, for this is limiting Him in that object. If the worshipper loses sight of the manifestation; and keeps the Dhāt in view in worshipping before an object, in fact, if he is "looking through Nature up to Nature's God", his worship does not become idolatry; but this is impossible for the mobile vulgus and is repudiated. The author of "Gulshan-i-Rāz" says:

Brahmin gar bidanisti ki but chist Na danisti ki but ghayr az Khuda nist.

If the Brahmin knew what the idol is, He would have known that idol is no other of God.

Hāba: The dust-particles, such as you see in a stream of the sun's light in a dark room. It is the prima matrix, the substance (hayulā) of the Divine Thought. There is the hāba, the soul-world and the causal world.

Haqq: Truth—Proven. This is applicable to the first three stages of the Tanazzulāt. Ruyat-i-Ḥaqq is envisaging God in His Creation.

Hulul: One thing entering into another like water in a tub When "other than God" is not existent; the doctrine of the Hululis like Hallaj does not hold water.

Haqiqat: The reality of a thing. The causal world is thing, the mithāl-world is its Ḥaqīqat. The latter again is thing, and the soul-world is its ḥaqīqat; and so on with 'ālam-i-a'yān and 'ilm up to the Dhāt which is the innermost "Ḥaqīqat" Ḥaqīqat is opposed to i'tibār. The Dhāt is the reality of everything; and i'tibār is the idea of a thing Whatever conception is formed by us of a thing is its i'tibār.

Indrāj: Entry of one object into another in its highest aspect, e.g. Fire is the manifestation of the Ism, Al-Qābiḍ (the contractor); the quintessence of Qābiḍ is the Dhāt. Water is the manifestation of the name Al-Muhīyy (the life-giver). The inner aspect of this name is the Dhāt. There is differentiation of contrariness in the lower stages. In essence, therefore, the one is the other in its highest aspect. This is the doctrine of Indraj-i-kul fil Kul.

Indimāj: Entry of one object into another in its lower aspect, as in the case of the seed and the tree, the yolk of an egg and the chicken.

I'tibārāt: Suppositions or fancies: Hypostasis of the German monks. When you observe a mountain from a distance, one whole aspect of it is in view. This corresponds to Ahdiyyat. A nearer approach and a closer observation reveal the aspects of this one aspect in detail. These aspects correspond to I'tibārāt, Hypostases which are four in number, viz., existence, knowledge, light and self-observance. The Dhāt was thus in existence, and the discovery was His 'Ilm (knowledge). Knowledge involves the knower and the known. The knower is the Dhāt and the known, His a'yān.

According to Jili, the a'yān have come out in manifestation like an inscription in ink, which is hidden in darkness but comes out on exposition. According to Ibnul 'Arabi, they have not smelt the smell of existence, Mā shummat rahiyat al-Wujūd. The Dhāt manifested Himself according to them. God is sensed, and the creation is inferred. Clay is sensed, its shapes—jug, pot—are inferred. Ibnul-'Arabi again says that the peculiarities of the a'yān were with them from eternity; Jīlī says that they were bestowed by God. Hence with the one, Destiny is unchangeable; and with the other, it is changeable.

According to Ibnul-'Arabī, God's knowledge is given him by the objects which He knew; knowledge is a relation between the knower and the known (Al 'ilm nisbatun tabiatun lul ma'lūm). God decreed that they should be what their nature required them to be, This makes God and objects co-eternal—a mutiplicity in God, which multiplicity 'adam as the a'yān had no knowledge of themselves or of each other. (Zi imtiyāz-'ilmi wu ghayri masun) Jīlī therefore maintains that it was His knowing them that caused them to become the objects of His knowledge God was self-absorbed. "I am and there is none beside Me." When He introspected, He found his potentialities (shuyūnāt). These shuyūnāt are therefore second in point of consideration.

When one introspects, he finds that he has mercy, anger, etc.; till then these latter are only potential. Jili therefore says that the existence of God is logically prior to the existence of a 'yan, which are forms of His manifestation.

'Ishq: Love—God is 'Ishq. In answer to David's query, God said Kuntu kanzan makhfiyyan fa-ahbabtu an 'urifa fa khalaqtul khalqa li 'urifa. "I was a hildden treasure, I loved to be known, and created the world to be known." God's first impulse was: "To Love to know Himself. The author of "Man Lagan" says

Eh nafs agar na chulbulata, Keun khol kiwar bahar ata. Rahta mohan apni mari meyn Apus ki qadim kothri meyn.

If this nafs had not stirred up,
Why would it have opened the door to come out?

The lover would have stayed in his parterrie And in His old, old room.

The first bāṭinī (internal) manifestation was, therefore, "Love to know Himself"; and the result was the "form of the First Intelligence" in His knowledge, which was Haqīqat-i-Muḥammadi (the Reality of Muḥammad). This latter therefore was the beloved of God; hence the title of Muḥammad (peace be upon him) came to be Ḥabībulla (the beloved of God). A'yān, and Arwāḥ come on in the later stages of Tanazzulāt, and Love comes in the very first among internal manifestations. Among the Rafā'ī faqīrs the salutation is 'Ishqalla (God is love); and the answer: 'Ishq-i-Muḥammad Rasūlalla (Muḥammad the first manifestation is love). The first manifestation or intelligence took two aspects, viz., of glory (Jalāl) and of beauty (Jamāl). Jamāl became the lowest manifestation of the Reality of Muḥammad in the name of Hādī (True Guide); and Jalāl became the lowest manifestation in the name of Mudhil (one who leads astray)—the Iblīs. The sight of Ḥaqīqat-i-Muḥammadi, or Rūḥ-i-ā'zam as it is otherwise called, w is on the mithāl and causal bodies of the Prophet; whereas the sight of a lower manifestation, viz., the differentiated arwāḥ is on the mithāl and causal bodies of the other beings of the earth. Hence Lau laka lama khalaqtul aflak. "If it were not for thee, we would not have created the heavens." If the Rūḥ-i-ā'zam had not manifested itself, the arwāḥ of the world could not have manifested themselves.

Izdiwaj: The gamahea of the Greeks: "God was a hidden treasure. He loved to be known and created the world to be known" (Kuntu kanzan makhfiyyan fa aḥbubtu an 'urifa fa khalaqtal khalaq.) His Dhāt was hidden. The Internality joined with Love of self, and produced manifestation. The first joining was of Aḥdiyat and Wāḥidīyat; and thus there was conjunction between names.

Jalāl: Glorious (attributes). The attributes and asmā' that draw to the centre, and tend to the contraction of the circle of manifestation.

Jamāl: Manifestation of the attributes of mercy, love; expansion of the circle towards the circumference—Evolution as opposed to Involution, in the words of Herbert Spencer. In Jalāl, Jamāl is hidden and vice versa. Rain, for example, is a manifestation of Jamāl. Too much of it becomes a manifestation of Jalal; and again out of inundations, fresh fields and new populations arise—a manifestation of Jamal.

Kalām-ullah: Word of God-the Qur'an. It is considered in its two aspects—sense and word— Kalam-i-nafsi and Kalam-i-lafzi Some consider that as nassi it is eternal; and others consider that as laszi also, it is eternal—Imam Hanbal held that as Kalami-lafzī, the Qur'an is uncreated, and Caliph Mamun and his successor brought the weapon of Inquisition (Mehna) to prove that Kalām-i-lafzī is created. The Qur'an as it existed in the Lauh-i-Mahfūz was eternal. Bul hua Qur'anin majidun fi Lawhin Mahfuz. When the Angel Gabriel brought it down, and the Wahy was expressed in the words of the Prophet it was called Hadith-i-Qudsi. It was someting like the difference between the Catholic and Protestant Churches: the former holding that the words of the Christian scriptures are the very words of God, and the latter that the sense was expressed in the words of the inspired writers.

Kalima—Word: The reality of every object; its 'ayn is a Kalima (Logos of the Greeks).

Khalq: Manifestation from 'alam-i-arwah to 'alam-i-nasūt.

Khirqa: Gabardine. Torn cloth of patches, which the faqīrs wear; it is rent in the middle, so as to be worn around the neck. A Pīr bestows a khirqa on his murīd or khalīfa The Prophet had sent such a khirqa to Uways-i-Qarnī; and had bestowed one on Ḥaḍrat 'Alī. A murīd assuming the garb of his Pīr is supposed to have assumed the garb of his ṣifāt, and also to have assumed the hāl, in which the Pir was--when he last wore it.

Khaira: Whatever dawns on the mind from the unseen; an invitation to 'abd from his rabb.

Kiyānī: Realities of objects, and the manifestations of the names of God (Ilāhī); and these asmā'-i-kiyānī are twenty eight in number.

Kitābul-mubīn: The Preserved tablet. That which is general in God's knowledge is detailed in this. There is no addition to or substruction from this (La rațbin wa lā yābisin illā fi kitābin mubīn).

Lāhūt: "The hidden treasure." The stage of Dhāt. The world of asmā' and sifāt is Jabarūt, and the stage of arwāh is Malakūt, and the last stage is Nāsūt. These terms are said to have been first used by Manṣūr-i-Ḥallāj. They are called manāzil (stages) of the upward arc in sulūk.

Laṭīfa: Anything that is only understood and cannot be expressed in words. There are six Laṭīfas (Laṭāyif-i-sitta). The first laṭīfa is nafs located near the navel; the second laṭīfa is Qalb, located above the heart; the third is laṭīfa-i-Rūḥ, on the right side of the chest; the fourth, laṭīfa-i-Sir near the mouth of the stomach; the fifth, laṭīfa-i-Khafī in the fore-head; and the sixth laṭīfa-i-Akfāh on the top of the head. The faqīrs of the Naqkshbandī order and the followers of Shaykh Ahmad of Sirhind practise on these points; other Ṣūfīs have not faith in them. These resemble the Kundalini (the circles) of Patanjali).

Maqām: Station: Locus standi. Till one has fulfilled the duties of a station, he should not advance forward, e.g., Patience is a station from which the sālik does not stir towards the next higher stage, viz., contentment, till he has completed its duties and got accustomed to it. Then in order come Dependence on God, Submission, etc. If the sālik stirs out without completing his course in it, the station is changed into hāl (state) in his case.

Murāqaba: (Literally to keep under sight; to hang down one's head). This is to free the qalb from the Khaṭarāt of duality: to make the eye of the body and the eye of the heart (Oculus cordis) one and the same. When this is done, there is no necessity to close the bodily eye. If not, one has to do this, till he sees the picture of the universal idea of God in his qalb.

Murāqaba-i-Ḥudūrī: In this, the Sālik thinks he sees by God, eats by God, works by God. "He lives and moves and has his being by God" (and not in God as St. Paul has said). When a Muslim begins a work or takes a step, he says, Bismil ahir-Raḥmān ir-Raḥīm. "I begin in the name of (by) God, whose mercy extends to all and whose compassion extends to His friends or the chosen" The Muslim is thus in Murāqaba at every step. Murāqaba-i-Nazarī is when the sālik thinks that God has appeared in his own form, sees through his eyes, hears through his ears.

Mujāhada: To strive against rafs against desire. An Apostolic Hadīth says: "Srive against desire." Almujāhidu ma jahāda nafs. The Prophet after the battle of Badr said: "I have turned from the lesser jihād to the greater jihād. (Ruj'ana minal-jihād-il-asghari ilal-jihād il-akbar).

Mukāshafa: (Lifting of the veil): In this, the secrets of Divinity break on the heart. The sālik sees lights and illuminations. He sees the realities of 'ālam-i-mithāl with his bodily eyes; in fact by means of his five senses, he perceives the realities of that world; the lower animals sometimes display this perception.

Mushāhada: It is to see illuminations without the mediation of objects, i.e., to put objects out of sight and have direct illuminations. The Mathnawī says:

Dar guzar kun jumla tan ra dar nazar, Dar nazar raw, dar nazar raw, dar nazar.

Drop all objects out of sight, Go into sight, go into sight, go into sight.

Muayanah: Is when the salik loses his self in these illuminations.

Maut-i-Ikhtiyārī: The sālik annihilates his self and makes God permanent. When the sālik dies to his self, he lives by the Eternal Life.

Mazhar-i-atamm: The perfect manifestation, the perfect man. The Reality of the Prophet was the First Manifestation of God; and the realities of the 'abds are the manifestations of that reality. Each object is a manifestation of some one name; but all the other names are there in it potentially. Hence each object is a perfect manifestation in itself. The Prophet was the embodiment of Jalali (glorious) and Jamali (beautiful) attributes. The first were only potential in him, and the second were in evidence.

He was thus a blessing to the worlds (Rahmatan lil 'ālamīn) In fact, his Reality co-ordinates and harmonizes the contrary and conflicting asmā' manifested in this and the next worlds

Nafs-i-Rahmānī: The influence that an ism-iilāhī exerts on its opposite ism-i-kiyānī. The human breath keeps the body alive and active; so also each ism-i-rabb keeps its ism-i-murbūb in activity. Both these are the manifestations of wujūd-i-idāfī (Derivative Existence) The worlds are the manifestations of this Divine breath; just as all the words of a language are the manifestations of one simple human breath.

Nay': A reed: Jalāluddīn Rūmī represents the "Insān-ul-Kāmil" by Nay'. Every Muslim author begins his book with the hallelujah (Ḥamd) of God, and praise (Thanā) of the Prophet. The Maulānā begins his Mathnawī with an account of the "Reed."

Beshnu az nay chūn hikāyat mi kunad Uzjudai-ha shikāyat mt kunad. Kuz nayastan ta mara bi burid-and Uz nafiram murd wu zan nalid-and Sina khahum sharah sharah az firaq, Ta bugoyam sharah-i-dard ishtiyāq.

Listen to the reed when it narrates its tale,
It complains about its separation.
From the time they cut me from the reed-forest,
Men and women have wept from my plaintive voice.

I wish my breast were rent to pieces
When I make my commentary on the pain of my Love.

There is no direct hama and thana in this; but in a hidden way it contains both these. The reedforest, herein referred to, is the stage of Wahdat, wherein the a'yan of the world lie hidden; Insan-ul-Kāmil is removed from this stage down to the lowest stage, wherein he is using a plaintive voice. He has to adjust the jarring asma' through which he descended; and the asma are weeping for having been brought down to the same level by the adjusting hand of Insan ul-Kamil; akhizun bi masiyatiha (who holds them by their forelock); hence the males (Abā-i-'Ulawī) and the females (Ummahāt-i-siflī) referred to. Hidayat 'Ali Sahib in his Commentary of the 'Mathnawi' named Kashfut 'Ulūm says that Abā-i-'Ulawi are Asmā'-i-Ilāhi, and Ummahāt-i-sifli are the Asma'-i-Kiyani (vide p. 4). This cannot be; since the former being the direct asma of God are not under the control of anybody or of the Insan-ulkāmil. It is only the latter that are under his control. Again it is only the latter twenty-one asma'-i-kiyani that have their opposites. There could be no manifestation of the world without the display of the opposites. Hence Aba-i-'Ulawi and Ummahat-i-sifli are these twenty-one asmā'-i-kiyānī. By their interplay, the world is manifest. The reed (Insan-ulkāmil) by its sound (the Qur'ān) has brought these jarring asma into harmony; and hence, being refractory they bemoan in the grip of a compelling hand Thus the Maulana has brought out both hamd and thanā in his opening lines about the famous reed.

Qada: In God's knowledge, there were the aptitudes of A'yān; and He commanded the A'yān to become what they were—this is Qaḍā. Whatever they were ordered to become, they had to become through their own medium—their own activity and not by an external agent. This is Qādar.

Oiyāmat: The State of Stability—a static state as opposed to dynamic. This is the appellation given to the Last Day. When the soul severs its connexion with the body, the faculty of Wahm accompanies it, according to Ghazzāli, to the other side of the grave; and renews, in kaleidoscopic forms and with a hundredfold vigour, the changes wrought and nurtured in it during the man's life-time on the earth; and he takes the form of the predominating characteristic of his life, 2 still retaining the identity of his earthly ego, which links him on to resurrection in the next life. These changes, whether pleasant or unpleasant, go on recurring till a fixed time (givāmat), when he feels his proximity to God and is lost in Transcendental Wonder: for God is with His 'abd even in Hell, which is one of His asma'-i-jalali. This givāmat is not the pralaya, spoken of in Hinduism; when one cycle ends, and there is stationariness before another begins. For the God of Islam does not "take rest." He is the God "whom neither slumber nor sleep seizeth" 3 (Lā takhuzuhu sinatun wa lā noum). The changes are in His activity of creation, He is ever the same—Wa hua al ana kama kana

The time of Qiyamat is not known to any

^{1.} Vide p. 109-11 ante.

^{2.} Page 109 ante.

^{3.} Stra Bagara 255.

creature. In the Hadith of Gabriel (vide page 223 ante). the stranger also asked the Phophet (peace be upon him) to enlighten him regarding the day of judgment. The answer was, "the questioned one is himself no more enlightened than the questioner." "Then." said he, "enlighten me regarding the signs that shall precede it." The Prophet said: "It shall be when the maid-servant shall give birth to her master." and "vou see the naked and barefooted, and the grazer of sheep enjoying themselves in palaces." According to 'Abdul Karım Jili' "Man is compared to Maidservant and the Occult Truth to her Master." This. therefore, means that Qiyamat will be when Divinity will manifest itself in Man. This world is where God observes through man ('Alam-i-Shahadat); and the Mithal world is where He does not observe through man but direct, which is therefore called ghavb. When man reverts to the mithal stage, and God sees through him there, then this world becomes ghavb and the mithal world becomes shahadat. The Wujud-i-Batini (the interior or real existence) of Man is God. The nature of this existence will become more apparent, and the reality of 'abd will become more clear in that state; (vide "Qurb-i-Nawafil)." and the naked (the interior) will enjoy in 'palaces' (illuminations). When the 'ariff will become aware of asma' and ignore them in the light of Dhat; and when also, he will ignore sifat and envisage Dhat. he will be like the shepherd, who is enjoying himself in a palace, i.e., the human man will enjoy the light of epiphanies.

^{1.} Insan-ul-Kamil, Chap. 61

These are the minor signs.—The major signs are that Yājūj and Mājūj which appear on the earth. These are the Seditious Thoughts and Evil Intentions overpowering the nais of man. They will be finally killed: and in their places. Rahmani Khatras will appear. The second major sign is the appearance of Dabbatul-ard, a talking beast who will warn people against evil impulses. Jili considers that this refers to Ruh-ul-Ouds (the Holy Ghost). The third is Dajjal, who will wander over the earth, but would avoid the direction of Macca and Madina; he will stop short at Ramilah, a village built of mud near Jerusalem. Here Christ will descend and kill him with a lance. This Dajjal will have hell on his lefthand side, and heaven on his right-hand side. Jilí considers that Dajjāl is the Nass i ammāra, which is the repository of evil thoughts. On its left is the hell of ascetic life; and its right, the heaven of licentiousness. Whoever is put into hell will at once find a place in God's heaven, and vice versa. The Christ referred to is the Soul that will scotch the nafs. The two cities that Dajjāl will be unable to enter are the cities of Sukr and Sahw, and the village Ramilah that will obstruct his path is the stage of Causal body. The fourth is the appearance of Mahdi. The fifth sign is the rising of the Sun in the West and his setting in the East. This means that man will have illuminations from a quarter least anticipated. All these signs mean that the ghavb world will become the apparent world. This is the expected Millennium, wherein evil will disappear from the world before the coming of the Judgment Day. Jili's explanations are more or less on rationalistic rather than on Kashfi (illuminationists) lines and these are not acquiesced in, by literalists, such as Ahl-i-Sunnat are.

Qurb-i-Farā'yad: In this, God is the externality of 'abd. God is the actor and instrument of 'abd. He becomes the sight and hearing of 'abd.

Qurb-i-Nawāfil: 'Abd becomes the externality of God, and the actor and instrument of God. In such a condition, Isaiah said: "Harken unto me, O Jacob, Israel my called: I am He, I am the First, and I also am the Last." Isaiah 48. See also Psalms, 46-10, for David.

Qalb: (The heart.) This is not the lump of flesh of pine-shape, located near the nipples, which is the soul of motive power, and is shared in by the lower animals. It is really the borderland between Rüh and Nafs, between light and darkness; it is so called because it turns and directs itself to the ism that presents itself before it, or because it takes an inverted image of the world. The retina of the eye takes an inverted image of things, by the laws of refraction of light in the crystalline lens; but actually we see things upright; for Qalb has again inverted an upturned image, and made it upright. The Western psychologists simply say that we have an upright view, because of the force of habit. Qalb again is a drop in the ocean of ruh, which has manifested itself in limitation according to the nature of the physical body. It is compounded of the subtle ruh and the coarse body; and has thus established connection between the two. It receives impressions from the external world through the five external senses, and then from the internal world through the five internal senses (viz., Thought, Instinct, Memory, Reasoning and Fancy). 'Abdul Karım Jili describes Qalb "as the eternal light and sublime consciousness (Sirr) revealed in the 'ayn of created beings.' It is the throne of God (Al-'Arsh), and His temple in man (Oalb-ul-Mumin 'Arsh-ullahi.) It is the centre of Divine consciousness in man. It reflects all the Divine names and attributes at once, and turns its face under the influence of different names, like the needle of a compass. The mercurial coating of this mirror is the body. The heart reflects the world of attributes. "The earth and the heaven do not contain me; but the heart of my believing servant containeth me." (Lā yasuni ardun wa lā samaun wa vasuni 'qalbu 'abdin muminin). When one perceives an object, an impression is carried to the brain, one or more of the five senses contributing their quota through their respective channels. The commonsense hiss-i-mushtarak), one of the five internal senses, then adjusts these impressions and forms the required image; and these images are carried to the ruh (soul) through one of the other tour internal faculties (quwā-i-bātīni vyuh), viz., imagination (khīyāt), Thinking (mutas arrifa), Instinct (wāhima) Retentativeness (hāfiza). An adept does not see an object as an object; he sees it as the manifestation of God's attributes and names; and so the impression that his Qalb, which is the mystical commonsense, carries to the ruh (soul) is the manifestation of Divinity without. Qalb is really the photographic plate that takes on the picture of God's manifestations, and not merely of the outer shell of materiality, through the x-rays of the five internal faculties, so to speak. An Urdu poet has said:

Dil ke äyine men hay taşwīr-i-yār Jab dharā gardan jhukū'ī dekh li

In the mirror of the heart is the picture of the Friend

When for a while, I hang down my head, I see Him.

There are three aspects of this Qalb; one is Qalb-i-Munib, from which good Khaṭarāt manifest themselves, and another is Qalb-1-Salīm which displays love of God and fondness for 'irfān; and the third is Qalb-i-Shāhid, which discerns the presence of God in every object.

Rasm—as opposed to Ism: It is the effect and manifestation of Ism. It means the attributes of creatures (the created). All that is considered as other-than-God (Mā siwāllah) is really the effect of Asmā.'

Rabb: Particular name of God in reference to each 'ayn-i-thābita The name Providence requires as its opposite, some one to be provided; the name "merciful" requires "some one to whom mercy is shown." The one is rabb and Ism-i-Ilāhī, and the other is murbūb and Ism-i-Kiyānī. The name Allah is conglomerate of all asmā'.

Sālik: One who enters on sulūk (pilgrimage); he is in the middle stage between a beginner, and an adept. Firstly there is pure sālik as defined above. Then sālik-majdhūb, one who has attained jadhba in his sulūk. The third majdhūb-sālik, one who has attained jadhba, purely by God's grace, and without his Mujāhada and who then enters upon sulūk. The fourth is pure majdhūb who has attained jadhba without sulūk, and who never afterwards enters upon sulūk. Some consider that the second is the best.

Sirr: The first tendency to manifestation of a wave in the calm ocean—the first tendency to motion in the calm ocean may be likened to the first recognition of "I" by God in His Dhāt. That is the first 'ayn-i-thābita which is called Ḥaqīqat-i-Muḥammadī, the First Intelligence. From this one wave, several waves broke up and manifested themselves, and became the a'yān-i-thābita of objects. Qāḍī Husām-uddīn of Gujerat has said:

Zı daryā mauj-i-guna gun baā āmad Zi bichuni bi rang-t-chun bar āmad Gāhi dar kiswat-i-Laylā faru shud Gāhi bar ṣūrat-i-Majnūn bar āmad.

From ocean rose waves of different kinds, From incomparableness, they assumed the colour of comparableness.

Now they appeared in the garb of Layla, Now they assumed the form of Majnū

Thus "you understand the '1' of God, when you understand your own '1'." Man 'arafa nafsahu faqad 'arafarabbahu. The first sirr contains this "I" (Al-insānu suri wa anā sirruhu). Man is my sirr and I am his sirr." Since man is a microcosm (Kawn-i-Jami), he has all the attributes of God as well as the sirr of God. Every atom of the creation is crying out "I"—"I."

Shirk: To consider another existing beside God. Shirk-i-jali is to join "another" in the Dhāt, sifāt, and action of God, to consider the sifāt of God as separate from His Dhāt. Shirk-i-Khafi is to consider that "other than God" is existent.

Shuyun: (pl. of Shan) Potentialities—like the potentialities of a tree in the seed.

Shathiyyat: Words that come out of the mouth of a Walī in his state of ecstacy, like Anal Haqqu (I am the truth) from Manṣūr-i-Ḥaliāj; Laysa fi jubbati siwallahi. (There is none underneath my garment but God) from Junayd; and Subhāna ma a'zama shāni (I am holy, how great is my position) from Bāyazīd-i-Bisṭāmi; Ana nuqtatuba-i-bismillah — Anā qalmun wu anā Lauhun Mahfuzun anā 'Arshun wa anā Kursīyun wa anā samawātun (I am the point of the Bay of Bismillah, I am the Pen, I am the Preserved Tablet, I am the 'Arsh. I am the Kursı, I am the firmaments) from Hadrat 'Alī.

Sidratul-Muntahā: The Great Fig-tree on the outermost border of Space It is the stage in the upward arc of ascension, at which spatial region with its manifestations of diversity ends, and the non-spatial expanse of Pure Being begins. A tree is a symbol of diversity in Unity (Kathrat dar Waḥdat), the ramification of its branches, its innumerable leaves, flowers and fruits are but the outcome of one seed. At this stage, names and attributes (asmā'-wa-ṣifāt) drop off; and Dhāt alone remains. In the night of Mi'lāj, Gabriel who had accompanied the Prophet (peace be upon him) stopped short here, saying, as Sa'dī has put it:

Agar ya sari mui bar tar param
Farugh-i-tajalli bisuzad param.

If I fly higher by a hair-breadth
The splendour of Glory will singe my wings.

Reason (of which Gabriel is the first embodiment) could not ascend higher than the outermost limit of diversity. It is only Nūr-i-Emān, the light that lights the inner recess of the heart that could do this—lz yagshaus-Sidrata ma yaghsha, ma zaghal basaru wa ma tagha. When that which overshadowed the Sidra overshadowed it (i.e., the Nūr), the Prophet (peace be upon him) did not glance aside, nor did his sight go astray.

Sifāt: Attributes in the Dhāt; manifestations of Dhāt: sifāt are essential to Dhāt, which is known only from sifāt, and without which it is "unknown and unknowable".

Saul-i-Sarmadī: The Eternal and Incessant voice without sound and direction,—answering to the Logos of St John "In the beginning was Word, the Word with God and the Word was God." It is a voice that is heard in jungles as well as in crowded market places. It is the voice of God that Moses heard. It forms a Shaghal by itself with some adepts.

Suwar-ul-Ḥaqq: Forms in the knowledge of God. When God looked at Himself, He saw Himself in a form that became the Form of Muhammad (peace be upon him) Ḥaqīqat-i-Muḥammadī.

Ti'yun: Limitation. God's consciousness of Himself was His first tai'yun. A tai'yun is an 'adam in itself. The second tai'yun was consciousness of His attributes. These are the internal tai'yunāt. Arwāh, mithāl and ajsām are external taiyūnāt.

Tauhid: Losing one's self in the Dhat of God.

Tajalli: The illumination of Dhat. Dhat as such is darkness. The two extremes of the spectrum of light end in darkness. Darkness is really light, which the retina of the eyes is incapable of appreciating. The 'Mathnawi' says:

Tajalli gar tu khah nur-i-dhat ast Bi tariki darun ābi ḥyat ast.

Tajalli, if you say so, is the light of dhat Within darkness lies the fount of eternal life

When dhat dawned upon itself, Nūr appeared. This was Nūr-i-Muḥammadī (Light of Muḥammad (peace be upon him) as stated in the Ḥadīth-i-Jābir. "O Jābir", said the Prophet "know that the first thing created was the light of thy Prophet." Tajalli is the appearance of Dhat in tai'yunāt (limitations). God appears to the devotee in the form most eagerly sought for, by him. Moses was in search of fire in a desert on his way back to Egypt from Shu'ayb's (Jethro's) house in Midian (Madayun); God therefore appeared to him in a "burning bush." If one seeks Him in an image, the image appears to fulfill his desires; thus there is no disappointment even in idol worship. God has said: "Anā 'inda zanni 'abdihi." "I am with the thought of my servant." If the devotee supplicates before an image, he is never disappointed, because image also is a tajalli, idolatry consisting in thinking it to be the dhat itself 'Gulshan-i-Raz' says:

Barāhman gar bi dānisti ki but chist, Na danisti ki but juz az Khuda nist.

If the Brahmin knew what the image really is, He would have known that it is not other-than-God.

Tashbih: The manifestation of the attributes of God in limitation. The attributes of 'abd are the attributes of God in limitations. When there is thus comparison between God's attributes and 'abd's attributes, God is said to be in tashbih.

Tanzih: Since His attributes are infinite, we cannot form an idea of them from our limited attributes. His attributes are incomparable to our limited attributes. God in His own attributes is in Tanzih. Subhāna Rabbika Rabbul 'izzati umma ya sifum. "Pure is thy Lord, the Lord of Honour, from all that you attribute to Him."

Tariquat: Pilgrimage of Salik towards God by inner purifications.

Taqdir: That which is measured and "estimated" The estimate of creation in God's knowledge (Ummul-Kitāb). Is this this liable to change or not? If it is liable, then God's knowlegde or His omniscience becomes defective or incomplete. If it is not, what is the good of prayer? The Qur'an has said Ud'uni aslajib lakum. "Pray unto Me and I shall accept your prayer." With Ibn-ul-'Arabī, the realities of A'yan are eternal in Gcd's knowledge, which also is eternal; and He granted their prayer, by manifesting Himself in their form. He only wills what they have in them to become; for knowledge is dependent on the known. Al-'ilmu nisbatun tabiatun lil-malum. Thus human actions are self-determined. God did not determine them; only in His name of Jawad (the gift-giver), He manifested them. Neither did the a'yan determine their own qualities, these latter were inherent in them. A draughtsman makes a triangle on paper. He did not propose the three sides and the three angles, and the three angles being equal to two right angles; these qualities were there in a triangle (according to the Laws of Thought). If the draughtsman makes four angles, and four sides, the figure will become a square or anything else and not a triangle. It may, however, be that Ibn-ul-'Arabi, the chief exponent of the doctrine that God is knowledge itself, thought that the knower, knowledge and the known are one and the same; in which case, knowledge depending on the known comes to be the Dhat depending on Itself, for there is no mā-siwāllah (Other-than-God) in the first batani stage. In the third stage or still lower down, ghayrīyat-i'tibārī begins, and the Dhat controls the asma and a'yan.

'Abdul Karım Jili, however, differed from this Shaykh. He says A'yan became what they were by His knowing them before their creation, ie., by His knowing, they became the objects of His knowledge. He knew the angles and the sides and put them in a particular way and they formed a triangle. This leaves taqdīr in His hands. There are many Qur'ānic verses to this effect.

Wa tuizzu man tashau wa tudhillu man tashau biyadikal khayr, wa huwa ala kulli shayin qadir.¹ He elevates whomsoever He likes, He degrades whomsoever He likes. In His hand lies goodness. He is omnipotent over all." Yef'alu ma yashu wu yahkamu ma yurid. "He does what He likes, and orders what He wills."

Lā tahdi man aḥbabtu wa la kinnallaha yahdi man yashau. "You cannot rightly guide whomsoever you like, but God can guide whomsoever He likes."

This controversy appears to have arisen by making a'yan co-eternal with God, like Aristotle having made matter co-eternal with Him. If the a'yan are brought down to their proper place in the scheme of Tanazzulät, that is, below asma', they need not be co-eternal in point of time; they are co-eternal in His knowledge. In the regular ascent in the upper arc of 'Urūj, a'yān disappear in asmā', asmā' in sifāt and sifāt in Dhāt and the Dhāt alone remains. Kullu man alayha fan wa yabqa wajhu rabbika dhul-jalali wal-ikram? "All are annihilated, except the face (the Dhat) of thy Lord with His glory and mercy." Sifat are of secondary consideration, so also are asma' and a'yan. Just as one cannot say that sifat (which are aspects of Dhat) are co-eternal with the Dhat, for they are sometimes so hidden in the dhat as to be annihilated, like tree in a seed; so also one cannot say that a'van, the forms of sifat in God's knowledge are co-eternal with the Dhāt; the Dhāt has priority in rank. It, therefore, controls the sifat and a'yān. In this case, man simply manifests the asmā' that play upon him. One of the names of God is Al-Ghanī (the independent). When this name is manifest, man appears to be a free agent; while really in his own dhāt he is an 'adam.

^{1.} Qur'an iii, 26.

^{2.} Qur'au lv, 26, 27.

The 'Mathnawi says':

Darya bi wujudi kwish mauji darad, Khas pindarad ki kasha kash ba ust.

Ocean by itself has waves and billows, Straw on the top thinks that it struggles with it.

In the three Internal (bāṭinī;) stages, there is no fore-knowledge; for with God there is the "Eternal Now." Laysa indallahi sabahun wa la masaun (with God there is no morning and no evening) In the three manifest (zāhirī) stages, or more correctly in the last stage ('ālam-i-zāhir), there is succession of events, and this gives rise to the idea of priority or of cause and effect.

Uluhiyot: This term is used for the stage at which the rabb (ruler) and marbūb (ruled) come into play. This is the line of separation between asmā'-i-ilāhī and asmā'-i-kiyānī. Taqdīr has its source here, where change from one ism into another takes place.

Ummul-kitāb: The First Intelligence, the Reality of Muhammad. (peace be upon him).

'Urūj: This is to reach the station of Wahdat — The Sālik travels from 'ālam-i-ajsām annihilating his body in sight or in thought, to 'ālam-i-mithāl. He annihilates 'alam-i-mithal and travels to 'alam-i-ar-wah; thence to 'alam-i-a'yan, thence to Wahidiyyat, and Wahdat, in the reverse serial order in which he descended; and thus reaches the point from which he had descended. The 'Urūj of the salik is up to the Light of Muḥammad (peace be upon him) Man raani faqad raul Haqq (Whoever has seen me, has seen God) says a Ḥadīth; and the 'Urūj of Muḥammad (peace be upon him) is up to God Himself (Ahdīyyat) for the Prophet is the barzakh between Ahdīyyat and Wāḥidiyyat. In this sense, said 'Urfī the Persian poet, in praise of the Prophet:

Taqdir bi ekk naqa nashanid du mahmil Salma-i-hudusi tu wa Layla-i-qidam ra.

Taqdir has placed two litters on one camel, The Salma of thy Transitoriness and the Layla of Eternity.¹

'Unsūr—(Element): The doctrine that there are only four Elements, viz., air, water fire and earth is now an exploded doctrine; Chemistry has proved these to be compounds.—The four elements out of which, substances are formed are different; although they go under these names; they are beyond the confines of the three dimensions. By air is meant the Divine Breath, La tasubbur riha fa innaha min nafsir Rahmani.—"Do not abuse the wind, for the wind is the breath of God." Nafakhtu fihi min ruhi. "We breathed into him (Adam) from Our breath".—It approximates to khālī or ether. By water, is meant the Surging Ocean (Baḥrul-Musjūr) above the 'Arsh.

^{1.} These are the heroines in the love literature of the Arabs of the Days of Ignorance.

—Wa jaalna min al mai kullu shayın hayyun. "We made all things, living—by water"—This perhaps is the Ocean of Nebula. Fire—is the "blazing fire that leaps up to our hearts"—Nar-ullahi muqatul lati taitaliwu alal afyida (Sūra 110: 4.) This is the fire of Nafs-i-Lawwāma, the conscience that reproaches; or perhaps the fire which Prometheus stole out of Heaven, to animate his men of clay. The earth is the earth above the 'Arsh—the mithālī earth, on which the Jannat is situated and on which the Judgment Day will take place—Yuma tabaddulul ardu ghayrul ardi. "On that day, We will change this earth into another earth." This is the Ard-ul-Wasia' (the expanded earth) and is "the new earth" which St. John the Divine speaks of—(Revelation 21: 1)

Waḥdut-ul-Wujūd: There is only one existence which is the Dhāt; and limitations are like billows and bubbles on the surface of water which are not realities. This is the belief of the Wujūdīyyahs as led by Ibn-ul-'Arabī and Ash'aris led by Abul Hasan Ash'arī. The Shuhūdiyyahs led by Shaykh 'Alā-ud-Dowlah Sapinānī and Shakyh Aḥmad Sirhindī helieve in two existences (viz., of God and a'yān) and one dhāt; and the Mutakallimīn believe in two existences and two dhāts (of God and creation.)

Wujūd-i-Iḍāfī: Also named Zāhir-ul-Wujūd, manifestations of God with the forms and attributes of A'yān. Wujūd is from Wajd "to find out."

Wajd: Attraction towards God, it is also called jadhba.

Wajh-Dhat: "Wherever thou turnest thy face, there is the wajh (Dhat) of God." (Fa aynama tawallu fa samma wujhulla). If wajh is dhat, is it shay also? The Qur'an says: "every thing is, or is to be annihilated, except His visage" (Kulla shayin halika illa wajhahu), i.e, the face or the dhat is not, or is not to be, annihilated. When an exception is made, it must be from a group of its own species. There is only one dhat and that is of God. There are three internal stages of Tanazzulät, viz., Ahdiyyat, Wahdat, Wahidiyyat, i.e., La bi sharti shay; (without the condition of 'thing'); bisharti shay (with the condition of no 'thing') and bisharti la shay (with the condition of 'thing.') In the third stage, the dhat comes under the category of "thing" and hence the exception. The Quranic saying Laysa kamithlihi shayin (He is not like the pattern of a thing), refers to the first of La bishari shay (Ahdiyyat).

Zāhir: External. When taiyun becomes more and more in evidence, Externality becomes more and more pronounced. Words written in ink are not seen in darkness. As more and more light is thrown on them, they become more and more prominent, i.e., they become Zāhir—i.e., come into Externality or Manifestation—Zāhir screens the bāṭin (internality). The more the attributes are manifest, the more the Reality becomes hidden; the more a fire-brand is turned round and round, the more is the fire-circle in evidence, and the fire-brand hidden from your sight. Hence it is said:

Al-'ilmu ḥijāb-ul-akbar Knowledge is a great screen.

INDEX

Abraham, 31, 100, 129, 130, 137, 156 Abai-'Ulawi, (the superior fathers). 14, 70 Abdāls, 162 'Abdul Karīm al-Jīlī, Shaykh, 10, 17, 20, 40, 45, 48, 51, 61, 94, 145 'Abdul Khāliq, Khwāja, 137 'Abdul Qadir Jilani (Pir Dastgir). 166, 192 'Abdulia Anşārī, Khwāja, 135 'Abdullah ibn Mas'ūd, 117. 118 'Abdullah Harith Muhasibi of Başra, 158 Abī 'Abbās (of Merv), 165 Abī 'Abdulla ibn Ḥākim Tirmizī, 162 Abī 'Abdulla Khafifi, 163, 164 Abī Halmān (of Damascus), 165 Abī Ḥasan ibn Muḥammad Nūri, 160 Abi Zarara, 51 Abū 'Abdullah, 157 Abū 'Ali ibn Sīnā, 13 Abū Bakr, Ḥadrat 91, 156, 157 Abū Bakr Shiblī, 155, 164 Abû Dina, 117 Abū Hudhail Muhammad al-Allaf, 141 Abū Hamza, 161 Abū Hafa, 157 Abû Ḥanifa, 157 Abū Hurayra, 111 17 Abu Muḥammad Ruzbahan, 110 Abû Jehl, 42 Abū Mūsa al-Ash'ari, 142 Abū Muslim (of Khurāssān), 166 Abū Nașr Fārābi, 14 - Abû Sa'id Abul Khayr, Shaykh, 61, 100, 166 Abū Sa'di Aḥrār (who gave currency to the word 'l'ana' and 'Baqa'), 15, 93

Abū Sa'id Fadiulia, 153 Abū Sa'id Khunnaz, 163 Abū Sa'īd Salmi, Imām, 115 Abū Yazīd Bisţāmi, 157 Abū Yazīd Tayfūrī of Bistām, 158 Abū Talha, 115 Abū Ţālib, 144 Abul Fida, 150, 151 Abul Hasan Ash'ari, 39, 142 Abul Hasan-i-Nuri, 153 Abul Qāsim Junayd, 157, 160 Abul Qāsim al-Qushayri, 156 'adam (nothingness), 11, 12, 17, 32, 33, 70, 71, 148, 206, 208 Adam, 47, 52, 64, 77, 79, 137, 163, 164, 176 Aḥdiyyat. 49, 50, 51, 54, 58, 59, 65, 73, 74, 84, 85, 180 Ahmad, the Mujaddid, Shaykh, 101 Ahmad ibn Thabit, 166 Ahmad ibn Yabus, 166 Ahmad Kabir Rafa'l, Saiyyid, 192 Ajsām, 56 'Ala'ud-Dawlah San nani, 45, 61 'Alam-i-Ajsam, 69 'Ālam-i-Arwāḥ, 62, 76 'ālam-i-barzakh, 108 'Alam-i-Jabrut, 47 'Alam-1-Malakut (the angelic world), 'Alam-i-Mithal, 45, 67, 79, 100, 106, 108, 117, 119 'ālam-i-Shahādat, 79 Al-Batzakh, 115, 119 Al-Jubbai, 142 'Alī, Ḥaḍrat, 36, 84, 91, 131, 136, 142, 156, 157 al-Mamūn, 26 Al-Mumit, 57 Amīr 'Alī, Saiyed, 103, 104, 106

Anawallahs and l'anawallaha (schools of), 15 Anaxamines the Milesian, 39 'Aqāyid-i Jāmi, 44. f.n Archetypes (Plato's doctrine of), 13 Aristotle, 19, 43, 59 'Arsh, 72, 82, 84, 107, 175, 205, 206 Arwāh, 56 asmā'i-ilahi, 37, 54, 58, 62 asmā'i-kiyāni, 37, 54, 58, 62 'Ață bin Yassar, 141 Auliyā, 134, 138, 162, 184 Averroes (Ibn-Rushd), 63 'Awarif-ul-Ma'arif, 151 a'yān-i-thābita, 40, 43, 57. 70, 79 Äyāt-i-Bayyināt (plain verses), 2 'Ayniyat-i-Haqiqi, 56 'Av'esha, Hadrat, 64, 155

Babu Chandra Bose, 10 Bacon, 28 Badr, 176 Baghdad, 161 Baha'uddin, Khwaja, 137 Bahr-ul-Ma'dni, 101, 131, 159 f.n. Baidāwi, 183 Baqa', 88, 89, 90, 92, 95, 163 barzakh, 46, 52, 54, 56, 62, 181, 184 Batin, 57 Bāyazīd Bisţāmi, 36, 92, 155, 170 Behmen (Cobbler mystic of Germany), 149 Beneditto Croce, 14 Bhari, Maulana, 57 Bible, 154 Bilāl, 115, 157 Bishr Ḥafi, 157 Browne, E.G., 45, 166 Buddha, 77 Büstan, 154

Darwin, 47, 93 David, 30, 51, 81, 160, 176 Dāwūd-i-Tai, 157 Democritus, 168 Development of Muslim Theology (of D.B Macdonald), 40 f n.

Dhāt (of God), 10, 11, 19, 22, 23, 24, 25, 28, 32, 34, 35, 36, 37, 42, 43, 46, 48, 49, 50, 51, 61, 65, 66, 67, 72, 74, 84, 92, 115, 116, 137, 145, 156, 159, 165, 172, 173, 174, 156, 183

Dhāt-i-Sadhaj (colourless Reality), 24

Dhun-nūn Miṣri, 46, 152, 155, 157 160

Dictionary of Islam, 91

Dihya Kalbi, 69

Diogenes of Appollonia, 39

Dionysius, 42, 43, 163

Discourse to Kanzul Asrar il-Qidam, 155 f.n.

Lekhart (Mystic of Rhineland), 44, 163, 164 ligo. 50 Ligotist (self expressionist), 16 Egypt, 106 Emanuel Swedenborg. 67 Erigena, John Scotus, 163 Essays on Progress: its Law and Cause, 34 f.n.

l'akhruddin, Baba, 192, 193, 194
Fund' (self-annihilation), 16, 88, 89
90, 91, 92, 93, 95, 147, 163, 174
Fundamental Truths, 16 f n.
Fusüs-ul-Hikam, 58, 60, f.n., 95, 97

Ghazzali, 20, 21, 35, 96, 101, 109, 196 Ghiyāth-ul-Lughāt, 151 Ghulām 'Alī Shāh (of Delhi), 192 Goliath, 160 Gospel of John, 43 Gulistān (of Shaykh Sa'dī), 6 Gulshan-i-Ras, 58, 59, 71, 75, 78, 94, 120, 121, 159, 175

Habib-i-'Ajmī, 157 Hāfiz (Persian poet of Shirāz), 11 19, 32, 146

Hakim 'Umar, 166, 167 Hamid-ud-din Nagori lol Raiputana), 25 Hamza, 166 Haqiqat-i-Muhammadi, 34, 47, 58, 78, 79, 82, 176 Harith Mubasibi, 165 Hasan al-Başrî, 141, 157, 191 Hasan, Imam, 156 Hegel, 16 Hindu. 10, 187 Hinduism, 189 Hiran ibn Heya, 157 History of Muslim Philosophy. (Boer's), 63, f n. History of Philosophy (of Morell's). 44. f.n. Hours with the Mystics (Vaughan's), 44, f.n., 60, f.n., 154, f.n., 163, f.n. Hugo, Victor, 96 Hujjat-ul-Bāligha, 117 Husain ibn Mansür, 164 Husayo, Imam, 144, 156 Iblis, 70, 76 Ihn 'Arabi, Shaykh Muhiyyuddin, 9, 10, 14, 18, 20, 22, 34, 38, 39, 40, 45, 46, 50, 51, 52, 79, 110, 144, 145, 146, 176 Ibn Khaldun, 64 Ibu Riyab, 157 Iboul Farid, 45 Ibrābīm Adham, 18, 157 Ibrāhīm Gazūr-i-Ilāhī, Shavkh, 35, 36, 38 [hyd'-ul-'Ulum, 101 'Ilm (knowledge), 19, 23 'Ilm-i-Kalām, 96 Imam Hanbal, 24, 128 Insān-ul-Kāmil, 10, 17 f.n., 23 f n , $1. 61, 70, 71, 73, 74, 75, 76, 78, 86, 107, 145 Isuac, 156 Inraelites, 103

Jābir, 52 Jacob Behmen (Cobbler-mystic of Germany), 96 Jafar-i-Şādiq, Imam, 77 Jalal Bokhari, Saivvid, 192 Jamaluddin Sawochi, 191 Jāmī (Mullā), 31, 37, 44, 130, 164, 171 Januat-ul-Fadilat, 112 Jannat-udh-Dhat, 112, 113 Januat-ul-Firdaus, 112 Jannat-ul-Istihqaq, 112 Jannat-ul-Makāsib, 111 Januat-us-Salam, 111 Jannat-us-Sifāt, 112 Japnat-us-swar, 111 [amhar-i-Haba, 64, 72, 107 Jawāhir-as-Sulūk, 31, f n, 66, 94, 99 Jerusalem, 104 Jesus Christ, 1, 35, 52, 81, 121, 137 152, 156, 166, 176, 192 Tewish-Platonism, 43 Job, Prophet, 156, 180 John the Bapust, 156 Joseph, 106 Joshua (servant of Moses), 3 Junayd (of Baghdad), 36, 153, 155, 156, 161, 165, 166, 192 Ka'ba, 131, 132 Kabir Das. 77 Kant, 64 Kashful-Mahjub, 88 Kathrat-dar-Wahdat(mundamaj), 37

Laplace, 64

Khayāl-i-Munfasil, 69

Khayāl-i-Muttasil, 69

Kimiyā-i-Sa'ādai, 109 Kitāb-ul-Mubīn, 144

Kitab-ut-Taşawwuf, 36

Kursī, 72, 82, 205, 206

Khizr, (supposed to be one Bayla ibn Malacan), 3, 4, 5, 6, 69

Khilāfat, 90

Lauh-i-Mahfüz, (Preserved Table)
13, 63, 144 265
Layla, 26
Lesser Mystenies ('Ilm-i-Daqa'yaq),
2
Leucippus, 168
Literary History of Persia, 114, 166

Ma'bad al-Juhani, 141 Madina, 150, 188 Majhūl-ul-Nāth, 46 Mala'-i-a'ala, 64, 69, 71, 106 Mālik ibn Dīnār, 157 Majnūn, 26 Manşür Abul Ghayd Hallaj, 165 Manşūr-i-Fārsī (of Baghdād), 165 Manşür ibn Hallaj, 155, 170 Marātibi-Ilāhī (Divine Ranks);.56 Marātib-i-Koupī (worldly ranks), 56 Ma'rūf Karkbī 19, 36, 157 Maryam (Mary), 118 Maihnawi, (of Jalaluddin Rumi), 1, 2, 18, 20, 134, 149, 182 Maut-i-Abyad, 107 Maut-i-Ahmar, 107 Maut i-Akhzar, 107 Maut-i-Aswad, 107 Mecca, 129, 150, 169, 183 Mi'rāj, 119, 120. 126 Mir'atul-'Ārifin, 144, 184 Mirsad-ul-Ibād, 53, 144 f.n. Mishhāi, 127 Monists (Magi), 26 Moses, 3, 4, 5, 6, 103, 120, 121, 137, 156. 176 Mount Sina'i, 176 Mubārak 'Alī, Mullā, 155 f. n. Muhammad (the Prophet), 36, 86, 104, 1:3, 121, 122, 126, 151, 170, 171, 176, 177, 181, 182, 183, 195 Muhammad, reality of (Haqiqat-i-Muḥammadi), 51, 52, 53 Muḥammad bin Khafif, 165 Muhammad Fudali, 40

Muhammad Husayn ibn Saiyed

Näsiruddin la'fari, Saiyed, 131 f n Muhammad Makhdum bin 'Abdul Nabi Savi, 99 Muhibulla, Shaykh (of Allahabad). Mu'inuddin, Khwaja, 138 Muhiyyuddin, Shah, 99 Mujäbada, 96, 106, 161, 162 Mukāshafa, 96 Mumkin-ul-Wujud, 67, 74, 85 Muqām-i-Maḥmūd, 90, 112 Muraqaba (contemplation) 15, 96 Murid, 62 Mushahada, 96 Mu'tazilites, 10, 23, 24, 141 Mystical Message, 119 Mysticism, 148

Najmuddīn-i-Kubra, 53 Nafs-i-Ammāra, 110 Nafs-i-kul, 60, 63, 74 Nafs-i-Lawwama, 110 Nais-i-Mulhima, 110 Nafs-i-Mutmainna, 110 Nais-i-Rahmani (Divine Breath), 58, 110 Nāsir ibnul Ḥārris, 64 Nathar Auliya (Mazharuddin), 193, 194 Nazzem (disciple of Abū Ḥuzal-Allaf. 23 Neo-Platonists, 45 Nicholson, R A, 145, 167 Nimrūd. 31 Nirvana, 178 Nufhatul Uns (of Jamī), 38 Nür: 161

Oliver Lodge, Sir. 69, 118 Ormuzd and Ahriman, 19, 26 Ottoman Empire, 150

Pantheism, 9, 10
Paradise Lost, 163

Philo and Plotinus (founders of doctrine of emanation), 13

Philosophy of the Practical, 14 f.n.

Pīr-i-Kāmil, 94

Plato, 13, 34, 49, 59, 64

Plotinus (founder of New-Platonic School, 42, 43, 49, 60

Porphryry, 39

Principle of Sociology, 103

Progress and Poverty, 161 f.n.

Pythagoras, 39

Qalm-i-A'lā, 57, 63
Qāmās, 151
Qasṭalānī, Imām, 52
Qayṣarī ibn Hamdān, Shaykh, 158
Quraysh, 42
Qurb-i-Farā'yiḍ (corresponding to subjective Idealism), 16, 80, 91
Qurb-i-Nawāfil (corresponding to objective Idealism) 16, 80, 92
Quṭub, 162

Rābi'a Başrī, 18 Risāla-i-Mursad, 108 Rūḥ, 65 Rūḥ-i-A'zam, 63, 65 Rūḥ-i-Jarī, 67, 105 Rūḥ-i-Muqīm, 67, 105 Rūmī, Mulānā Jalāluddīn, 20, 63, 89, 91, 96, 108, 130, 148, 169, 174, 182, 184

Sa'd bin Jābir, 117
Sa'dī, Shaykh, 2, 6, 7, 41, 107, 133, 139, 154, 185
Safar-billāh, 94, 98, 99
Safar-fillāh, 94, 95, 98
Safar-ilallāh, 94, 95, 98
Safar-ullāh, 94
Salāt (Namāz), 122, 126, 127
Sālik (pilgrim on the path of pirits-ulity, 15, 97, 99, 102, 136, 137, 138
Salmān Fārsī, 157, 166
Sāriah ibn Rustam, 96

Sarri Sagti, 157, 158 Sawm, 134 Sayyid Ahmad Khan, Sir, 8, 106. 129, 130, 131 Schelling, 15, 47 Sayr-fillah, 78 Shah Badruddin Qutub-ul-Madar. 192 Shah Waliyulla of Delhi, 117, 119 Shuhud (Observation of self), 19, 20, 23 Sidrāt-ul-Muntahā. 126 Sifat, 21, 22, 43, 50, 59, 70, 72, 74. 76, 78, 98, 137, 146, 147, 159, 160, 172, 173 Shah Kamal, 89 Shaqiq Balkbi, 18 Sharī'at (ceremonial institution), 2, 135, 153 Shihabuddin, Shaykh (Shaykh-ul-Ishraq al-Maqtul), 19, 20, 166 Shuyunat, 50, 51, 59, 61 Sina'i, 30 Socrates, 43, 45 Spencer, Herbert, 34, 50. 103 Spirit of Islam, The, 103, 104 f. n. Sri Krishna, 1, 80, 97, 179 St. Anthony, 70 St Hugo, 163 St. John (the Divine), 105 St Paul, 96, 119, 176 Studies in Islamic Mysticism, 145 f n. Sufis, 38, 48, 60, 66, 90, 96, 97, 102, 104, 109, 110, 133, 135, 139, 150, 151, 152, 165, 167, 180 Şūfism, 46, 150, 169, 170 Suhayl ibn 'Abdulla Tasturi, 161, 162, 165 Suhrāwardī, Shaykh Shihābuddīn, 38, 151 Sulük, 94, 100, 102, 135, 136, 138, 161 Survival of Human Personality, 69 Survival of Man, 69 Syria

Tähir ibn 'Abdulla Anşārī, 52 Tanazzulāt) (descent), 43 Tauḥīd (Unity), 11 Tennyson, Alfred, 102, 112 Thales of Miletus, 39 Thaqīfa Banī Sā'ida, 90 The Isis Unveiled, 178 f. n. Theory of Emanation, 45

Uḥud (battle of), 16, 160
'Umar, 69, 116, 130, 131, 136, 157
'Umar-i-Khayyām, 166, 167
'Ummakāt-us-ṣifāt, 53
'Ummahāti-Siflī (the inferior mothers), 14, 170
'Ummul-Kitāb, (Mother of books), 13, 63, 144
''Uqba ibn 'Umar 127
'Utba, 64
''Utba, 64
''Uthmān, Ḥaḍrat, 156
'Uways-i-Qarnī, 157, 191

Varieties of Religious Expérience, 7 ne, 38, f. n., 48 f. n., 112 f. n. Wahdat, 46, 49, 50, 51, 53, 59, 73, 74, 98, 133, 180

Wahidiyyat, 46, 52, 53, 59, 65, 133, 180

Wajib-ul-Wujūd, 67, 74, 85

William Hamilton, Sir, 142

William James, 38

Wujūb (Modes), 23

Wujūd (Essence), 19, 23, 41

Wujūd-i-bahat (pure existence), 46

Xenophenes, 39

Yezdan, 26

Zackariah, 156
Zainul-'Ābi dīn, Imām, 144
Zarrāra (companion of the Prophet),
24
Zeller, 43, 44, 59
Zinda Shāh Madār (of Syria), 168
Zindīqs, 27
Zoroaster, 19, 26
Zuhūr-i-'Ilmī (manifestation in knowledge), 56